GERMANS HOPE U. S. WILL SIGN SECURITY PACT

See World Peace in Rhine Guarantee.

EUROPE'S SAFETY

Europe is gathering at Geneva to devise a treaty which will assure French security. The Tribune Foreign News Service is able to present the following diplomatic moves which seem to tend toward an acute situation:

GREAT BRITAIN puts its own safety first and urges a loose four or five power entente, including Germany. It will not sign the Geneva protocol because of opposition of the dominions.

FRANCE wants an absolute Franco-British-Belgian alliance before it enters into any compact in which Germany is concerned.

GERMANY offers a pact guaranteeing the neutrality of the Rhine, which Britain likes, but is opposed by France, largely because of the objections of her smaller allies.

POLAND, CZECHO-SLOVAKIA, and ROUMANIA vigorously assail a pact including Germany, because the Germans seek to rectify their eastern frontiers and regain some of the rich lost provinces.

BERLIN, March 7. — Germany's proposal for security treaty, which she has submitted to Great Britain and France, offers guarantees of the western frontiers for all time, Foreign Minister Stresemann told the cabinet today. Herr Stresemann suggested that the international court of arbitration fix the eastern frontier between Germany and Poland, which is now a serious stumbling block to a treaty, which will include Germany.

He said discussion of the German offer has taken the form of diplomatic conversations, and indicated that he opened the negotiations in December.

Hopes U. S. Will Sign.

The foreign minister held out the hope that the United States could be induced to sign the security treaty as well as England, France, Germany, Belgium, and Italy. He seemed to base his hope on America's interest in the success of the Dawes plan, which German politicians declare is endangered by France's attitude and England's refusal to evacuate Cologne.

Germany offered a western frontier guarantee pact about the time the Ruhr was occupied, but she refused to budge on the question of the eastern frontiers. No German politician could sign a treaty giving the Dantzig corridor to Poland forever without committing political suicide. Germany today sees in the British attitude a chance that the whole question may be reopened and the eastern frontiers redrawn.

Poland, according to messages from Warsaw and Paris, is equally insistent that there must be no deviation from the frontiers fixed by the treaty of Versailles and that none of the rich Silesian territory shall be returned to Germany.

Hopes to Satisfy Poland.

PARIS, March 7.—[By the Associated Press.]—Austen Chamberlain, British foreign secretary, and Premier Herriot, in their talks last night and today reached the determination to settle the security question "in accord with all the allies." That was the most important result of the British statesman's visit here, according to an official communique issued after this afternoon's conversation.

Asked specifically if there were any prospects of finding a scheme acceptable at the same time to Germany and Poland, Mr. Chamberlain replied there was no inherent reason which would make such a result impossible.

Mr. Chamberlain told M. Herriot, it is learned through French sources, that a five power guarantee pact, comprising Great Britain, France, Italy,

HOLD UP SCORE OF MEN IN LOOP; LOOT IS $2,000

Five armed men held up twenty men who were in the headquarters of local 402 of the steamfitters' union at 180 West Washington street last night, escaping with more than $1,000 in currency and jewelry valued at as much more.

The union offices are on the first floor of the Federation building, which adjoins the Elks club. Several members had just been initiated and a card game was in progress.

The robbers ordered all in the room to line up against a wall. After the victims had been searched the robbers fled, escaping in the Saturday night crowds.

Among the victims was Thomas J. Corcoran, business agent of the union, who lost $75, and Oliver Stingley, business agent of another local of the union.

MAY WHEAT FALL FASTER THAN BIG PRICE ADVANCE

Wheat prices have declined faster than they recently advanced. May wheat has dropped 25c a bushel in the Chicago market from the high point on Monday to the low of yesterday when sales were made at $1.77, a new low for the present down turn.

Prices advanced 4c over Friday's close in the early trade, reaching $1.85 and in the last hour broke from that figure to $1.77 inside of 30 minutes, with a quick recovery to $1.81½. The close was $1.80¾@1.81, or only ¼c lower than Friday's finish.

July wheat dropped 6⅜c from the high point of the morning to $1.59 and finished at $1.62¼@1.62½, losing ¼c for the day.

DRUG CLERK SHOT BY ROBBER IS EXPECTED TO DIE

Archie Murdue, 3718 Maple Square avenue, clerk in a drug store at Southport and Grace streets, was shot early this morning by a lone robber. At American hospital it was said that Murdue probably will die.

The clerk was alone in the drug store of Sam Losees when a man he believes to be the same who robbed him two weeks ago entered and commanded Murdue to stick up his hands.

Capt. Luke Garrick of Town Hall station questioned Murdue briefly, but he lapsed into unconsciousness before he could tell whether he resisted and precipitated the shot.

CHICAGOAN FALLS ON YACHT; DIES

Recover Reuss' Body in Southern Waters.

Henry H. Reuss, 230 East Delaware place, 61 years old and a retired capitalist, formerly of London, England, lost his life in an unusual accident late Friday while cruising on his yacht, the Miakka, in waters known as Shark river, in the Florida keys.

Word of this was received in Chicago by his servants and by Mrs. C. G. Hill, 28 Scott street, his niece, when the Miakka, with the body aboard, docked at Key West.

Mrs. Reuss was in Mount Clemens, Mich., when the news was received here, and Mrs. Hill started at once to go to her to inform her of the sad message. There are no children.

Head Strikes Bow.

Mr. Reuss slipped on Friday evening when he was attempting to board the tender of the yacht from the Miakka. His head struck the sharp bow of the smaller craft, and he fell overboard, never coming to the surface.

Those aboard the yacht thought Mr. Reuss must have been drowned, but physicians who examined the body say the blow on the head killed him.

Immediately after the accident, strenuous efforts to bring Mr. Reuss up and revive him were made, but it was soon discovered he had been caught in fishing nets spread below the surface. Fishermen were then called, and assisted in the search.

Catch Man-Eating Fish.

The waters known as Shark river are infested by the big man-eating fish. Several of these had been caught in the net and were hauled to the surface when Mr. Reuss' body was brought up.

The body was started for Chicago late last night, and it was stated it would arrive here about the same time as Mrs. Reuss returns from Mount Clemens. Mrs. Hill said Mr. Reuss was never in business in Chicago. She said he retired in London several years ago and had become a naturalized citizen of the United States.

His friends declare he was killed by his enemies for divulging to the authorities the activities of Polish spies in the Ukraine.

20 GERMS IN LOOP AIR TO ONE OUTSIDE

Report Shows Big Burden of Soot.

Chicagoans in the loop breathe air containing eight times as much dust and twenty times as much bacteria as that taken in by residents in outlying districts, according to health department reports. The air we breathe and what is in it has been the subject of exhaustive and elaborate tests by health department analysts during the last year.

Just before election a council committee undertook to study the causes of local air pollution and devise remedial measures. Since the ballots were counted, however, the committee has not held a meeting.

The health department tests completed last Thursday showed surprisingly small variation in the condition of air in the loop district and that of outlying business or residential areas. Twice as much carbon monoxide—poisonous fumes from automobile exhaust pipes—was found, however, in the loop air as was detected in samples taken in other sections of the city.

Gas Not "Dangerous."

Even the maximum quantity of the gas, however, .40 parts in 10,000 parts of air, found at Jackson and Michigan boulevards in a rush hour period, according to health department experts, "was a great deal less than has ever been established as dangerous by any authorities on public health."

At State and Madison streets, the tests disclosed there are .36 parts of carbon monoxide to 10,000 parts of air. Further away from the loop and traffic congestion, at 22d and Halsted streets and at Chicago and Milwaukee avenues, the volume of carbon monoxide was found to be .20 and .14 parts, respectively.

The less dangerous carbon dioxide was found in about normal quantities throughout the city, increasing slightly as the tests approached the downtown business districts until the maximum of 4.1 parts per 10,000 parts of air was found at State and Madison streets. A similar quantity, however, was also found at Chicago and Milwaukee avenues.

Tests Different Corners.

Thursday's tests revealed the intersection of Jackson and Michigan boulevards as the dustiest of four busy corners observed during the day. At that point, the tests disclosed 9,900 particles of dust, in a cubic foot of air. Samples taken at Chicago and Milwaukee avenues showed 9,800 particles of dust in a cubic foot of air. State and Madison streets, known as the busiest corner, is not the dustiest—the records showing only 8,700 particles to the cubic foot of air.

Tests made last August showed practically the same conditions existing as were noted on Thursday. At that time, fifteen stations for analysis of the air were established throughout the city, grouped to include the loop district, an "inner belt" about four miles out and an "outer belt" about eight miles from the downtown business section.

The stations were located at least one block from heavily traveled streets, surface car line routes railroads and other activities that might influence air conditions directly. At the same time, similar tests were conducted in a number of suburban towns.

Lowest Average in Inner Belt.

These tests, besides indicating that the average dust count in the city is eight times higher than the average found in the country and that the average bacteria count is twenty times higher than that found in the country, showed that the lowest average dust count in the city is found in the so-called "inner belt," about four miles from the loop, which is credited with the highest dust average.

It was also discovered that the "outer belt," eight miles from the downtown district, showed the lowest average bacteria count and that the count increased rapidly until the maximum for the city was reached in the loop.

Model Maid Admits $80,000 Jewelry Theft

Ends Mystery of Looting of Vehon Home

The model maid who stole $80,000 in jewelry from Mrs. Morris Vehon of 1221 Astor street while Mrs. Vehon was giving a tea at her home was arrested yesterday in New York and confessed, according to the police. The robbery occurred Jan. 22.

MRS. MORRIS VEHON.

Much of the stolen property was recovered.

A maid at Mrs. Vehon's home said last night she believed her employer had gone to New York to identify her jewels.

Sweetheart Also Seized.

The woman arrested is Mrs. Anton Wernitzer. She implicated her sweetheart, Herman Lieberwirth, who was interned as an alien enemy during the war, and he also was arrested, charged with grand larceny.

The capture of Mrs. Wernitzer followed her attempt to get an appraisal of some of the stolen jewels from experts in New York. The articles were identified by the appraiser as those stolen.

Lieberwirth and Mrs. Wernitzer were living in a comfortable apartment in Brooklyn. Lieberwirth had with him $2,200 in cash, and police concluded he and Mrs. Wernitzer were prepared to flee on a moment's notice.

Mrs. Wernitzer, according to the police, insisted she never had stolen until she went to work for the Vehons. She said she had invested her money in German war bonds shortly after Germany declared war and had consequently lost all her money. Her first husband left her, she said.

Forgets Former Victims.

She admitted stealing from a family in Glencoe also, but said she had forgotten the name of her employer there. Glencoe police last night thought she was the maid who stole jewels valued at $4,000 last June from the home of Henry E. Hedberg at 411 Lakeside terrace. A description of the missing Hedberg maid, who used the name of Louise Witt and was German, has been sent to New York, it was stated.

Mrs. Wernitzer also confessed robbing Mrs. Lucille Schamberg of New York, by whom she was employed, of $23,000 in jewels, furs, and silks.

Among the articles stolen from Mrs. Vehon were a string of pearls valued at $38,000, a diamond ring worth $8,000, a bracelet valued at $9,000, and an $1,800 watch.

HOLD INVESTOR WHO USED GUN TO EVEN LOSSES

When Stephen E. Day, 5654 Ellis avenue, lost on investments he made through an alleged bucketshop, he decided he had been robbed and that it was a case to apply the rule of an eye for an eye.

So he took his revolvers and went to the "Estimators' club" and held up Roy Shumway, the cashier, taking from him $1,007, which he promised to return if he won in another investment.

But he was arrested and when he was arraigned yesterday before Judge Howard Hayes in the South Clark street court, he told his story.

"I told this man," said Day, pointing to Shumway, "that I would invest the money. I told him if I won I would pay him back; if I lost we would be even. I lost as usual."

Judge Hayes held him to the grand jury in $10,000 bonds and he was locked up in the county jail.

G. O. P. DIVIDED ON PUNISHMENT OF INSURGENTS

Will Fix Their Fate Tomorrow.

Washington, D. C., March 7.—[Special.]—Disciplining of La Follette Republicans in making up committee slates precipitated a controversy in the senate today.

Senator Borah [Rep., Idaho], chairman of the committee on foreign relations, protested against the action proposed and warned Republican leaders that they are making a mistake that will be regretted in the campaign of 1926.

Senator Norris [Rep., Neb.] objected to immediate consideration of committee slates and action upon them went over until Monday, when an airing of party differences is in prospect.

Regular Slates Are Ready.

Complete committee slates of both Republicans and Democrats were ready for approval.

The four Republican senators who supported the La Follette presidential ticket, Senators La Follette [Wis.], Brookhart [Iowa], Ladd and Frazier [N. D.], were deprived of all seniority rights in the committee assignments as approved by the Republican conference. They were allowed to retain membership of the committees on which they have hitherto been assigned but as extra members of the committees, other senators being substituted for them on the Republican list. They were deprived of chairmanships to which they would have otherwise been entitled under the seniority rule.

Borah Defends the Rebels.

Senator Borah took the floor after Senator Watson [Rep., Ind.], chairman of the Republican committee on commitees, had presented a resolution to suspend the rules and permit the approval of all committee assignments, including chairmanships, in a single list.

"I think it much better for the country and much better for the party and much better for the senate that as these men indicated their desire to be assigned as Republicans they should be assigned as Republicans," said Senator Borah. "They should be given their positions as Republicans. In my opinion it is not only unfair to the senators themselves, but it is signally unjust in my opinion to the constituencies they represent.

He Calls Them Republicans.

"These senators represent Republican states, Republican constituents. They were elected to this body by Republicans. They could not be here unless that were true. I think it is a good idea in the hour of victory, when we are enjoying the fruits of success, perchance to look ahead and to practice some degree of charity and tolerance with reference to these matters.

"I would not know where to establish the line of loyalty or party devotion under conditions as they have prevailed in this country for the last ten or fifteen years. I do not know what the test is, and I very much fear that I, unless I do know what the test is, might get outside of the line myself. The fact is that about 90 per cent of the present Republican voters are the sons and daughters of renegades if that test, which is applied here, is the test which should have been applied during the last thirty-five or fifty years.

Sees No Profit in Punishing.

"In my judgment, my colleagues will look back upon this action as a mistake. I think that in 1926 every Republican speaker who goes into the states of those senators and into a number of adjacent states will spend most of their time explaining how this mistake happened to be made. I do not see where we gain anything by it except to engender a feeling that ought not to exist at the beginning of an administration.

"I venture to say that during the next two years the votes of these senators will stand the test of Republicanism quite as well as the votes of a number of others. There is a wide difference of opinion among Republicans. If we are wise we will recognize the fact that these conditions do exist."

Senator Watson defended the action of the committee on committees.

"A political party in reality is organized for one election," said Senator Watson. "In the campaign a pledge is made to carry into effect the principles of a party. I know that in 1924 these particular individuals left the Republican party."

Brookhart Protests Loyalty.

Senator Brookhart interrupted Senator Watson to deny that he had left the Republican party.

"I challenge that statement," said Senator Brookhart. "I am a better Republican today than the gentleman from Indiana. I stand for the principles of Abraham Lincoln and Theodore Roosevelt."

Senator Watson retorted that the Iowa senator had failed to stand for principles declared for by the Republican party in the last campaign.

"We know these gentlemen do not recognize the Republican party in its present principles as announced in its last platform," said Senator Watson. "We know they were for another candidate for president, that they held another convention and adopted another platform. If they had their way Calvin Coolidge would not be the President of the United States.

La Follette Would Be In.

"If they had won Robert Marion La Follette would be President and we would have been outside the victorious party.

"I do not know what the senators will do in 1926. They may realign themselves with the Republican party as then constituted. But, having tried to overturn the candidate of the Republican party in 1924, I deny their right to come here and claim recognition as Republicans."

Senator Norris, in objecting to action today, said that he understood that the seniority rule had been ignored in the case of some senators besides the La Follette group, and that he wanted an opportunity to examine the committee list more carefully.

The effect of the action of the Republican committee on committees in the case of Senator La Follette is to deprive him of the chairmanship of the committee on manufactures, which he has held for the last few years, and to ignore his right by seniority to the chairmanship of the committee on interstate and foreign commerce. He also loses his rank as the second Republican on the finance committee. He retains places, however, on all three committees and also on the committee on Indian affairs.

McKinley Assigned to Post.

Senator McKinley [Rep., Ill.] is given the chairmanship of the committee on manufactures, and Senator Watson, the chairmanship of the committee on interstate commerce.

Senator Ladd is succeeded as chairman of the committee on public lands by Senator Stanfield [Rep., Ore.], but retains places on the committees on agriculture, commerce, and territories.

Senator Brookhart has had no chairmanship but retains places without seniority rights on committees on claims, education and labor, interoceanic canals, manufactures and military affairs.

Senator Frazier retains places without seniority rights on the committees on banking and currency, mines and mining, pensions, and postoffices and post roads.

Other Chairmanships.

Few changes are made in the chairmanships of principal committees. Senator Borah will continue to head the committee on foreign relations; Senator Cummins [Rep., Ia.], judiciary; Senator Smoot [Rep., Utah], finance; Senator Warren [Rep., Wyo.], appropriations; Senator Norris, agriculture; Senator McLean [Rep., Conn.], banking and currency; Senator Jones [Rep., Wash.], commerce; Senator Johnson [Rep., Cal.], immigration; Senator Wadsworth [Rep., N. Y.], military affairs; Senator Hale [Rep., Me.], naval affairs; and Senator Curtis [Rep., Kas.], rules.

New chairmen of committees include Senator Moses [Rep., N. H.], post offices and post roads; Senator Capper [Rep., Kas.], District of Columbia; Senator Couzens [Rep., Mich.], civil service; Senator Means [Rep., Colo.], claims; Senator Norbeck [Rep., S. D.], pensions; and Senator Pepper [Rep., Pa.], printing.

ILLINOIS SOLONS GET BIG JOBS ON SENATE BODIES

Washington, D. C., March 7.—[Special.]—Senator McKinley [Rep., Ill.] obtains a position of increased influence in the senate under the new committee assignments as made public today by the Republican committee on committees. Senator Deneen [Rep., Ill.] fares well for a new senator.

McKinley's chief advance in power comes through his transfer from the committee on agriculture to the committee on finance, which handles tax and tariff legislation. He takes the place of the late Senator McCormick.

Senator McKinley also becomes chairman of the committee on manufactures, succeeding Senator La Follette [Rep., Wis.], who was removed.

McKinley also retains a place on the powerful committee on appropriations and is made a member for the first time of the committees on District of Columbia affairs and on printing.

Senator Deneen is assigned to the committee on judiciary and to the committee on agriculture, regarded as desirable assignments. He also is placed on the committee on privileges and elections and the committee on claims.

Neither McKinley nor Deneen was given the place on the committee on foreign relations held by the late Senator McCormick, that assignment going to Senator Capper [Rep., Kas.].

TRACTION PLAN PROVIDES HUGE "L" INCREASES

Figures Show Benefits to Car Riders.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

The elevated roads now serve between 19 and 20 per cent of the car riders. Under the railway ordinance on which the people will vote April 7 provision has been made to serve more than 61 per cent of the territory within Chicago and a roughly estimated 77 per cent of the present population. To accomplish these results a maximum walk of four blocks for some riders will be necessary.

That gives a vivid impression of the mark at which the railway ordinance aims to give rapid transit facilities to the people of Chicago. In a word, it promises more than three and a half times as much rapid transit as the public now has. Then when it is remembered that there will be free transfers between the surface and the rapid transit lines, it is expected that the rapid transit lines will be of greater utility than indicated.

Four Blocks Maximum Walk.

A map published in another column shows the territory which the rapid transit lines when constructed are designed to serve. This map shows a maximum walk of four average city blocks on each branch of each line. Graphs have been prepared showing that in certain sections in Chicago a car rider can walk two and three-quarters miles to an elevated and on it get downtown in less time than if he took the surface lines for the entire journey.

Under the railway ordinance, it has been calculated that at the end of the first period of construction the rapid transit lines would serve 103.5 square miles; and at the end of the second period of construction 21.9 square miles more. That is a total of 125.4 square miles. Of the total area of the city, including Lake Calumet, Wolf lake, the river, parks, and thinly populated areas, that 125.4 square miles is 61.1 per cent.

Add Outside Zone.

Add to the city's area the zone of influence of the rapid transit lines outside of the city and the aggregate area involved is 219.2 square miles. The railway ordinance provides facilities for 140.1 square miles of the aggregate. That is 64 per cent. Within this 64 per cent of the territory it is estimated that 77 per cent of the population live.

The question to be submitted to the people April 7 is whether the public desires those facilities upon the plan submitted without a dollar increase in taxes. The aldermen believed the program so promising and beneficial that they approved of it by a vote of 40 to 5. And not one of the five at the last council meeting Friday attempted to block the referendum by the legitimate use of their power when the opportunity was presented to them publicly.

Accordingly the public will vote on the ordinance April 7 unless the Thompson-Small-Hearst influence succeeds in building an effective blockade. There have been many rumors of their intentions, but it is difficult to believe they really will attempt to prevent a vote.

The Construction Plans.

A check of the complete and amended ordinance shows the lines in the map presented. These may be summarized in miles of track, number of cars and cash as follows for each of the two periods of construction:

| Lines. | Miles. | Cars. | Cost. |
|---|---|---|---|
| FIRST PERIOD OF TEN YEARS. | | | |
| Elevated | 156 | 2,760 | $158,570,000 |
| Subways | 19 | 240 | 56,511,000 |
| Totals | 175 | 3,000 | $215,081,000 |
| SECOND PERIOD OF CONSTRUCTION. | | | |
| Elevated | 62 | 780 | $ 51,120,000 |
| Subways | 49 | 330 | 114,390,000 |
| Totals | 111 | 1,110 | $165,510,000 |
| Grand totals | 286 | 4,110 | 380,591,000 |

An Interesting Comparison.

To appreciate the full meaning of these projected facilities, a comparison with the present elevated system is illuminating. The present system has about 170 miles of trackage as compared with 286 which the ordinance provides shall be added. The existing elevated has approximately 1,700 cars to which the ordinance contemplates adding 4,110. The price to be paid for the present elevated system, within and without the city, is $85,000,000. To this the ordinance provides additions costing an estimated $380,591,000. The price to be paid for the elevated is no part of this $380,591,000. That sum is the estimated cost of more cars and tracks either on elevated structure or in subways.

HUGE INCREASES IN RAPID TRANSIT AREAS PROPOSED IN ORDINANCE

The map shows the territory which the proposed rapid transit lines, together with present lines, are designed to serve. It indicates a maximum walk of four average city blocks on each branch of each line. The elevated lines now serve between 19 and 20 per cent of the car riders. Under the railway ordinance, on which a vote will be taken on April 7, provision has been made to serve more than 61 per cent of the territory within Chicago and an estimated 77 per cent of the present population.

YOUNG MISS PAULINA REACHES WASHINGTON; MET BY PROUD PAPA

Washington, D. C., March 7.—[Special.]—Miss Paulina Longworth, infant daughter of Representative and Mrs. Longworth, paid her first visit to Washington today. She came from Chicago, accompanied by her mother. Anxiously awaiting them at the station was Mr. Longworth. Mrs. Longworth and the baby appeared to be in the best of health, and after a quick ride were safe in the Longworth home at 1736 M street.

"Everything is entirely normal," said Speaker-to-Be Longworth in reply to a question as to the health of his little family.

Mr. Longworth insists Paulina resembles her mother, and this opinion is shared by Mrs. Longworth.

"Of course," said Mr. Longworth, "I don't know very much about such matters, and it is a bit hard to form an opinion at such an early stage. But as far as can be seen at present, Paulina resembles Mrs. Longworth."

The Longworths will tarry in Washington a while before going to their home in Cincinnati, where they expect to spend most of the congressional recess.

John W. Worthington is near death in a Los Angeles, Cal., hospital, it was reported there yesterday. A federal attorney was told that it is impossible to move Worthington to Atlanta to serve two years for using the mails to defraud. Judge Adam C. Cliffe yesterday stayed execution of the sentence until April 7. It is said Worthington may die at any hour.

DEVER SEEKING WAY TO HASTEN SUBWAY BUILDING

Wants City Granted Broader Powers.

Acting Corporation Counsel Leon Hornstein, with the approval of Mayor Dever, will ask the state legislature to permit Chicago to construct necessary public improvements first and then spend time and lawyers' fees in deciding on the spread of the special assessment later.

At present there is an enormous amount of red tape to be unwound before a public improvement can be started.

Mayor Dever's plan is to get authority to start the construction. Then let the lawyers fight out the question of special assessments while the real work is being done.

Favors Bay State Idea.

Technically the city desires to amend the special assessment law by the adoption of the Massachusetts idea. In that state work on an improvement may be started and completed from available funds.

Within six months thereafter the city may spread a special assessment over property specially benefited by the improvement and make collections from the benefited property to replace the funds expended on the improvement.

Mayor Dever holds that this new power, if granted by the legislature, will permit the city to begin the construction of subways as soon as plans can be made, bids obtained and contracts awarded; and part of the cost of the subways later may be assessed against private property benefited. The authorization could be used in any other major improvement.

Big Saving of Time.

That would have saved two years in the construction of the Michigan boulevard link and more than a year in the Roosevelt road improvement.

No one ventured to predict yesterday what will be the attitude of Gov. Small and his chief adviser on the mayor's proposed law.

Mr. Dever replied yesterday to the rumor, frequently repeated, that the Illinois Commerce commission will investigate the legality of the transit plan, at the suggestion of Gov. Small.

"The ordinance is a good ordinance that will get the public more and better transit facilities," the mayor said. "It does not violate any law. If at any time the state law requires us to consult the state commerce commission, we will do so. Why all the fuss?"

MABEL WILLEBRANDT, BOOTLEGGERS' TERROR, AVIATES TO BOSTON

Boston, Mass., March 7.—Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, assistant attorney general of the United States, landed at the East Boston air port at dusk tonight after a flight from Washington which had threatened to end disastrously when the government airplane in which she was a passenger ran out of oil just before it completed the 1,000 mile journey.

MABEL W. WILLEBRANDT.

By deft maneuvering, her pilot, W. L. Smith, one of the most expert in the air mail service, brought the craft to earth in safety, but he confessed that he had been extremely worried.

Mrs. Willebrandt was clad in the regulation one piece outfit used by government aviators. Beneath she wore knickers, gray golf stockings, black pumps, and a black knitted jacket.

She said the trip had been delightful and that she had enjoyed it immensely.

FASCIST DEPUTY WOULD MUZZLE CORRESPONDENTS

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

ROME, March 7.—The Fascist deputy Silvio, author of a bill legalizing the muzzling of the press, now proposes that foreign representatives entering Italy shall first pass a test as to whether they are persona grata with the government, just as ambassadors receive word from the foreign offices whether they will be received.

"We all know about accredited diplomats and nothing about newspaper men," it was stated. "It is obvious that we cannot permit correspondents to do as they like, without exercising a steady, preventive control of foreign correspondents' work. The expelling of correspondents after they have entered the country would do untold harm, amounting to locking the door after the cattle had run away."

The new bill provides that foreign correspondents be liable to the same law as local editors, while numerous provisions were also added. The measure will be debated in parliament on Monday.

WHITE HOUSE ECONOMY PRIZE AWARDED TO SOCIAL SECRETARY

Washington, D. C., March 7.—[Special.]—White House entertaining will stand the brunt of the President's economy program if the plan suggested by William E. Rockwell, head social clerk of the White House, which won the prize for the best suggestion to cut down the expenses of running the executive mansion and offices, is adopted.

The expense of handling the invitations for the various social functions held during the year at the White House and the management of the functions themselves can be considerably reduced without injuring their success, according to Mr. Rockwell's proposition.

The details of the plan have not been revealed by N. P. Webster, disbursing officer of the White House, but he said he already had paid Rockwell the $10 prize.

NEW YORK MAN TO BE APPOINTED ENVOY TO BERLIN

Hilles and Minister to China Mentioned.

Washington, D. C., March 7.—[Special.]—President Coolidge has selected a New York man for the ambassadorship to Germany, it was learned at the White House today.

CHARLES D. HILLES.

Jacob Gould Schurman, former president of Cornell university and now minister to China, together with Charles D. Hilles, Republican national committeeman from New York, are the men most prominently mentioned for the position, with the odds favoring the first mentioned.

Rumors Name Both.

First indication that the President had made up his mind came this morning when White House reports indicated that Mr. Hilles virtually had been decided upon. Later officials close to the President denied that Mr. Hilles had been selected, but refused to comment on the reported selection of Minister Schurman.

Mr. Hilles, aside from his work for the Republican party, has been associated with business firms of a national and international character. One of the strongest points argued in Mr. Hilles' favor was the fact that President Coolidge on more than one occasion has indicaed strongly that he wished to select a business man for the post at Berlin.

Known as Educator.

Minister Schurman has not only had a successful career as an educator, but has enjoyed a wide experience in government work. He was president of the first Philippine commission in 1899 and minister to Greece and Montenegro in 1912 and 1913. He is also the author of several books, many of them dealing with the Philippines.

Glasses
—by the Grace of Cho Tso

The Chinese have been making spectacles for several thousand years—in the same way.

They grind them out of crystal with an iron disk and sand.

And why not? Does not Cho Tso, the great god of all spectacles, strew sand in the sacred streams and scatter crystals upon the sacred mountains, for that sole purpose?

When a Chinese optician starts out to make a lens, nobody knows what the lens will turn out to be—least of all the maker.

And no one can ever be sure that there will be another one like it. Now (with only a fragment of a broken lens to go by) Almer Coe opticians can reproduce the lens with definite precision.

When you buy Chinese spectacles you have to fit your eyes to the lenses, you take what there is, or you go without. And why not?—you are in the hands of Cho Tso, that great Chinese god of glasses who provides both the crystal and the sand to grind it.

SENATE REBELS JOIN DEMS. IN WAR ON WARREN

Friend of Corporations Is Title in Dispute.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

Washington, D. C., March 7.—[Special.]—"Confirm this nomination, senators, and you might as well hang out a sign announcing that for the period of the life of this administration the operation of the Sherman anti-trust act is suspended and extend an invitation to every plundering corporation in the United States to continue its extortion of the American people."

CHARLES B. WARREN.

Thus booms the opening gun in the senate fight against the confirmation of Charles Beecher Warren of Michigan—onetime yeoman legalist for the Havemeyer sugar interests—as attorney general of the United States.

First Rattle of Snipers.

Just as the westering sun was turning the gray dome of the capitol to gold this evening and the tired thoughts of tired senators yenned for the day of rest, came, deep and ugly, the growl of the gun.

Walsh of Montana was the gunner.

He was firing in open meeting, and the fact that the new senate, nominally Republican by a majority of fourteen, permitted him to do so was the startling feature of the occasion.

Confirmation of a President's appointees is supposed to be made in executive session and is almost invariably so made when the President's political party has an absolutely dependable majority in the senate.

Slips Out of Cal's Grip.

This afternoon that majority slipped from under Mr. Coolidge, and even that fine old crusted Connecticut conservative, George Payne McLean, voted for the Democrat Reed's resolution to "proceed in open executive session," as the phrase is, to consideration of the Warren appointment.

The vote is interesting to analyze. It stood 46 to 39.

All the Democrats, except Lee Overman of North Carolina, voted for open session, naturally, if only for the reason that they dearly love to see the opposition do its laundry work in public. But voting with them and piling up a majority of seven for the Reed resolution to wash in the open were such Republicans as Borah, Capper, Couzens, Howell, Hiram Johnson, McMaster, and McNary, who are valid Republicans, although Republicans with fingers crossed upon occasion.

Rebels Do Their Stuff.

Voting with them were, of course, the insurgent Republicans, Brookhart, Frazier, and Ladd, and the constitutionally rebellious but not banned Republican, George Norris of Nebraska, known as "Grumbling George."

Thus does it come to pass that a senate nominally Republican by a majority of fourteen can act as the administration would prefer it should not.

Today's acute phase of the battle began at 2 o'clock. It lasted until nearly 5.

Vice President Dawes glided away from it, calling Senator Moses [Rep., N. H.], president pro tempore, to the chair. Soon Moses' light went out and he relinquished the gavel to Fess [Rep., Ohio].

He's Got Lots of Statistics.

Walsh [Dem., Mont.] began the fight against confirmation, the floor around his desk piled with documents, bound piles of newspapers, and volumes dealing with the history of the sugar trust. He read yards of testimony taken at congressional investigations of the trust, and yards more from suits, decrees, and injunctions against the trust. And into the long, wide fabric he incessantly wove the name of Charles Beecher Warren, saying:

"Confirmation of Mr. Warren's appointment as attorney general of the United States ought to be opposed not only because he is not eminent in the law, but chiefly because he was the legal representative of the sugar trust in his state—one of the most offensive and predatory trusts with which the American people have, unfortunately, been familiar in the last generation."

After reading copiously from official documents which described in detail such sweet machinations as the celebrated case of the tampering with weighing scales, for which restitution of millions of dollars was enforced by the government; as unfair competition; as option of forced selling out to the trust by competitors or their ruin; as increases of stock from $75,000,000 to $90,000,000 in a single year, in order to raise funds to buy up competitors, Senator Walsh said:

"I want senators to refresh their memory of these infamies because they are an essential background of the matter before us."

Some, the senator granted, might insist that Mr. Warren had been ignorant of the infamies, "but," he shouted, "if Mr. Warren did not know what was going on, he has not sagacity enough to the attorney general."

His Forecast Is Gloomy.

Then the senator peered into the future, declaring that Mr. Warren's old and opulent flame, the Michigan Sugar company, was now "charged by the federal trade board with being engaged in a conspiracy to restrain trade," and that Mr. Warren will be "called on to represent the United States in proceedings contemplated against the company."

He further averred that the American Sugar Refining company lately submitted petitions which former Attorney General Stone—now Mr. Justice Stone—refused to entertain, but which will come before Mr. Warren if he is confirmed, because the company says that it withdraws its petitions "for the present," which means, the senator implied, "only" for the present.

The debate will be resumed Monday, and Reed of Missouri is r'aring to go.

Brig. Gen. Mitchell, deposed assistant chief of the army air service (with cane), examines aerial bombs used during the bombing tests held at Fortress Monroe. # DR. LEIGHTON PARKS MAY QUIT PULPIT OF ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S

New York, March 7.—The New York Evening Post says today that the Rev. Dr. Leighton Parks, for more than twenty years rector of St. Bartholomew's church and in recent years a standard bearer for modernists in the Episcopal diocese, is expected to resign soon.

DR. LEIGHTON PARKS.

Dr. Parks is on a vacation in the south, and such of the vestrymen of St. Bartholomew's as are in the city now were reluctant to discuss the rumor today, but did not deny it, the Post says.

Dr. Parks has had a long and spectacular career in Boston and New York. An outspoken man of advanced views, his work has been marked by frequent storms. In December, 1923, he divested himself of his canonicals to deliver a scorching sermon in defense of a Texas clergyman arraigned for trial on a charge of heresy.

He is a man of independent means, 72 years old, and said to be failing in health. It is expected he will retire into private life.

ARMY SILENT AS MITCHELL GRINS OVER AIR TESTS

First Alibi Is That Defense Is Old.

Washington, D. C., March 7.—[Special.]—War department officials, who have been vigorously opposing the views of Brig. Gen. William Mitchell, assistant chief of air service, regarding the vulnerability of land and sea forces to attack from the air, today remained silent on the demonstration yesterday of the seeming inability of anti-aircraft gunners to block aerial attack, in the test at Fortress Monroe.

Secretary Weeks declined to give his views until he has seen the report of the tests, which will be made soon, it is understood, though the precise date was not stated.

They Say It's One Sided.

Others in the war department held with the gunners whose ill luck yesterday so strikingly favored Mitchell, that the test was a one sided affair to the extent that archaic anti-aircraft material was the only thing available, and that, given modern equipment, the airplanes would not have escaped so readily.

It was pointed out that the ammunition was war-made anti-aircraft shrapnel in place of the modern high explosive which yesterday would have been too dangerous to use in so restricted a community, and which normally would be used in combat. On this point, it was recalled that Secretary Weeks has asked for improved equipment, and it is known that the navy is installing improved anti-aircraft defense, both as to the type of guns used and as to the varieties of defensive fire for use against different forms of attack.

New Guns Called Adequate.

The navy defenses include guns of larger caliber than any used by the army and are especially adapted to their purpose. They have an effective area four times that of the present 3 inch anti-aircraft guns and the navy has great confidence in their ability. As yet not all capital ships in the American navy are so equipped, it is admitted, but are being armed thus as rapidly as facilities permit.

In the meantime the poor showing of the army batteries yesterday had obviously cut the ground from under Mitchell's opponents for the moment today, and as a parting shot from Mitchell could not have been more effective.

REVEAL WEDDING OF RICH YOUTH AND DIVORCEE

Secretly Married in Waukegan.

The secret marriage of a New York society boy butterfly, intimate of the Prince of Wales, to a wealthy widow much his senior and formerly of Chicago, was revealed yesterday. Despite strenuous efforts by relatives in New York, Chicago, and California to deny it, records show the wedding took place in Waukegan on Oct. 1.

The husband is Albert Gould Jennings Jr., son of an old and socially prominent Gotham family. He is 23 years old. No one here would tell the age of his wife, who was Mrs. Helen B. Rueping, but it is understood that she went to New York twelve years ago after divorcing her husband, said to have been a wealthy leather finder here.

Now Living Apart.

In New York Jennings, recently out of the aviation service, is living in one home, with his Filipino butler and servants for company, and his bride lives in her $250,000 mansion in the upper Sixties. This home is for sale.

The young husband last night admitted to newspaper men in New York that he is married, while his father, his father's first wife in Pasadena, Cal., a college chum in Bridgeport, Conn., and a sister of the bride, Mrs. Lewis Beck, 4209 Sheridan road, Chicago, were denying the reports.

Mrs. Beck and a man known as J. E. Eidson, are listed as witnesses to the ceremony, performed by John D. Doyle, a police magistrate, in Waukegan.

Plan European Trip.

Jennings last night refused to discuss the efforts to keep the marriage secret. It was reported that he and his wife are planning to go to Europe soon and have a religious ceremony held.

The story of the romance began with their meeting in a Broadway dinner club a year ago.

He was seen less and less in the conventional society of his family's friends and more in the company of Mrs. Reuping.

When Clarence H. Mackay gave a stately dinner for the prince of Wales on his visit to Long island last year Jennings' name was on the select list of those invited and in the course of the evening became quite chummy with the royal guest.

They were on their way to town when they were offered a ride by three men in a Chevrolet touring car.

They said they had had nothing to eat from Thursday evening until last night.

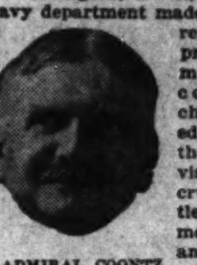
Washington, D. C., March 7.—The navy department made public today a revised schedule, prepared by Admiral Coontz, commander-in-chief of the United States fleet, of the ports to be visited during the cruise of the battle fleet this summer to Australia and New Zealand.



ADMIRAL COONTZ.

Under the new schedule the following ships will visit Melbourne July 20 to Aug. 3 and Wellington from Aug. 8 to Aug. 22:

Fleet flagship Seattle, battleship division 3, including the Pennsylvania, Oklahoma, and Nevada; light cruiser division of four cruisers to be designated later; mine division 2, composed of the Ludlow and Burns; destroyer squadrons of the battle fleet, divisions 11 and 12 with the flagship Omaha, the tenders Melville and Altair, and twenty-six first line destroyers.

These Will Visit Sydney.

Battleship divisions 4 and 5, including the New Mexico, Mississippi, West Virginia, Colorado, Maryland, Tennessee, will be at Sydney from July 18 to Aug. 3, and at Auckland from Aug. 7 to 24, while the hospital ship Relief will be at Sydney July 18 to Aug. 3, and at Wellington from Aug. 8 to 12.

The repair ship Medusa will call at both Melbourne and Auckland during the time the ships are there, and the fleet fuel and store ships, the Arctic, Bridge, Kanawha, Neches, Cuyama, Ramapo and Sapelo, will follow a schedule to serve the combat ships during their stay in Australian waters.

Coontz Revises Schedule.

The original schedule for the visits was prepared after the Australian commissioner here had made known to the navy department the desire of the people of Melbourne that the most modern ships in the battle fleet, the superdreadnaughts West Virginia, Colorado and Maryland, visit that port. The revised schedule returned by Admiral Coontz shows that he found it impossible to arrange for the visit of these ships to Melbourne, presumably because of their great draft.

SEARCH HERE FOR SICK MAN.

Mrs. T. J. Hanlon of Indianapolis has requested the aid of Chicago police in searching for her nephew, Elmer Heeney, who is reported to be critically ill here.

JOHN D. JR. GIVES TUSKEGEE, NEGRO SCHOOL, MILLION

Third Gift of Like Sum Received by College.

New York, March 7.—[Special.]—John D. Rockefeller Jr. has given $1,000,000 to Tuskegee institute, it was learned today.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER JR.

Such a report has been current for several days, but efforts to confirm it had been unsuccessful.

Today, however, a spokesman for the millionaire admitted the gift had been made. He explained that Mr. Rockefeller never announced his gifts and any official confirmation would have to come from the southern institution for Negroes.

Efforts to reach officials of the institute, to learn to what use the money would be put, failed.

The gift is the third of $1,000,000 to Tuskegee since 1910.

In that year A. T. Dotger of South Orange left the residue of his estate to the college. This was estimated at over $1,000,000.

In 1922 Albert M. Post Mitchell willed $1,000,000 to Tuskegee.

The institute, at Tuskegee, Ala., was founded in 1881 through efforts of the late Booker T. Washington, who persuaded the state of Alabama to grant $2,000 a year for maintenance of a college for Negroes. The town has a population of 2,500, most of whom are students.

DU PAGE COUNTY CHIEFS SEEK TWO SUPER HIGHWAYS

Bond Issue of $2,150,000 Up to Voters.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

Chicago's great coöperative highway plan for northern Illinois took another long step forward yesterday when Du Page county supervisors approved plans for a $2,150,000 bond issue to build two superhighways for passenger car traffic between Chicago and Elgin and Chicago and Aurora.

If voters sanction the big road improvement proposal on April 7, the county will build a boulevard with a 196 foot right of way west across the southern end of its territory and another 196 foot road across the northern end of the county, leading to Elgin. Plans call for the elevating of all intersections on these roads and the restricting of the wide pavements to fast passenger car traffic. It is believed that the new arteries will closely follow plans for "supertrunk lines" developed by the Wayne county, Michigan, commissioners to radiate from Detroit and to carry all express motor travel of the state.

Appoint New Committee.

According to reports from Wheaton, the commissioners appointed a new road committee to meet with highway authorities of Cook and Kane counties and link up their crack boulevards with the joint terminal highway scheme of the Chicago territory. Federal and Illinois authorities will also be asked to complete the boulevards and help finance the plan. Supervisor N. W. Lies is chairman of the coöperative committee. He announced last night that all mayors of towns in northern Illinois counties, representatives of motor clubs and civic organizations will be invited to attend a massmeeting in Wheaton on March 21 to complete the new program.

Meets with Approval.

This step by Du Page county met with instant approval yesterday by county and federal highway chiefs in Chicago. They consider it a direct pledge of coöperation with the joint highway program decided on last December by the United States bureau of public roads, the Illinois state highway department, the Cook county highway department, and the Chicago plan commission.

When all of the counties in the Chicago territory approve of the coöperative plans, it is hoped that wide, scientifically constructed pavements will lead from the heart of the Chicago terminal to every traffic center within a radius of 200 miles of the city.

FIGHT NEW TAX

The Citizens' Tax Reduction association, organized to fight the proposed gasoline tax, believes that Gov. Small and his state highway officials are smoke-screening their true attitude on the question by trying to create the impression that the gas tax plan has been abandoned. The new association plans to open headquarters at Springfield and keep the opposition campaign alive.

Formed originally to fight the gas tax, the association plans to broaden its scope to oppose all forms of tax increase, according to Justus Chancellor, president. Headquarters are located at 1014 South Michigan boulevard. Members include the Illinois Automobile association and affiliated motor clubs in Chicago and downstate, the Illinois Manufacturers' association, American Oil Men's association, Chicago Master Cleaners and Dyers' association, Chicago Laundry Owners' association, and individuals, Mr. Chancellor said.

With him on the executive committee are E. E. Grant, H. G. James, George Dixon, Si Mayer, E. E. Smith, Charles Jessup, W. T. Gridley, F. E. Ertsman and Scott Mathews.

Where Four Men Were Injured

Victims Were at Lunch

Four persons were injured yesterday, one probably fatally, when a freight train backed over a safety bumper in the yards of the Sinclair Oil company's refinery at 4345 South Western avenue. The four were eating lunch in a company building. A Chicago Junction railroad freight engine was backing in a string of fifteen cars. The caboose struck the bumper and it yielded. The men were buried in debris.

The police were notified. Several ambulances were dispatched to the scene. When they arrived the men had been removed by other employès, who hurried to them after the crash. Edward Love, 19 years old, 3550 South Artesian avenue, was taken to the Mercy hospital. Several of his ribs had been broken and he is believed to have been injured internally. Charles Ludwig, 42 years old, 1318 West 73d street; Richard Ostring, 5147 Morgan street, and Louis Hayte 2208 West 36th street, the yards foreman, were the others hurt.

EXPLOSION JARS STREET.

An explosion, believed to have been caused by gas fumes escaping from a leaking pipe, occurred yesterday at the southwest corner of Fulton and North Curtis streets. City employès were thawing out a fire hydrant and built a small fire. No one was injured.

GEORGIA YIELDS TO ART; BORGLUM CASE IS DROPPED

Atlanta, Ga., March 7.—[United Press.]—Following weeks of bitter wrangling, involving grand jury indictments charging larceny, the Stone Mountain Confederate Memorial association yielded to public opinion today and dropped its criminal suit against Gutson Borglum, sculptor.

Last week the association set out to prosecute Borglum after he smashed supposedly valuable models of the Stone Mountain Confederate memorial, on which he had been working eight years. The association had dismissed the sculptor following a series of disagreements, and Borglum used his axe on the models so no one else could finish the task.

Ordered His Arrest.

Warrants were issued for his arrest, and Borglum, was caught in Greensboro, N. C., last Saturday night. Released on a writ of habeas corpus, the sculptor went to New York and enlisted powerful friends in his behalf.

Meanwhile the association had offered the job of completing the memorial to a few selected sculptors, but each in turn politely refused, declaring Borglum was the man who conceived the gigantic memorial to heroes of the Confederacy, and that he was best fitted to finish it.

Finally, Gov. Walker, himself, wrote the Stone Mountain association, suggesting the criminal proceedings be dropped. He said to bring Borglum back to Atlanta on extradition proceedings would only prolong the controversy and hold up work on the memorial.

The committee wired its attorneys in Greensboro to this effect.

Willing to Resume Work.

Borglum, who arrived in Greensboro today with an army of legal talent, was elated at the news, reiterating the right of an artist to destroy his own work, if he saw fit to do so. He said he would be willing to resume work on the meromial if "the south demanded it."

But the Stone Mountain Memorial association, after announcing it had dropped its case against the sculptor, issued a bitterely worded statement, saying it was "happily rid of Borglum" and under no circumstances would it employ him again.

The United Daughters of the Confederacy, who were the first to see the possibilities of turning the sheer side of Stone mountain into a perpetual monument—a carving of seven heroic figures, including Gen. Robert E. Lee, Jefferson Davis, and Stonewall Jackson, and four lieutenant colonels—want Borglum to come back and finish the job he started about eight years ago.

It has become a question in the south whether the United Daughters of the Confederacy and Borglum will prevail or whether the present Stone Mountain association will continue to dominate the work.

BAR TEACHERS' SALARY DRIVES, McANDREW IDEA

For Increased Pay, but Without Agitation.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

The nub of Supt. McAndrew's recommendations for increased pay for the teachers appears to be this: Salaries should be removed from the zone of agitation. Adjustments should be made by the management from time to time as a plain business proposition. Emotional campaigns for raises on the part of the teaching force itself should be avoided. The schools are run for the customers instead of for the teachers.

The report of the committee of nearly 100 which spent six months studying the question says:

"A board should establish a salary schedule without waiting for employés to ask for increases and without subjecting the system to the emotional excitement attendant upon a salary campaign. Salary is for the service, not to please employés."

Who Will Be the Boss?

Strange to say, the McAndrew call for increased schedules has headed into adverse criticism from a portion of the teaching force itself. It sounds like another installment of the bewhiskered controversy over "who's going to be boss—the superintendent or the teachers' federation?" The idea that the board of education should take the initiative in raising salaries is almost like an infringement of copyright, and from some comes the plaint that Supt. McAndrew's salary raiser approval is a move to trim the power of the federation still further.

The critics say the salary adjustment plan is precipitate and a piece of politics. Let's give these two protests the onceover.

Instead of being rushed hot off the pan as a surprise, the salary recommendations have been in process of development for almost a year. When Mr. McAndrew became superintendent thirteen items asking increased salaries were pending.

Committee Goes Over Ground.

They came from groups of teachers themselves. The elementary teachers were not involved. The requests were turned over to Mr. McAndrew, who said he was new to the job and would require time to consider them. One of the first things he dwelt on after taking his post was adequate compensation. In his annual report last August, he said it was a matter for early attention. He cited figures showing Chicago teachers were paid lower than in other large cities, and said a salary scale based on the best considerations discoverable was in the prospectus for 1925.

He picked a committee of nearly 100, which spent six months on the job of working out increased schedules, and it was their report which he submitted two days ago to the board members. There does not appear to be any precipitancy about this.

As to its being a political move, some of the unreconciled say the motivation of Mr. McAndrew is to get his recommendations through before Mayor Dever appoints new members of the school board in May.

McAndrew Makes Comment.

This theory, by the way, roused the risibilities of Supt. McAndrew yesterday.

"They haven't hooked it up with the Stokes case, too, have they?" he blithely remarked.

Amusement was extracted at the board rooms in the apparent fact that if politics is being played, the McAndrew report does it with reverse English. In this wise: The report raps County Treasurer P. J. Carr, who is a pillar of the local Democracy, which elected the mayor, who will appoint a controlling part of the board, on which Mr. McAndrew will rely for support. The rap at Mr. Carr in the committee report, by the way, sounds like the Plymouth court uplift. Some of the financial experts at the board said yesterday it was unfounded and ill advised.

Politics Not Involved.

So, it is hard to see it as a political move, unless one stands on his head. If it is, it's rather a strange way to play politics—to kick the pride of the local Democracy in the slats.

Some critics says it is an effort to bribe the teachers. "Bribe them?" said Supt. McAndrew. "Bribe them for what? To teach schools? How absurd! It's as foolish as to say that politics is involved in a study of the salary question.

"It's nonsense, too, to speak as if there is fighting in the school system. Kant and Spinoza said there can be no dispute without two participants. And the superintendent is not fighting any one.

"The public has never begrudged adequate payment for education. We are charged with the duty of providing adequate education. There is no evidence that Chicago is satisfied with a school system inferior to the best in any American city. To me it seems a plain duty to establish by better salaries a better system of schools."

Chicago Pays Less.

Figures cited in the report show the average per capita expenditure on education of the twelve cities having a population in excess of 500,000 for 1922 was $13.38. Chicago spent $11.66 per capita. It pays $4.32 per capita less than New York. As against Chicago's $11.66, Cleveland pays $15.05; Boston, $16.18; Detroit, $12.75; Buffalo, $13.52; Pittsburgh, $15.7[illegible], and Los Angeles, $14.63.

The experts are figuring the total amount of the proposed increases—incomplete estimates are that it will run considerably below $2,000,000 a year. Board members are studying three possible ways and means—by putting two or three more pupils in a class, by getting more property on the assessment rolls, and by getting an increase in tax levy on a popular referendum.

PLAN $17,500,000 ENDOWMENT DRIVE

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Members of the alumni, faculty members, and friends of the University of Chicago held a meeting at the Reynolds club yesterday to discuss plans for the university's $17,500,000 endowment drive. The photo was taken as those who attended the meeting stood on the steps in front of the club.

SMALL'S PICTURE HANGING IN OLD LINCOLN SHRINE

In this home, which the state of Illinois has guarded and arranged with scrupulous care, there is no modern touch save this picture of the present governor. Illinois is proud of its treasure trove of Lincolnia, and visitors from all the world pause with reverent mien before the famous tomb, the old courthouse, and the ancient home. No other governor has ever caused his picture to be placed among these treasures, and such men as Grant and Logan, intimately connected during their lifetime with Lincoln, are honored elsewhere.

But visitors entering the Lincoln home today will see the big picture of Len Small, in a two inch black frame, approximately 24x30 inches, hanging at the right hand side of the hallway.

U. OF CHICAGO SEEKS CASH FOR MORE RESEARCH

The need for added endowments to maintain the high position of the graduate school of the University of Chicago was emphasized yesterday in an address to prominent alumni of the university by Dr. Gordon Laing.

Dr. Laing quoted President R. H. Hughes of Miami college as authority for the statement that the University of Chicago's research facilities are among the best in the country. President Hughes, he said, had sent a questionnaire to fifty of the leading professors in the country, asking them to rank the graduate schools.

Dr. Laing did not quote the tabulation of the answers, but it was later learned that the University of Chicago was ranked first in eight departments and second in four; Harvard was ranked first in six and second in six, and Columbia was first in three and second in six.

Chicago was first in botany, French, physics, geography, geology, mathematics, sociology, and Spanish, and second in astronomy, education, political science, and zoology.

JOE BERTSCHE IS FREED IN COAST ROBBERY TRIAL

Joe Bertsche, nearly as notorious in the underworlds of a dozen cities as his brother Barney, yesterday dodged the penitentiary again, this time in a Los Angeles court where he was found guiltless on seventeen counts in connection with a million dollar mail robbery.

The Bertsches in recent years have been named in such noted crimes as the $2,000,000 Union station robbery, the Sibley warehouse booze theft, the Duffey-Exley murders and other matters in which Dean O'Banion also was said to have figured.

Joe Bertsche's penitentiary life started in 1898 when he was sent to a Pennsylvania jail for burglary. Of late years he has been more immune.

AUTO FOUND IN RIVER; TWO MEN HELD AS THIEVES

The finding of a Ford automobile in the river at Normal boulevard and Archer avenue led Judge William Fetzer yesterday to hold two men to the grand jury in bonds of $32,000 each.

The two held are Clarence Collins, 3611 Beach avenue, and Herman Werner, 36 West 18th street. They are said to have stolen the automobile of Arthur Lund, a veterinary surgeon at 2947 West North avenue.

Lund and Elmer Fisher will be heard on Tuesday. Fisher, it is charged, conspired with Collins and Werner to steal Lund's automobile so that he might collect the insurance. The charge was denied. Police have not yet determined whether the automobile recovered from the river is the one stolen from Lund.

COOLIDGE PLANS ATLANTIC CRUISE DURING SUMMER

Washington, D. C., March 7.—An extended cruise on the presidential yacht Mayflower, skirting the Atlantic coast as far north as Maine, occupies a place among President Coolidge's vacation plans for the summer.

The President probably will use the Mayflower to go to the proposed "summer White House" at Swampscott, Mass., it was said at the White House today.

In view of these plans for a more extended vacation than usual in midsummer Mr. Coolidge has curtailed previously made tentative arrangements for several trips in the early spring. He has practically decided he will not attend the celebration of the battle of Lexington and Concord in Massachusetts April 17, nor the convention of the Advertising Clubs of the World at Houston, Tex., May 10.

The President, however, proposes to take a number of trips away from Washington early in the summer.

INDIANA'S ART AND ARTISTS WIN PRIZES OF CASH

Indiana art and Indiana artists occupied the center of the stage last evening at the Marshall Field picture galleries. There several hundred people attended a private showing of the Hoosier salon, under the auspices of the Daughters of Indiana, the Indiana society, and the Earlham university alumni. The exhibit will be open to the public all week, beginning tomorrow.

Prizes totaling $4,375 were offered, the awards being distributed by Col. George T. Buckingham. The John C. Shaffer prize of $500 for the best picture of the exhibition was awarded to "The Recessional," by Eugene Savage of New York. Prizes of $200 each were awarded to Wayman Adams' portrait of Booth Tarkington, to Charles W. Dahlgren of Oak Park for the best water color, and to Gaar Williams for the best group of cartoons. Nearly 300 pictures are exhibited.

INSURANCE CO. HEAD REPLIES TO HEARST PROTEST

Urges Injustice of Attack on Tribune Policies.

From his sick bed yesterday Isaac Miller Hamilton, president of the Federal Life Insurance company of Chicago, dictated a letter to Clifford Ireland, director of the department of trade and commerce at Springfield, giving his opinion on the complaint which was filed March 5 against The Tribune-Federal $7,500 travel accident policy form by L. R. Brooks, promotion manager of the Herald-Examiner.

The attack by Mr. Hearst's morning paper in Chicago, directed against The Tribune and the Federal Life company, is really an attack upon the insurance department of the state of Illinois, which deservedly has an excellent reputation, Mr. Miller says in his letter. It is not in the interests of policy holders or the public, he states, and is ignorantly and viciously made.

He expresses the hope that the opinion of the attorney general upon the present form of the policy will be in favor of the federal position, and suggests that the hearing on the complaint, which has been set for March 13, be called off by Mr. Ireland.

He points out the quarter of a century service which the Federal company has given to the public and states that Mr. Ireland knows that every policy will be honored, every claim paid.

Letter to Ireland.

The letter follows:

"March 7, 1925.

"Hon. Clifford Ireland,
"Director of Trade and Commerce,
"Springfield, Ill.
"Dear Sir:

"Your esteemed favor of the 5th inst. with stated enclosures has been brought to me at my residence where I am confined to my bed, under the doctor's care, with a sudden and severe attack of influenza, having had a temperature which persisted around 103, but which has subsided until my temperature now is sub-normal.

"From my point of view the policy in question and all conditions pertaining to its assurance are regular and in due form of law.

"The policy carefully was prepared by the Federal and in due and regular course submitted to the insurance department of the state of Illinois (which department deservedly enjoys an excellent reputation) for its consideration. It was duly considered and filed by said insurance department and its issuance thereby authorized.

Incurred Large Expense.

"Thereafter the Federal incurred large expense for an immense supply of these policies, and duly and regularly began their issuance.

"You know and I know that every obligation to policy holders and their beneficiaries under such policies will be paid promptly and equitably by the Federal; you know and I know that every interest of the holders of such policies and their beneficiaries is, and will continue to be, duly protected by the Federal in accordance with its unexcelled and deserved reputation of fair dealing extending over a period of twenty-five years.

"The attack upon this policy, in fact, is an attack upon the insurance department of the state of Illinois and the due and regular methods of said department. It was not made in the interests of any present or prospective holder of such policies or the beneficiaries thereof. It was made by Herald-Examiner representatives, the underlying motive being an attack upon The Chicago Tribune; such attack utterly and ruthlessly ignored the proper interests of the public, policy holders and beneficiaries, and the Federal Life Insurance company.

"During the past year the Herald-Examiner people have sold a travel accident policy with subscriptions, representing that only by subscribing, and only by maintaining said subscriptions in force, could such insurance be continued.

"The methods of the Federal-Tribune are clean and comply with the law. I am not prepared to say as much for the methods of the Herald-Examiner.

Company Reputation at Stake.

"The reputation of a life insurance company is very valuable and delicate; it should be maintained unsullied; it or the company's methods should not be unjustly, ignorantly, and viciously attacked. The Herald-Examiner people have made such an attack upon the Federal and its methods; they disregard entirely the loss and suffering to present and prospective policy holders and beneficiaries which such attack may entail; it is the duty of the Federal, its obligation to its thousands of policy holders and beneficiaries, to refute such attacks with its utmost ability and vigor. It should not permit such an attack to do harm if within its ability to prevent, nor should it permit such an attack to lessen or postpone the service it is authorized, and it is its duty, to extend to the insuring public.

"It is my hope and belief that you will understand thoroughly and be in entire accord with the sentiments herein expressed.

"It is my hope that the opinion you have requested of the attorney general will approve the Federal's position unqualifiedly; that the hearing you have scheduled for March 13 will be called off, and that you will notify me thereof by letter or wire.

"Should such hearing be held, then I am not yet sure that I shall be able physically to appear at your office in Springfield at 10 a. m. Friday, March 13 next. If not, I shall venture to ask you by letter or telegram to postpone the hearing until such a mutually convenient date that my physical condition will permit me to attend.

"Cordially,
"Isaac Miller Hamilton,
"President."

Yesterday was the banner day of the week in number of applications received by The Tribune for this new insurance policy. Facilities of The Tribune Readers' Insurance department have been increased so that 20,000 policies a day can be handled in the future.

WINS POINT

John W. Thompson, wealthy contractor, sentenced to two years in prison and a fine of $10,000 upon his conviction with Col. Charles R. Forbes of conspiracy to defraud the government on hospital contracts, was yesterday granted a writ of error. The United States Court of Appeals also set a review of the case. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

SEEK CLEWS TO GERM BUYING IN MILWAUKEE NOW

State Extends Scope of McClintock Inquiry.

Efforts were being made yesterday to trace every sale of typhoid fever germs during the latter part of last year, and Assistant State's Attorney John Sbarbaro was questioning witnesses who might shed light on the death of William N. McClintock.

With the exception of the testimony given at the inquest relating to the inquiries and interest of William D. Shepherd, heir to the McClintock $1,000,000, there has been no actual transfer of typhoid germs uncovered. Mr. Sbarbaro decided to have the search widened to include Milwaukee, Wis.

To See Shepherd's Picture.

The laboratories there were to be visited, Shepherd's picture shown to the laboratory officials, mail orders scanned, and express records inspected to see if any typhoid germs were shipped here and if so, to whom.

Pending the resumption of the inquest Mr. Sbarbaro undertook to requestion all who gave testimony. He had at his office yesterday Miss Estelle Gehling, the nurse who turned over to Chief Justice Harry Olson of the Municipal court four letters addressed to "Precious Sunshine," and which she said were written by Shepherd, who had been her sweeteart for seven years.

One bit of her testimony was that during the summer of 1924 she never could find Shepherd during the afternoons and never was enlightened as to where he was then. Mr. Sbarbaro said he was seeking more information on that point.

"Dead Broke," Letter Says.

In one of the letters written in October—two months before Shepherd inherited $1,000,000—the writer said a big deal had gone wrong and that he was flat broke and contemplated "dropping from sight." Mr. Sbarbaro said he wished to know more about that.

Shepherd's constant companionship with young McClintock after the young man had made his will in Shepherd's favor was to be another subject of questioning, Mr. Sbarbaro said, in the belief that Miss Gehling could amplify her inquest testimony.

Dr. George Fosberg was another from whom Sbarbaro expected to get additional information. There were many points in the physician's testimony about Shepherd's curiosity as to typhoid germs and untraceable poisons which Sbarbaro said he wished to discuss privately with Dr. Fosberg.

Olson Also Hunts Witnesses.

Judge Olson, who instituted the inquiry and who strenuously objected to a postponement of the inquest, said he, too, was busy, seeking new leads. He said he expected to be able to furnish Mr. Sbarbaro with several new witnesses who have information he regards as important.

DEMANDS TRIAL BY JURY.

Mrs. Gladys Grossman, 454 Melrose street, who is alleged to have held up traffic in the loop while she argued with Policeman William Webb, asked for a jury trial yesterday when arraigned before Judge Newcomer on a disorderly conduct charge.

TANK OF OXYGEN FALLS, EXPLODES; INJURES TWO MEN

George J. Hooper, proprietor of the Kansas City Gas and Oxygen company at 1859 Ogden avenue, was burned on the hands and face yesterday when a five foot tank containing oxygen under high pressure fell from a shelf and exploded.

Mr. Hooper's assistant, Edward Katerschall, 1832 Adams street, a student at Rush Medical college, also was injured.

Windows in the building were blown out, causing slight injuries to several persons.

5 AUTO DEATHS RAISE COUNTY'S 1925 TOLL TO 102

66 Day Mark Is 23 Over That of Year Ago.

Automobile accident deaths in Cook county yesterday passed the 100 mark. It was the sixty-sixth day of 1925 and the total at midnight reached 102 when a motorcycle policeman was killed. On the same date last year only seventy-nine had been killed.

There were five deaths in the county yesterday and one just outside its limits.

The motorcycle policeman was Raymond Walsh, 6619 Newgard avenue. He was riding in Sheridan Road at Sherwin avenue when his machine was struck by a University cab driven by Harry Ouelette, 1618 Jonquil Terrace. Walsh was taken to the Rogers Park hospital where he died shortly afterward. Ouelette was held.

Woman Loses Life.

Late last night Mrs. Mary Magee, 65 years old, 4243 Sheridan road, was fatally injured by a car which hit her as she tried to cross the street in front of her home. Theodore Dreyfuss, 4048 Sheridan road, was held by the police.

Martin W. Benson was killed while riding in a machine with two companions. The automobile collided at Lansing, Ill., with a Pennsylvania freight train. Benson's two companions, Clarence La Pointe of Whiting and Fred Schafer, 9148 Luella avenue, Chicago, were seriously injured.

Alex Phiffer, 25 years old, of 5739 South Bishop street, died of injuries received Friday when a motorcycle he was riding collided with an automobile driven by Jacob Leib, 5944 South Halsted street.

Charles Langley, 859 North Wood street, was the day's third victim. He was struck by an automobile at Washington boulevard and Green street on Wednesday and died yesterday at the county hospital. The machine which struck him was driven by E. G. Haag, 1700 North Troy street.

Mrs. Catherine Harris, 34 years old, of 314 Villa avenue, Elmhurst, died at the West Suburban hospital following an accident on Thursday. Arthur Kitty of Lombard dimmed his headlights when an auto approached him from the opposite direction and did not see Mrs. Harris until his auto was only a few feet from her.

Truck Crashes Into Trolley.

The front platform of a Grand avenue street car, crowded a moment before with passengers, was demolished yesterday morning by a heavy truck, which rolled backwards down the incline at Desplaines street.

The truck, owned by S. W. Campbell, 6 North Wood street, and driven by G. C. Kee, 115 South Robey street, stalled on the incline and slid backward when the brakes failed to hold.

Traffic Is Blocked.

A horse, drawing a Chicago Linen Supply company wagon and driven by Edward Ertz, 823 Addison street, was crushed and shot by a policeman. Traffic was tied up until a surface line wrecking crew directed by George Potter, 7335 Vincennes avenue, cleared the street.

Then the truck started up again, again failed, and rushed back upon the street car. Motorman Charles Bjeergaard, 2045 North Keystone avenue, forced the passengers back off his platform and escaped himself an instant before the impact. The truck driver was arrested on a charge of driving a car without efficient brakes.

Girl Fined for Speeding.

Miss Norma Black, 23 years old, 7037 Vernon avenue, who two weeks ago staged an auto race on the south side against Harry Topping, 6534 South Claremont avenue, was fined $25 for speeding yesterday by Judge Francis Borelli. Topping, charged with disorderly conduct, was dismissed after he had donated $20 to the Boy Scouts.

Miss Black's companion in the race, Harry F. Miller, 105 South Dearborn street, a salesman, also booked for disorderly conduct, was discharged.

The hands of the clock indicate the number of deaths by autos, guns, and moonshine in Cook county since Jan. 1. Yesterday was the sixty-sixth day of 1925.

Mrs. Reba Leeming Sues Chicagoan for Divorce

Denver, Colo., March 7.—Mrs. Reba Shoup Leeming, prominent Denver society woman and daughter of Oliver H. Shoup, millionaire, former governor of Colorado, today brought suit for divorce in the District court here against John Leeming Jr., now a Chicago attorney. Mr. and Mrs. Leeming were married in 1916 and have no children.

Mr. Leeming is the son of Dr. Jonh Leeming of 5300 Hyde Park boulevard, and the attorney for the Yellow Drive-Is-Yourself company. He said he was aware that his wife was seeking a divorce on grounds of incompatibility. The couple separated six months ago.

Postpone Girl's Case Against Mail Carrier

Charles Reilley, 25 years old, a mail carrier, was arraigned yesterday in the South Clark court on a charge of attack, but due to the illness of the complaining witness the case was continued until March 11. Reilley's bond was set at $5,000. He denied the charges. He said that the girl had flirted with him, and he had accepted her advances.

WHEN WILL THEY LEAVE GERMANY?

The British are trying to get the French out of Germany. The French say that the Germans have not conformed to the disarmament requirements of the Versailles treaty, but are slipping out of these restrictions. Napoleon after Jena limited the Prussian army to 42,000 men. In the reorganization of the Prussian forces under Scharnhorst and Clausewitz the able bodied citizens of Prussia were passed through the intensive training of this small organization, and when the war of liberation began all of Prussia was trained and ready for Leipzig.

Under the treaty of Versailles the German army is limited to 100,000 men, and to prevent a repetition of the Scharnhorst device the enlistments must be long term, so that the force will not be the training school of the whole military population.

The allied military control commission has found much wrong in the German keeping of faith. The British officially pretend to believe in the seriousness of it and actually make nothing of it. The German army is said to be, and probably is, wholly composed of commissioned and noncommissioned officers, a force capable of immediate expansion.

Point has been made of the Green police and the athletic societies, all said to be military organizations. The control commission reports discovery of hidden supplies and the secret making of munitions. The conclusion drawn from these reports and the one virtually accepted by the council of ambassadors is that Germany is preparing to make war, and will do so as soon as the armies of occupation have withdrawn from the Rhine. Consequently the armies must remain long after the date set for their removal and they are doing so.

The British protest, but they have not been able to get anywhere, and they have remained in Cologne. That continues coöperation with France, and the British want to coöperate if possible. They also know that if they withdrew the French or Belgians or both would enter. The Germans, objecting to all occupation, prefer British to French.

Germany might be able to satisfy France that the disarmament was complete, but it may be doubted. The French fear of a return of German armies has cause, and the French believe that if these armies have to cross the Rhine before they get started they will not start so soon and they will not get so far. Sticking on the Rhine seems to the French to be the only real insurance they have.

It is not believed in other nations that Germany is idiotic enough to think of war in the near future. No matter what violations of the Versailles treaty may have been undertaken, they could not give Germany now or soon any chance against France and Great Britain, or, for that matter, France alone. In years to come, if the desire for war remains, Germany will recover the means of making modern war. The longer German territory is occupied with allied bayonets the stronger the desire for another war of liberation will be and the longer it will endure.

If France agreed now that German adherence to the treaty was perfect that would not prevent the Germans from reverting to military ways at some time in the future, and if France is to march back at every suspicion of such military activity western Europe will be in constant war.

There is no chance of peace in that. It requires continued occupation of German territory amounting to a seizure of it or it presupposes recurrent invasions. Germany will not stand that from France forever, and if it is to be the prospect then German recuperation will have the fixed purpose of recovering the lost parts of the fatherland.

The protocol of Geneva, the world court, the league of nations, and all the wistful, promising, or fantastic devices which altruistic or realistic people have considered or formed are straws in the wind so long as this occupation of Germany and threats of reinvasion of Germany make a state of war a fact in Europe.

The British want to bring Germany and France into understanding with them and to form a white bloc against Asia, which has come up to the Polish frontier. They cannot do that with French soldiers on German soil. There will be some chance for the peace of Europe when the forces of the allies are out of Germany. There may be a chance for an alliance or an understanding.

Mr. Coolidge in his inaugural address said that parchments would fail, artificial efforts would be in vain, and there would be peace when men wanted it. War cannot be made peace by a protocol or covenant.

BOXING IF THE PEOPLE WANT IT.

The boxing bill in the Illinois legislature has a referendum attached. It would permit state regulation boxing, but a favorable vote in the assembly would not be legalizing something the people might not want. Even if the act were adopted by the people it would not compel any one offended by boxing to go to see any of the matches.

Boxing is a sport much thought of by many men. It is for men, although, where it is permitted, women sometimes go. There would be no law keeping them out, but not many women will care much for boxing unless it has milk fund benefit social trimmings to it, which will not be so often.

If the people of the state want to permit the sport legally they ought to have the chance to do so. If they do not want it they will knock it out in the referendum. It's fair enough to find out what they want.

TRANSIT OR TALK.

Chicago has talked traction for thirty years. It has been talked in political campaigns and in preparation for political campaigns. The only time action arose out of the talk was in 1907, when the present ordinances were passed and adopted and a good system of surface lines was made possible. These ordinances are now expiring.

The Dever traction plan offers construction. The opposition offers language. One offers transit, the other offers talk. Transit means extension of elevated lines, new surface car lines and subways. The talk means tom-tomming, a federal receivership, more politics and stagnation.

The city will get a boom from the Dever plan. From the opposition it will get a kick in the face. If the people accept the Dever plan they will begin to get rapid transit just as soon as the Supreme court has passed favorably on the validity of the Schwartz certificates. If Chicago can get started under this plan it will shake itself out of obstructions and into a new era of building. It will be a return to the old World's Fair spirit.

If the people are persuaded by the tom-tommers not to accept the ordinances they will have their surface cars operated under a federal receivership. There will be no comprehensive improvements made. Transportation will get worse. There will be no plan in sight, no money for any construction and no hope of metropolitan transportation.

WE ASTROLOGIZE.

Europe in general is a region with a surplus of labor and a shortage of raw materials. There are 400 odd million people in that peninsular appendage to Asia. There are 129 people to the square mile as compared to 35 in the United States. These surpluses of labor in Germany, in Italy, in England must live by manufacturing and export. They must compete by national units with the rest of Europe in a world more and more able to produce its own goods and to supply its needs without European help. The growth of America to a country primarily industrial in nature has had and will have a crushing effect on Europe. America has shouldered into the export and import markets. She has raised a bar against immigration. Those facts alone may wreck what is called modern Europe.

Under these starvation pressures no racial stock can thrive, and Europe begins to prove it. France is stationary, without great industrialism, and maintains a first power rating on a minor power population basis only by artificial stimulations that cannot last. Under threat she will import the blacks from Africa to defend her lines and that will mean the end of French racial integrity, if not that of Europe. Spain is impotent. Germany, England, and Italy have huge surpluses of population. If they emigrate, the countries will be weakened that much in man power. If they stay, the standard of living for all Europe must come down to something close to that of Asia Minor. It is one horn or the other of the dilemma. Europe today is confronted with a primary problem of food supply or racial decay.

And behind all lies the decreasing store of natural resource on which large populations must live. England has coal for 200 years. But before that her coal will be too costly to export. The continent has coal for 250 years. There is some water power yet to be developed, but the prediction of the scientist that Europe before long must return to a relatively thin settlement of pastoral and forest people begins to show some signs of realization.

The focus of human development for the next 500 years or more is almost certainly North America. With a basic cultural unity that will prevent a repetition of the suicidal wars of Europe, America is free to organize on a continental scale. The age of national states in the European sense is about over, and the age of continents has come. America is that continent. The shift of world power and development across the Atlantic will be the dominating event of the third thousand years A. D.

MISSING LINKS.

Africa now comes to the front with an antique low brow just discovered, and the gentlemen who make it their life work to collect jagged bits of human bones, ancient brain pans, old teeth, and the flint leavings of the hatchet makers 100,000 years ago are all excited. They have named him Australopithecus Africanus, which ought to scare competitor old timers away, and they say that he may be one of those pioneer human beings who first found this earth a suitable location for the human family.

Missing links have been discovered right along with a good deal of regularity for decades, from the Java man to the comparatively recent Neanderthalers, the magnificent Cro-Magnons, and our own rather scrubby races. There have been many styles of human beings and nature has tried many experiments. The African just discovered was one of her first attempts.

In fact, the most missing of all missing links seems to be this African entry to the list of human antiques. Some say that he is only one of our cousins, the apes, because his skull is small. Others say that his long head, dolichocephalic they call it, marks him human. It is a question. He was found in solid limestone, and his age may be 50,000,000 years.

The ways to know your missing links are several. The Java man was one of the earliest styles of man with which we have a warm acquaintance. His skull capacity was greater than that of existing apes, but smaller than modern men or women. He was a naive human, no doubt, unable to talk, probably without fire, but able to put his thumb against his four fingers. The last is important, for the exercise developed brain centers that in higher men made human progress possible. Then came the Piltdown and Heidelberg men; then about 75,000 years ago our old friends the Neanderthalers, or cave men, and the foundation of much modern romance.

The Neanderthal man was not the big brute that popular opinion makes him. He was about 5 feet 3 inches tall and no doubt rather hairy. He had strong arms and powerful shoulders, but his neck was not recurved as ours, and he walked with his head lurched forward heavily from his shoulders. He had a big chest and heavy bones, but he never could make good at West Point, for he could not straighten his knees. His thigh bones were curved. His feet were flat. His walk was slovenly and slouching. His timing was slow. Pity the modern who got in the grip of those big arms, but for all that the modern is a bigger, faster, more efficient man.

He was a chinless wonder, for the button on the chin of modern man to which the talking muscles of the lip are fastened was not there. His teeth were big and powerful, his nose was broad, and the heavy ridge of bone over his eyes marked the primitive. His skull capacity was less than modern man's; his fore brain was less developed. He was a slow, grunting creature. No man today is quite so low. He may have had fire and he certainly had stone implements. He had skin clothing, but he probably threw the old folk over the cliffs to the hyenas or the sabertooth tigers when their upkeep was too troublesome. He lived in little herds, no doubt, with one "old man" possessing all the women and controlling all the young men.

Then came a new style about 25,000 years ago that swept old Europe clean of all Neanderthaler men. It was the Cro-Magnon, and to this day no race has come that is their equal. They averaged taller than the modern man by several inches. Their skull capacity was larger. They were powerfully yet delicately built. Their cave drawings show an instinctive art that no race has approached in its primitive stages. The Cro-Magnon was a great race, but with the return of glacial weather and for other obscure reasons it declined. The new men came, our ancestors, with their bows and arrows and their dogs, and the magnificent Cro-Magnons passed on into oblivion.

This "so-called human race" today might have been better, but it is all we have. It is not commonly called a missing link, but the beings who will have this earth 100,000 years from now may well think it ought to be. Paleontology tells us of terrible extinctions in Europe, of grim returns of an unfriendly Nature, and the passing from the face of the earth of whole races of men. And today may be the old stone age of some far distant future. It may be good for man's soul to consider that the world may still be holding out on us. It is not yet won.

THE COMMUTER'S TICKET.

There is a new flush of youth on the face of outdoors. A stretch of thicket has the appearance of bloom as the snow melts in the sunlight. The colors have flooded into the stems and into the buds. Sugar water is running. Soon hermit thrush will be scratching in the dead leaves and the wild geese will be going north. There are sounds and touches of spring, evasive, light and flitting. There will be willow catkins and fuzzy hepatica stems uncurling under the oak leaves.

The vernal equinox may not strike a loud gong on the ears or carry many banners for the eye, but it fits a key in a lock in the mind.

HICK TOWNS ON THE OPERA CIRCUITS

[Dallas, Tex., Morning News.]

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE had an editorial not long ago in which it indulged in the hearty wish that Chicago might go back to the "hick town" classification with regard to grand opera. It took the position that eleven weeks of grand opera was too heavy for Chicago. The $400,000 deficit of the Chicago Civic Opera was a big item, but the bigger one, as put by THE TRIBUNE, was that citizens had to be dragooned into going, out of civic pride and what not, with the result that theatrical productions of merit and other esthetic appeals had to be suppressed or repressed in order to let grand opera break as near to even as might be. Said THE TRIBUNE:

> Chicago could get all the opera it requires in a month of a traveling company, and it could get the best. If business managed opera as well as it manages baseball, the operatic talent would be thoroughly disciplined and many communities would be served with the best.

This, of course, is rank heresy—"glaring provincialism," as the editor of Musical America calls it, for example—but it is vastly encouraging to cities not yet the size of Chicago. Dallas, for example, is able to pick and choose its musical attractions to an extent. Incidentally, the clientele of grand opera represents pretty much of all Texas. The brief season of opera thus involves an ingathering of culture through the ingathering of people possessed of the taste for good music. Dallas, therefore, may well afford to rest content with THE TRIBUNE'S classification, and admit that for grand opera purposes it is a hick town.

Indeed, the future of grand opera depends upon the hick towns, just as baseball—to recur to THE TRIBUNE editorial—depends upon the hick towns. Until singing is a common accomplishment and a cultivated taste with the boys and girls in our hick towns, we will continue to import a large number of our opera singers. When our interior towns can furnish the bulk of our opera talent we will be able in our own way to organize and finance opera without dragooning anybody to listen and without toadying to anybody to sing for us. Four weeks for Chicago and other such towns, therefore, with the rest of the season "farmed out" on the road, will eventually make grand opera as completely American as the Chautauqua is. But the chance of matching baseball with opera seems less robust.

PRONOUNCING THE THIRD PARTY DEAD.

[New York World.]

Among Mr. La Follette's enemies there is a good deal of jubilation over the course of affairs at the Chicago conference of the third party movement. The railway brotherhoods are back on the side lines, declining to help organize a new party, though Mr. La Follette wires that the time is ripe for it. Thirteen other labor organizations retire with the brotherhoods. The Socialists, outvoted on a question of control, are expected to branch off into a campaign of their own. Mr. J. A. H. Hopkins of the committee of forty-eight, the Frank Munsey of third party movements, whose perpetual hope it is to combine two wings and preserve the best features of both, attempts a bigger and better compromise, but fails. Mr. La Follette's opponents in the east take pleasure in asserting that nothing is left after the Chicago conference save a "one man" party and a rebel movement which has failed.

We doubt if they are right, or if they understand the third party movement for what it really is. Mr. La Follette's party is not yet a party which exists by strengthening its lines between elections. It is a protest party, and as such it polled the very respectable number of 5,000,000 votes last year. How many it polls in 1926 and again in 1928 will depend less upon its own organization schemes than upon the state of farm finances and the conduct of affairs in Washington.

The La Follette movement is not dead. It has been here for years, under one name or another, and may be here for many more years. It is a perpetually expanding and retracting movement too much identified with farm economics to be killed off casually in Chicago.

NEW DISEASES.

THERE is some reason for thinking that new diseases are being brewed to take the place of the old. As yellow fever, cholera, plague, and their tribe pass into the sere and yellow leaf and then fade away, a lot of young diseases are "muling and puking in the nurse's arms."

Perhaps sleeping sickness is one of these, Malta fever another, rabbit fever or tularemia a third, and glandular fever a fourth. If any one rises up and asks to have Malta fever removed from the list because it is old in Malta, we can afford to let it go, because substitutes are at hand.

A report of an epidemic of glandular fever in which there were more than one hundred cases, occurred in western New York in 1923 and 1924. It is doubtful if this disease was ever seen before the world war and not much was known about it as recently as four years ago. The disease starts with vomiting, fever, and sore throat. Then the glands of the neck swell. The swelling of the glands of the neck is so striking that the physicians who saw the first cases in this New York epidemic called it mumps. When it became plain that it was not mumps some called it a common cold, some sore throat, while some fell back on that old catch bag of unknowns called the "flu." It soon became apparent that the disease, whatever it might be, was highly contagious. In some families six to sight in a single family circle would come down with it. (In that part of New York they still have some of the old fashioned large families.) It affected children especially. Of the children exposed 90 per cent took the disease; of the adults, 47 per cent.

Then somebody examined the blood and found a peculiar condition known as mononucleosis. In the meanwhile the notion that this was the new and rare disease, glandular fever, was gaining ground. Some one recalled that the medical literature said that glandular fever and acute mononucleosis were the same disease.

When mononucleosis was first described it was thought to be a form of leukemia, a highly fatal chronic blood disease. Therefore it was very gratifying to find that acute mononucleosis was glandular fever, that it was due to an infection, and that leukemia was not to be expected in the wake of the acute illness.

Recovery after glandular fever is complete. The symptoms which cause suspicion of glandular fever are sore throat and swollen lymph glands. The diagnosis is made by a microscopic examination of the blood.

When the epidemic began few of the physicians who were called in had ever heard of glandular fever and none had ever seen a case. Unless the physicians and the people generally know something about it and the symptoms which cause it to be suspected the disease may get a good foothold before it is recognized.

NEW FIRST PAPERS.

Chicago, March 1.—[Friend of the People.]—I took out my first citizenship papers in 1913. On account of expense with illness in the family I was unable to have second papers taken out. Will I be able to get them now, or will I have to get the first papers again? I have lived in Chicago since 1913.

WISHES IMMEDIATE SETTLEMENT.

Lake Bluff, Ill., March 3.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—An estate is in probate. There are nine heirs. Property consists of clear real estate. The executor, who is one of the heirs, is apparently endeavoring to prolong settlement in order to obtain possession of the property at a fraction of its value at a forced sale through the filing of a partition suit by one of the heirs. There is a lien against the property covering a judgment against the share of one of the heirs.

1. Will this not have to be paid before there can be any settlement?

2. Can holder of this judgment force executor to pay same by mortgaging property or otherwise raising cash for this purpose?

3. The year of probate being at an end, can party having this claim obtain an immediate settlement? G. R. P.

1. We see no reason why the executor should not distribute to the other beneficiaries before the year for filing of claim.

2. The judgment creditor can have the property sold to pay his claim.

3. Not necessarily immediate

Am I entitled to any pension, and, if so, for how many years? F. J.

60 YEARS AGO TODAY

MARCH 8, 1865.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—There is little doubt that Gen. Sherman and Gen. Schofield effected a junction on March 2 or 3 at Fayetteville, N. C. Scouts from Gen. Sherman's army reached Schofield's lines on the first. They reported that on Feb. 24 Sherman was 120 miles south of Fayetteville and advancing at the rate of ten to fifteen miles a day.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Army of the Potomac letters state that the report of the capture of Gen. Early's rebel army is untrue. Sheridan and Early fought a battle at Charlottesville, and some prisoners were taken, but the main body of the rebels escaped.

GALENA, Ill.—The city election resulted in the choice of D. Shehan, Democrat, for mayor.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—The Bulletin has a special dispatch from Washington, which says: "A man named Thomas Clemens has been turned over to the civil authorities by the military authorities against whom the evidence is positive that he had all his plans arranged for the assassination of President Lincoln on inauguration day. He is in jail here."

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The famous senatorial drinking saloon, known for the last fifteen years as "The Hole in the Wall," was closed and the sign over its door, which read "exclusively for senators" was turned wrong side out.

RICHMOND, Va.—Flour is $700 a barrel here. Stragglers from the confederate army classify themselves as "seceders," not deserters.

25 YEARS AGO TODAY

MARCH 8, 1900.

WASHINGTON.—The senate foreign relations committee will vote to amend the Hay-Pauncefote treaty so as to give the United States control of the Panama canal in time of war.

LONDON.—Gen. Roberts, with 40,000 men, has again taken the offensive against the Boers. In a bold sweep around their left he directed his attacks against the forces under Gens. Botha, Dewet, Joubert, and Delarey, who have been concentrating at Osfontein. They abandoned their positions and fled northward, with Gen. Roberts' forces in pursuit.

LONDON.—As an evidence of her appreciation of the loyalty of her Irish subjects during the Transvaal troubles, Queen Victoria caused an order to be promulgated by the war department that on St. Patrick's day all the Irish soldiers shall wear the shamrock. She also announced that she intends to visit Ireland early next month. The privilege of wearing the shamrock will be one of the greatest that can be conferred on the Irish soldiers, as hundreds of times in the past they have been disciplined for adorning their coats and hats with green on St. Patrick's day.

PARIS.—Sarah Bernhardt has had her hair "bobbed" short in order to represent the character of the Duke of Reichtag in "Aiglon," Rostand's new play.

CHICAGO.—Cy De Vry, former animal keeper at Lincoln park, tried to kill himself by shooting, but failed. Prospective loss of his right hand because of a lion's bite last summer had made him despondent. The bullet struck him over the right ear, but failed to penetrate the skull.

CHICAGO.—A trainload of 300,000 pounds of ham and bacon, cured by a new formula gotten up by the department of agriculture, was shipped by Swift & Co. to soldiers in the Philippines.

10 YEARS AGO TODAY

MARCH 8, 1915.

LONDON.—The continued progress of the allied fleet in the bombardment of the Dardanelles forts and the possible partition of Turkey at the end of the war are rapidly pushing Greece into the conflict on the side of the allies. The Athens correspondent of the Daily Mail says a declaration of war against Turkey is expected at any time.

LONDON.—A Copenhagen correspondent says: "The German casualty lists just published include 5,964 officers killed, of whom nineteen were generals. The lists give 14,425 officers as wounded or missing."

CHICAGO.—F. L. Estey, automobile publicity man and automobile editor of the Chicago Examiner, who wrote under the name of "Pipe Line Pete," is dead at the age of 46. For one hour during the funeral, day after tomorrow, every automobile establishment on Automobile row will close down.

CHICAGO.—Paul Redieske, deputy commissioner of public works under Mayor Fred A. Busse, died of pneumonia.

NEW YORK.—Harry Kendall Thaw, slayer of Stanford White, will be placed on trial today on a charge of conspiracy growing out of his escape from the state hospital for the insane at Matteawan in August, 1913. Thaw has been either a prisoner or a fugitive since the night of June 25, 1906, when he killed White at Madison Square Garden.

CHICAGO.—Charles H. Barry, manager of the western department of the company, has been elected president of the Pennsylvania Fire Insurance company of Philadelphia.

BERLIN.—Leading women of Berlin are sponsoring a move to plant all vacant lots in the city in potatoes and other vegetables, to meet the war demands for economy in foodstuffs.

IF PARENTS WILL PLAY SQUARE, SO WILL THE KIDS.

Chicago, March 2.—I have read with interest the article by one of your readers as to the number of young girls and boys who frequent the dance halls and are a cause of immorality among the young people of today. As a college student of 20, may I offer a few suggestions from the point of view of one of the younger generation?

I agree that this is bad, and that the responsibility rests with the parents. Scolding and reprimanding will not do. The young girl and boy of today won't be ordered what to do. If shown in the right manner, they may follow advice.

First, let the parents substitute for dance halls carefully supervised dances and parties in the home. Instead of frowning on this kind of amusement, make the amusement of the right sort.

Secondly, provide other activities for growing boys and girls from 12 to 17 years of age. Boy Scout gangs, Girl Scouts, and similar organizations which give the boy and girl not only a harmless but a very useful activity that will turn their surplus energy into proper channels and teach them the difference between right and wrong conduct.

Thirdly, teach the boy and girl just as to what constitutes proper relationship, the calamity that results from improper relationship so often between members of the opposite sex, so that they may realize the importance of leading the right kind of life, instead of criticizing and scolding them and being scandalized at the mention of such delicate subjects, lack of knowledge of which has been the cause of so many tragedies.

If the parents live up to their part of the contract of parenthood, instead of spending their time at obscene plays or doing crossword puzzles or playing mah jongg, they'll find that the younger generation will play square and meet them more than half way. M. J. B.

FROM AN ILLINI STUDE.

Champaign, Ill., Feb. 28.—I would like to give my views on the editorial "Synthetic." The president of Princeton says "Students toil not, neither do they spin." I want to take exception to that statement, for it has been variously estimated here at the office of the dean that 75 per cent of the students at this university contribute in some manner to defray their school expenses either by part time work, as washing dishes or doing odd jobs, or working during the summer vacation at some vocation.

Why judge a college by the superficial crust of rich men's sons and daughters, who really may be classed as a loss rather than an asset to the school and society at large in an ethical way? There is a far greater number of students who are in school for a constructive purpose, but instead of burning the midnight oil at a party or social, they do it while beating their textbooks. It is not the college environment that occasions this extreme living—of the rich and poor alike—but it is a true reflection of their home life and habits. As a matter of fact, the dean of the University of Illinois has placed in the hands of the parents of its students a proposition setting forth the evils and disadvantages of student owned and driven cars, and proposing to discontinue the practice.

Being a student, this may be taken as a biased view, but I would like to see other views and opinions taken on the subject by other readers. A STUDENT.

CAN YOU BLAME THE FLAMING YOUTH?

Webster City, Ia., March 1.—The article by R. W. arouses in me a desire, as a boy of 18 (being the age with which his article deals) to inquire of him, or, for that matter, the whole of the "grown-up world," why it is not possible to educate young folks before they are left, more or less, to shift for themselves, in the study of social hygiene and sex relationship as openly and as thoroughly as are mathematics, languages, etc., so that they would be better equipped to respond to any improper approaches?

When a law is broken, ignorance is no excuse. Is it possible, then, that any broad minded person can blame the youth of today, kept in the dark if they should overstep the convention line which society has set?
MERRITT (the Flaming Youth).

ARE TAXES CONSCRIPTION OF WEALTH?

Chicago, Feb. 28.—Are taxes conscription of wealth? is a question raised by C. W. Stewart, and he answers the question in the affirmative.

I am sure Mr. Stewart makes two mistakes: First, conscription of capital does not "wring the neck of the goose"—it is a use of vital industrial resources in private hands so that no profit shall be made out of the distress of the nation.

Second, taxes conscript the wealth only of the salaried or professional classes, not of industrial organizations where most of the wealth is. Such organizations pass on their taxes in the form of higher prices to the consumer, and, in fact, pay little or no taxes under the present system. They add it to their "cost of doing business," and in many cases you and I pay a profit on the taxes of industrial concerns every time we buy their merchandise.
FLORENCE JEWELL.

"BULLY FOR SIMS!"

Galena, Ill., March 2.—Bully for Sims! He, like Mitchell, has the nerve—or shall one say guts?—to speak right out in meeting and tell the truth about existing conditions.

Now, will those responsible sit up and take notice and do what is necessary to remedy the situation?

The whole investigation has shown a lack of coöperation between the heads of the different departments, nor can we expect much improvement until there is one responsible head with authority over all departments of military defense.

Why not a secretary of war with three assistants—one in charge of the army, one of the navy, and one of aviation? This would concentrate authority and compel unity of action.
C. R. WHISLER.

SOMETHING FOR MR. POWERS.

Chicago, Feb. 28.—Harry J. Powers offers to make a donation of $100 to any charity you name if "F. S." proves he could not get good seats for an evening performance at a box office, but that they were obtainable from a scalper at a higher price.

Would suggest that Mr. Powers proceed to hand the $100 over to some charity. I would suggest the Boy Scouts of America.

The experience of "F. S." has been the same as mine and of many of my friends.

It is common knowledge that good seats for a good performance cannot be obtained at the box office, even though one is willing to take them for a date a week or two ahead. The patron is compelled to go to the scalpers.

I trust Mr. Powers will be a good sport and hand the hundred berries over to the Boy Scouts of America, since they are engaged in a campaign for funds at this time, and can make good use of them.
PHILIP P. SACHS.

THE COST OF SCALPERS.

Chicago, Feb. 28.—Mr. Harry J. Powers can give up a few hundred dollars as "F. S." and Clare B. Goldman's letters of Saturday, Feb. 28, are true.

My experience has been this: That the first fifteen rows are sold to scalpers and that no citizen should waste time in going to the box office. For example, I waited and waited to see "No, No, Nanette"; went to one scalper, couldn't get anything; went to another, got them at $4.40 per seat, when box office price was only $2.75. Then last Sunday night tried for "Rose Marie" at box office; all sold out was the reply when I could have bought them at a scalper's—fifth row, $5.50 per seat—which I did not.

ELIZABETH BURKE.

Chicago's Water Waste

would buy

Surface, "L", and Subway

EVERYONE wants a subway and efficient transportation. But have we the price? We surely have! Chicago can own surface and "L" lines and dig a subway free of charge—simply by saving the water that it wastes!

City Engineer John Ericson estimates that $380,000,000 can be saved in 30 years by curtailing our wild extravagance with the city water. According to the Chicago Tribune of February 11, this sum would "more than buy the surface and elevated lines and dig an initial subway." It would take about 30 years to pay off a bond issue of this amount.

Watrous Duo-Jet Closets and Valves Will Stop the Water Waste

Use less than 2 gallons. All other combinations use 5, 7 or more

Over 200,000,000 gallons of water are wasted in Chicago every day through faulty plumbing and closets that flush inefficiently. Mr. Ericson estimates that 150,000,000 gallons are wasted each day by old-fashioned closets. It could all be saved by substituting the "Watrous Duo-Jet Closet," which uses only one-third of the water required by the old-fashioned type, and represents the ultimate in sanitation and efficiency.

Quick and positive. The two powerful converging jets (B and C) instantly empty the bowl and produce a continuous flush from start to finish.

Perfect flush and refill, using less than 2 gallons of water.

Wide passage, full 3-inch throughout, with straight outlet. No zigzag bends or curves beyond the trap. The smallest diameter is at the entrance of the trap, so that there is no danger of the obstruction which frequently occurs when a narrow passage is required lower down to establish a syphon. Therefore it cannot clog or overflow.

Slow and sluggish. The weak flow from the single jet causes most of the water to be wasted in starting syphonic action. This is followed by a flush that is necessarily very short.

Uncertain and often ineffective flush and refill, using 5 to 7 gallons of water in most types of bowl. Some use far more.

Small, contracted passage, with zigzag outlet. The smallest diameter is some distance beyond the trap, a feature which often causes serious obstruction, but is unavoidable wherever syphon action is used. Clogs and overflows very easily, frequently necessitating removal of bowl.

BRAVERY IN FACE OF DEATH WINS TRIBUNE AWARD

Policeman George Goggin Receives $100.

Unusual valor and devotion to duty in the face of almost certain death, exhibited when he blocked the escape of a moonshine maddened murderer, won Policeman George Goggin of the detective bureau THE TRIBUNE'S February $100 prize for conspicuous bravery. Recognizing Goggin's act as an outstanding example of courage under fire, Chief Collins a few days ago awarded the hero policeman $300 extra compensation for the year.

On Feb. 4, Goggin and other members of the detective bureau squad commanded by Sergt. Albert Booth had narrowed their search for a colored bandit accused of killing to an apartment building at 1910 South Dearborn street. The bandit, Buford Brooks, was thought to be hiding in the fifth floor flat of his sweetheart, Miss Mary Penny.

Crash Door; Fired On.

Leaving Policeman John Mangan in front of the building to guard the entrance and the fire escapes, Sergts. Booth and Goggin dashed up the stairs to the Penny flat. Refused admission, they crashed through two doors, to be met with a fusillade of bullets fired by Brooks, who was hiding behind an inner door.

One of the bandit's first shots clipped the end from Sergt. Booth's thumb and at the same time rendered the policeman's revolver useless. As Brooks continued to fire from his point of vantage, Booth shouted to Goggin to continue to fight while he went for the squad shotguns, which were left in an automobile in front of the building.

Reloading his automatic revolver, Brooks leaped to new shelter behind Miss Penny, who offered herself to shield him from Goggin's bullets. Unwilling to risk killing the woman, Goggin held his fire and advanced toward the pair through a volley of bullets from Brook's weapon.

Clothing Riddled by Bullets.

Five of Brooks' bullets found a mark in Goggin's clothing. Goggin, however, escaped without a scratch.

Realizing that he was unable to stop Goggin, Brooks, with a wild scream, pushed the girl headlong into the policeman and, turning, vaulted through a window into a large airshaft and crashed five floors to the basement. Strangely unhurt in spite of his fall, Brooks scrambled to his feet and fired his last shot at the head of Goggin, framed in the window, five stories above. Then he crawled into a coal hole, defying other policemen who had arrived meanwhile to follow him.

After a short struggle, however, Brooks was subdued and dragged to a patrol wagon, after he had been pulled from the coal hole by Capts. John Stege, Mangan, and Sergt. Booth.

"By his actions, Policeman Goggin proved that he is a real police officer, courageous and brave and one that would make the supreme sacrifice to protect his fellow police officers and citizens of this community," declared Chief of Detectives William Shoemaker, reporting the incident to Chief Collins.

In somewhat similar fashion, Policeman Jerry O'Connell of the Wabash avenue station won commendation from his superiors. O'Connell crawled through a window into a dark basement to capture a holdup man who had taken refuge there. As he was silhouette in the window, O'Connell was the target for a volley of the bandit's bullets. Unable to distinguish the bandit in the darkness, O'Connell fired at the flashes from the man's revolver and succeeded in wounding him and later dragging him to the outside.

Takes Second Bandit.

Policeman Charles DuShane of the Rogers Park station showed his mettle when he surprised a robber emerging from a broken window in the drug store at 6801 North Clark street. Turning the first captive over to another policeman, Du Shane without hesitation crawled through the window after the robber's confederate, who was found crouching behind the prescription counter, revolver in hand.

Creditable mention is also due Fireman Edward Peters of engine company No. 42, who, when informed by a passing citizen that burglars were looting a building at 215 West Illinois street, rushed to the scene and found two suspicious characters busily engaged in loading merchandise into an automobile.

Borrowing a revolver from a jail guards, Peters covered the men and forced them to drive the automobile to the engine company quarters, where police were summoned and the men taken into custody.

Prince Lvoff first came to the front in the famine year of 1891, where he did good work in the province of Tula. There he had his first collision with the government, which resented his statements concerning the seriousness of the situation. During the Manchurian war he went to the far east to help the sick and wounded.

In the revolution of 1905 he took an active part in progressive Zemstvo organizations and joined the newly formed constitutional-democratic party. He represented Tula in the first duma. He visited America in 1918.

Since He who knows our needs is just,
That somehow, somewhere, meet we must.
Alas for him who never sees
The stars shine through his cypress trees;
Who hopeless lays his dead away
Nor looks to see the breaking day
Across the mournful marbles play;
Who hath not learned in hours of faith
The truth to flesh and sense unknown—
That Life is ever Lord of Death
And Love will never lose its own.

There's a Mighty Big Difference--

There is as much difference in funerals as there is in clothing, automobiles, jewelry, and in everything else that is sold. What you get depends on your own choice.

You can choose to pay a very high price for just ordinary service, ordinary automobile equipment and ordinary quality. Or, you can choose an ordinary price for these same things.

Or, you can do the best thing, and choose a "Hursen" funeral, with its most highly specialized service, its exceptionally elegant automobile equipment, with the greatest elegance and quality ever before known at funerals, and pay but a fraction of the charges made elsewhere.

These "Hursen" features, found nowhere else, have made "Hursen's" the largest undertaking establishment in America. No one has ever successfully competed with Hursen elegance and prices.

"Hursen" limousines and limousine-hearses are the finest funeral automobiles in America. Each was designed by Hursen himself, and each cost a fortune to build. Yet, the charge for the use of these limousines is no greater than the usual auto hire for ordinary and less desirable vehicles. Call Hursen, of course!

Make Us Prove It!

We Say the New Paige and New Jewett Will Revolutionize Your Ideas of Fine Performance

We stand ready to prove this statement. A few minutes' demonstration in either the New Paige or New Jewett will convince the hardest headed driver.

We suggest this: If you feel that the car you drive is a wonderful performer—take it out and put it through the points shown in the illustrations above. Or try out any make of car that you think is best. Then let us take you over the same ground in a New Paige or New Jewett. Put it to the same tests. You will not be obligated in any way. Our salesman will not attempt to "sell" you during the demonstration. He'll just be there to answer any questions you may ask. You do the driving—or if you prefer, just ride. Here's what you'll discover about the New Paige and New Jewett:

Astonishing New Performance

In pickup and getaway the New Paige and New Jewett are a step ahead of everyone. On a slow, hard pull through sand or rough roads, they go through smoothly in high. They swiftly pass others on hills. Or—if you like—they'll crawl smoothly up in high when others are sputtering in "second." And so flexible is their big power that you can drive from 2 miles an hour to top speed in high.

This marvelous new ability has been engineered into these new motors with costly balanced crankshafts; chain drive for pump, cam and timing shafts—with an automatic take-up; improved lubrication and cooling. And many other refinements.

Reserve Power and Strength for Long Life

The New Paige and New Jewett motors are big. They give abundant power for the cars' husky weights—remarkably smooth, silent power. That's why they last—because never strained, never taxed.

Both motors are sixes. That means the utmost in efficiency, and perfection in performance. More cylinders would only complicate their simplicity—just make unnecessary expense for you.

Luxurious Riding Ease

Few cars can equal the new riding comfort of the New Paige and New Jewett. Springs are unusually long. Suspension has been specially designed for the full comfort of balloon tires. No more bumps—no more jars. Just a gentle motion when you cross ruts and holes.

New handling ease, too. Touch steering—with ball-bearing steering spindles and special gearing for balloon tires. Jerking and stalling have been made next to impossible by refinements to the Paige-Jewett saw-blade steel clutch and transmission. And hydraulic four-wheel brakes (Lockheed type) are now optional on all models at slight extra cost.

Permanent Perfected Performance

Our engineers have done more than adding these new qualities to Paige and Jewett. They have done a far greater thing. These qualities have been made permanent in the New Paige and New Jewett.

We repeat our offer. Test either car in a demonstration.

NEW CONSUL HERE

Senor Andres Abela is the newly appointed Cuban consul at Chicago. He is at present in charge of departmental work in the department of state at Havana. He is said to occupy not only a conspicuous position in the official and commercial affairs of Cuba but also as a leader in the active social life of the republic.

THIS TERM TO TEST COOLIDGE AS STATESMAN

Re-election May Reward Success as Pilot.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE.
[Walinger Photo.]

Washington, D. C., March 7.—Calvin Coolidge, inaugurated President "in his own right" last Wednesday, is now fairly embarked on the four year term which will be the supreme test of his statesmanship.

By that test he will stand or fall and his place in history will be determined. Upon that test will depend his own immediate political future. If he retains his hold upon the people which gave him so triumphant a nomination and election, a strong movement undoubtedly will develop to make him a candidate in 1928 for a "second elective term."

If his popularity should wane, however, he may be compelled to take refuge in a strict construction of the unwritten law forbidding a person to aspire to a tenure of more than eight years in the White House.

Public Believes in Him.

The President enters upon this test under peculiarly favorable circumstances. After nineteen months in the White House few if any Presidents have enjoyed so large a measure of public good will, so great a freedom from criticism, as does Mr. Coolidge.

The professional political opposition has been unable to convict him of any important offenses of either commission or omission and has been reduced to petty fault finding. He may make a big mistake yet that will give the Democratic organizations their chance—it will be strange if he proves an exception to the rule—but so far he is "sitting pretty."

A spectacular administration with Mr. Coolidge in the White House is not looked for and yet he has in mind doing some particularly big things.

From the standpoint of widest geographical interest, the President's earnest desire to bring about another international conference for the reduction and limitation of naval armaments holds a foremost place.

Akin to it in its bearing on our foreign relations is the proposal, inherited from President Harding, of American participation in the permanent court of international justice set up by the league of nations at The Hague and now functioning.

Seeks Farm Solution.

Then, there are major domestic questions directly affecting the population as a whole or certain classes of the population. He will seek to solve what is known as the farm problem without resort to measures devised to give the federal government a paternalistic control over the products of agriculture, with a view to benefiting the producers. He will make a further effort to revise the existing revenue act so as to embody in it the main principles of the ill-fated Mellon plan for the reduction of direct taxation. But with reference to the indirect taxation found in the customs tariff he stands firmly for maintenance of the protective system.

These and other matters of importance to the people are in the President's mind as he enters upon his new term.

Of those others, some relate to the railroad, ocean shipping, better means of inland waterway communication, extension of the civil service, and a host of less vital questions, each of which, however, touches some segment of the American people.

In the matter of human relationships affecting the President's new term the personality of Gen. Charles G. Dawes has a place in the picture. While as Vice President he may not have a conspicuous official part to play, that personality is regarded as too vigorous to permit its possessor to be relegated to a seat in the political background. Besides, Gen. Dawes comes to Washington with the prestige of having been largely instrumental in formulating the plan to which his name has been attached for attacking the chaos produced by the German reparations problem.

On Friendly Terms.

From all accounts the new Vice President is on friendly terms with the President, and in making the Republican party a going concern he may be extremely useful to Mr. Coolidge through his relationship to the senate.

Mr. Coolidge is no exception to the rule that the composition of a cabinet may have a marked effect upon the carrying out of presidential policies. He has few if any enemies. If he has not the personal qualities which couple affection with loyalty, he has characteristics which lull any active hatred among those public men whose principles and policies do not run parallel with his.

Not being a mixer, therefore, Mr. Coolidge must depend to a great extent upon the mixing ability of his advisers.

Mr. Kellogg as secretary of state will have a background of large law experience, including service under President Roosevelt as government prosecutor of great business combinations, six years in the senate, and his venture into the realms of high diplomacy as ambassador to Great Britain.

In Accord with Jardine.

Great interest attaches to the development of the Coolidge agricultural policies with the new secretary of agriculture, Dr. William M. Jardine, as adviser of the President.

President Coolidge is keen to bring about better conditions in farming. He found that Dr. Jardine, in spite of his upbringing in communities where radical proposals for aiding agriculture were rampant, was in agreement with him that solution of the farm problem lay mainly with the farmers themselves, and not in dependence upon federal legislation, except such as may enable them to help finance and market their crops.

Dangers of New Congress.

As far as the political makeup of the new congress is concerned, President Coolidge is in better position than he has been since he succeeded Mr. Harding. He will have a new congress to deal with, a congress more to his liking, but impregnated with uncertain elements dangerous to the policies the executive hopes to accomplish. The danger applies especially to the senate.

In any consideration of the makeup of the senate, William E. Borah of Idaho is always a factor to be reckoned with. As chairman of the committee on foreign relations, he occupies a conspicuous and influential position.

At this time the importance of his relationship to President Coolidge is augmented by the President's keen desire that his government affiliate with the world court.

Coolidge and Borah.

There is a disposition in political circles in Washington to believe that President Coolidge will maintain a closer relationship with Senator Borah as chairman of the committee on foreign relations than he did with Senator Lodge when the latter occupied that position. There seems to be a liking between the two men and an inclination on the President's part to consult Senator Borah on important public questions. But how far their apparently mutual friendly feeling will operate with respect to the world court and other matters of international consequence is extremely uncertain.

FIND DRY AGENTS DEAD AND RAIDED HOUSE IN ASHES

Lake Charles, La., March 7.—The bodies of L. G. Collins, federal prohibition agent, and Samuel E. Duhon, deputy sheriff, missing since they left here for a liquor raid last night, were found late today in an old cemetery near the town of Starks. The bodies lay on the back seat of Duhon's automobile and were riddled with shots.

Collins and Duhon were to have met other deputy sheriffs last night for a search of the home of the Dunn brothers some two miles from Vinton and the latter are held in the parish jail here pending the outcome of the death of the two men and also of the burning of Dunn's home, which occurred last night.

AL TELLS WHY IT'S HARD TO PUT DRY LAW ACROSS

Can't Get Funds, N. Y. Governor Says.

New York, March 7.—[Special.]—Gov. Al Smith defended his position on state prohibition enforcement this afternoon in a debate with Lieut. Gov. Seymour Lowman before the Women's City club.

GOV. AL SMITH. [Marceau Photo.]

Mr. Lowman, who opened the debate, criticized the governor's executive budget plan, his stand on state dry enforcement, and asserted the executive desired to snatch from the legislative body control over the state purse.

Officers Hands Are Tied.

Lowman said that although he had heard the governor say that law must be enforced he knew when he told prosecuting officers and police to enforce the Volstead law that without an enforcement act they could not do it.

"Everything is free and easy in New York City at present," he said. "If we want to put an end to the reign of terror and bootleggers we have got to put back on the statute books of New York state a law to enforce the eighteenth amendment."

"I accept the issue of law enforcement," Gov. Smith said. "Too many people have become confused and, instead of asking for the enforcement of the law, they are asking for more laws. The Volstead act is the law of the land and the law of the state. It is as sacred as any state law.

Must Furnish Funds.

"The question of law enforcement can only be solved by appropriations for policing and prosecution. The Mullan-Gage law was written into the statute books without $1 of appropriations. The law enforcement measure advocated at present by the Republicans is only a kindly gesture to satisfy the drys. The proper way to send an enforcement measure to me is to send it accompanied by a bill providing for enforcement appropriations."

The courts of New York county before the Mullan-Gage act was repealed reflected the conditions described by United States Attorney Buckner as existing in the federal courts, the governor said. It took eighteen months for a case to come to trial, so crowded were the courts.

In 1922, he said, there were 2,695 men out on bail awaiting trial and 221 in prison. Today there are only 479 men on bail and 169 in prison awaiting trial in this county.

CONSTITUTION IGNORED IN KAROLYI RULING CIVIC LEAGUE SAYS

New York, March 7.—Protests to the state department at what was described as denial of free speech to Count Michael Karolyi, former president of Hungary and Hungarian liberal leader, were made today at a luncheon given under the auspices of the American Civil Liberties union in honor of Count and Countess Karolyi at the Hotel Astor.

Most of those present, it was stated, signed a resolution which John Haynes Holmes, chairman of the meeting, announced would be delivered by a special delegation to Secretary of State Kellogg at Washington.

The resolution "protests the action of the state department in prohibiting Count Karolyi from discussing Hungarian politics while in this country" and requests Secretary Kellogg to "reopen the case with a view to allowing him the freedom which has traditionally been accorded by our governments to all political exiles."

Count Karolyi spoke in appreciation of the sympathy shown his cause, but did not discuss politics, nor the attitude of the state deparment toward him.

INQUIRY INTO AUDITOR'S DEATH.

Authorities of Harvey, Ill., began investigation yesterday of the death of John W. Coy, railroad auditor, of Cleveland, O., whose body was found in a gas-filled room at 15112 South May street. Coy had been drinking heavily of late, Chief of Police Swanson was told.

WETS BEGIN DRIVE TO UPSET DRY CONGRESS REGIME

Washington, D. C., March 7.—[Special.]—Coördination of all activities of the association against the prohibition amendment, the formation of committees of business and professional men in 200 congressional districts to prepare for the 1926 "off year" election, and a concerted drive against the enemies of modification of the Volstead act, was announced by G. C. Hinckley, secretary of the association, today.

Plan to Unseat Drys.

Memorandums dealing with the plans of the wet organization were sent out to the twenty-eight state branches and to active members throughout the United States, and the predictions are that strong political committees seeking the overthrow of the present dry régime on capitol hill will be well organized during the next three months.

Twenty-five volunteer citizens' committees have already taken up the work in New York state. Another committee is functioning in Washington and has undertaken the responsibility of working in the two Maryland districts represented in the house of representatives by dry congressmen. State branches of the association have been urged to immediately form similar committees, and to begin at once campaigns to elect liberal men in the 1926 congressional elections.

Drive Is Nation-Wide.

"Any work on the part of the association against the prohibition amendment which does not have for its object the increasing of the liberal strength in congress is largely a waste of time and money—because congress alone has power to legislate so as to bring relief from the present laws and the bad conditions that have resulted from them," the memorandum to state branches and active members reads. "We have, therefore, planned a concerted nation-wide drive to build up organizations within the next few months, in as many congressional districts as possible where there is considerable wet sentiment, but which are now represented by congressmen who vote dry."

NEW YORK USES ANTITOXIN FOR SCARLET FEVER

New York, March 7.—Adoption by the city health department of the Dick method of treating scarlet fever, in which use is made of serum obtained from horses injected with scarlatinal toxin, was announced today by Health Commissioner Frank J. Monaghan.

The new test, discovered by Dr. George Dick and his wife, Dr. Gladys Dick, of Chicago, is similar to the Schick test used in determining susceptibility to diphtheria.

The treatment, toxin for which now is being made at the health department laboratories, recently was put to use after experiments starting last December.

Given 18 Month Term for Selling Fake Rum Stamps

Federal Judge Samuel Alschuler yesterday sentenced Julius Bubley, 1218 Independence boulevard, to serve eighteen months in Leavenworth penitentiary following a plea of guilty to the charges of selling counterfeit whisky strip stamps. Isaac Hirshorn and Isadore Feinstein, who were found guilty of similar charges by a jury, were granted stays of execution of their sentences until March 14.

Teddy's Widow Sails for Genoa; Not to Join Sons

New York, March 7.—Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, widow of the former president, sailed on the Conte Verde for Genoa today. Through Archibald Roosevelt, who was aboard the vessel to bid his mother good-by, it was learned that Mrs. Roosevelt does not contemplate joining Kermit and Col. Theodore Roosevelt Jr. when they come out of the wilds of Asia.

The Lyon & Healy Grand

NOW all the advantages of the grand piano may be enjoyed in the moderate-sized home—and at moderate cost!

For generations the beauty of the grand piano has been the subject of universal admiration. Its elegance and grace have been a constant inspiration to home-makers—its sonorous charm of tone an ever-present joy to lovers of music. But its cost was long prohibitive for people of modest means—its size and tonal volume too great for any but the largest homes.

In the Lyon & Healy Grand all the virtues of the grand piano are brought within a size taking but little more floor space than an upright. It has the same nobility of line that distinguishes the larger grand. A voice of rare sweetness, richly colorful, "sings under the fingers." Here, undoubtedly, is the ideal piano for the home! Its advantages are enhanced still more by certain exclusive Lyon & Healy features. The Candelectra, twin electric lamps, illumine music desk and keyboard. The Junior Untolding Two-level Pedal is the greatest improvement in the piano in more than fifty years! It is of vital importance to small children. For the first time, it gives them full control of the piano and makes it possible to play with expression! The world's foremost pianists say every child should have the benefit of this remarkable invention. Let us demonstrate it to you! With all its superiority, the Lyon & Healy Grand Piano is now priced well within your reach. Our plan makes it surprisingly easy to own one.

GERMANS HOPE U. S. WILL SIGN SECURITY PACT

See World Peace Assured by Rhine Guarantee.

Belgium and Germany, seemed to him to be feasible and would be an acceptable solution. He repeated his house of commons statement that ratification of the Geneva protocol would be impossible because of the attitude of the dominions.

"BRITISH SAFETY FIRST"

In the first section of this article, published March 1, the author emphasized the importance of strengthening the British entente with France and Belgium against the possible war of revenge, following rehabilitation of Germany. The possible complete ascendency of the peace party in Berlin he suggested as opening the door to the Teutons to join western Europe in a joint defense against the new Asiatic frontier now advanced from the Ural mountains to the Polish frontier.

BY AUGUR.

Written for the March Fortnightly Review of London by a man who is known to have the confidence of the British foreign and war offices.

LONDON, March 7.—The line of British security is on the Rhine and on the Scheldt. Geographically France and Belgium are within this line. This is the first reason why we must have them with us. With us and not against us. For the middle solution of neutrality has ceased to exist, as the example of Belgium has proved in 1914. We must also have these countries with us because, if Germany becomes a danger, she will be a great danger. The splendid industrial organization of Germany and the capacities of Germany's military experts guarantee effective warlike preparation. We cannot afford to neglect a single element which may assist success. French military power will not increase, but for a long time it will remain considerable, and even Belgian assistance is not to be despised. These are the reasons why, when considering British security, we must bring in the French and the Belgians. Under this angle and the Belgians.

At the first glance it appears that, under a different sauce, the old dish of the security pacts is being prepared again. This is not so. When we say that the line of British security is on the Rhine, this means that we refuse to be committed at all eastwards of that line. The negotiations with M. Poincare for a security pact broke down because he demanded a definite commitment as to the numbers of the expeditionary force and also the inclusion of Poland. Neither of these points was cenceded then. Much less can they be conceded now.

The position today is simplified by the fact that France, and especially Belgium, have reduced their pretensions, and, for example, will not insist any more on their demand for a definite promise of a British expeditionary force of a certain size.

View on Germany Joining.

There are people in this country who believe that the solution is in a pact of security which would include Germany. This solution is the ideal one. There is this objection to it, that, being ideal, it is not practical, because Germany's inclusion into the pact would mean the complete surrender by her of the cherished hope of a revanche on her eastern border. Such a surrender can only occur when the party of forceful revenge in Germany is conquered.

What really seems indicated as an immediate practical solution is the close coöperation of the allied general staffs, but without any obligation for the governments to be bound by any tentative scheme which the military experts may prepare. A resumption, in fact, and an extension of the prewar Wilson-Dubail agreement of 1906, which was so fruitful in preparing common action in case of German aggression.

The situation today resembles in many respects that which existed before the war. But there is a difference. Then it was thought necessary to keep the arrangements secret, because Europe was hypnotised by the idea that war was inevitable. Now the object is not to make war, but to prevent it by all means. This object would be certainly defeated if the Germans did not know exactly what they will come up against if they allow the ardour for revenge to gain the upper hand. If there is to be an entente of the general staffs it must be a public one, and, in any case, the German government should be aware of its existence.

Geneva Protocol Useless.

The Geneva protocol is at present useless—useless because premature. It presupposes an international situation in social affairs which exists yet only in the imagination of certain idealists. When a league of nations will embrace all peoples, and when and if these peoples learn to place the interests of humanity above their own national ones, then the protocol will come so naturally that there will not be even a ripple of discussion.

What could have been the draft of an important international document of great educational value has become a bad bill of exchange which will not be honored. The British government is anxiously considering ways and means to get rid of the whole business.

So let us stand firmly on the strong ground of British interests and of British security, and let us leave to the future what belongs to it, the building up of real national leagues, regional or world embracing. There is a special reason why this is the only attitude which we can usefully assume. It lies in the peculiar structure of the British empire as it exists today. In 1914 Great Britain went to war with Germany without consulting the view of the dominions. The dominions were not consulted before the war began, neither was their approval of the declaration of war asked for afterward officially. Neither did the dominions expect to be so consulted at that time. But now the situation has undergone a complete change. The great dominions, by their effort in the war and with our consent, have acquired national status not only within the empire itself but also among the states of the world.

Even if it were fair, we could not consult the empire about a French or a Belgian interest. With the best will in the world the dominions would not be able to understand us, and certainly would refuse to follow us in assuming a binding obligation towards peoples which do not belong to the British commonwealth of nations. The only possible way of approaching the dominions is by making out a simple, straight case for a British interest; for British security.

Where White Indians Struck Blow for Freedom

This is a view of Figie (Tiger) village in San Blas gulf, where the revolt of the San Blas Indians against the Panama forces was inaugurated. The Indians, according to R. O. Marsh, American explorer, declared their independence on Feb. 12 and, after requesting American protection, attacked Porvinir, killing a number of Panamans. The republic of Panama has agreed to give them autonomy.

[Pacific and Atlantic Photos.]

MARSH TELLS OF WHITE INDIANS' WAR ON PANAMA

Declared Independence on Lincoln's Birthday.

BY GERALD MARTIN.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

COLON, Panama, Mahch 7.—R. O. Marsh, the American explorer, aboard the U. S. S. Cleveland, lying in Colon bay tonight, made a statement exclusively to THE TRIBUNE. Mr. Marsh recently discovered Panama's "white Indians."

"A year ago when visiting the San Blas Indians I determined to return again and help them, even if I lost my life in the attempt," he said. "Tule nation declared its independence on Feb. 12, and is requesting American protection. Their declaration was delivered to the Panama and American authorities on Feb. 20 at Panama, and the Tule forces struck their first blow on Sunday, Feb. 22. By Wednesday night, Feb. 25, all the Panama forces were driven from Tule territory. The Tule forces observed all the war rules, showing great clemency to the Panamans wherever possible.

Praise for U. S. Minister.

"On Thursday, Feb. 26, the American cruiser Cleveland, with the American minister, arrived. The splendid and masterly action of the American minister and his aides prevented the resumption of warfare between the Tule people and the newly recruited Panaman army, and after several days of negotiations under the direction of the American minister an agreement was signed by the Panaman government representatives and the Tule chieftains, promising the Indians all the essential points demanded by them except the cession of the ownership of the land, which was left for future consideration.

Sees Prospects of Peace.

"If this agreement, witnessed by the American minister, is honestly observed by the Panamans, the Indians will have secured the peace and justice due them. I will remain on this American warship until requested to leave by my government."

Mr. Marsh is well, notwithstanding the strain and two days of bad fever, and will remain on the Cleveland until his return to the United States. Mr. Marsh denied strongly that any business interests are backing him in his efforts to aid the Indians.

Skipper Asks Divorce So Wife Can't Claim Body

Because Capt. Dennis C. McMahon, skipper of an excursion boat which plies between the municipal pier and Lincoln park in the summer, fears his wife might be able to bury his body where she pleased, he appeared before Judge Joseph Sabath yesterday and asked for a divorce. His wife deserted him, he declared, in 1899, after they had been married a year. When he dies he doesn't want her to appear to claim his body. The judge indicated he would grant the decree.

WILSON Y. M. C. A. BOY WINS IN AIRCRAFT MEET

Herman Gordon, 13 years old, of the Wilson avenue Y. M. C. A., took first place in the miniature aircraft duration contest yesterday afternoon at the Central "Y." His tiny craft, measuring less than twelve inches in any direction, in three flights stayed in the air for 27 seconds, or twelve more than his nearest rival.

Young Gordon with the next nine best performances represented the Chicago flying team which competed yesterday in an international match with France and Poland. The results of yesterday's meets, held simultaneously in the three countries, will be flashed by radio. All contestants were under 15 years of age and built their planes since Jan. 1. Charles Taylor, 14, of White City took second place with 15 seconds for three flights; Winston Bisette, 14, Wilson "Y," was third with 14 seconds.

POSTL TELLS NEW WAY TO BUILD HEALTH AT HOME

AFTER fourteen years' experience as the physical trainer and conditioner of Chicago's most prominent business men, Chas. M. Postl now offers a remarkably easy way for every man and woman to promote bodily vigor through the pores of the skin.

For Men and Women

The average person takes into his body each day 124 ounces of solid and liquid food which must be disposed of by the kidneys, the bowels, the lungs and the skin in the same length of time. The first three eliminating agents are easily kept in good working order. But few people realize the extreme importance of the skin as an eliminator of body poisons and waste. The pores of the skin dispose of 24 ounces of waste every 24 hours. Bathing with soap and water merely removes the surface accumulation of this waste. It does not get down into the pores and thoroughly cleanse them.

Exercises Skin

Postl's VIGOROIL is applied to the skin after bathing and rubbed dry. It opens the pores and causes them to discharge the full 24 ounces of waste which it is their duty to eliminate every day. It overcomes stiffness, soreness, rheumatism, sciatica, neuralgia, lumbago, sprains, etc. VIGOROIL gives you a soft, velvety, ruddy, vigorous looking skin which is the badge of health and vitality. Wonderful after golf, tennis or hand ball. Keeps your muscles from becoming stiff and sore.

Try It at Our Risk

Mr. Postl wants every man to have an opportunity of trying his great discovery, VIGOROIL. Obtain it from any druggist or sporting goods dealer, or send coupon today with 75 cents and we will mail you a full size bottle for trial. If you are not absolutely satisfied with the results you obtain, you may have your money back.

The North American is one dining-place that specializes on fish and sea-food at prices within the reach of all. For instance:

Halibut and Peas . . . . 40c
Special Whitefish Dinner . 65c

A fine portion of broiled whitefish, with French fried potatoes and lettuce salad, 5 to 8 week days—all day on Wednesdays and Fridays.

At the North American Restaurant the food is the "Bill of Fare" —you see it before you buy it

One seldom buys a thing without seeing it. Yet in the very important matter of food many people order blindly from the cold type of a printed Bill of Fare, which tells them nothing at all about quality, or the size of the portion.

But that isn't the case at the North American. Here you make your selections from the food itself, which is arranged for your inspection and choice on our 365 feet of display tables. You don't need to ask anyone, "What's good today?" The food tells its own story of goodness, and you know immediately what you wish to eat.

And of course the noticeable saving in the cost is a further advantage of "serving yourself" here. For we don't need to add anything to our prices to cover the cost of service to the tables. Hence: While our food is fully the equal of that served by the most expensive hotels and restaurants our prices are surprisingly low.

Don't forget our famous breakfast items:

Honey Waffles: With 3 strips of bacon or Mickelberry's Old Farm sausage, butter and pure maple sap or honey . . . . 25c

Bacon and Eggs: 2 fresh eggs, fried in butter and 4 strips of bacon . . . . . 30c (To order from 7 a. m. to Midnight)

The children are always welcome here!

Weil-McLain Increases boiler efficiency to meet high fuel costs

Long back-and-forth fire travel over heating surfaces corrugated like this 〰 instead of straight like this ——

The many years of research and study which preceded our announcement, 5 years ago, of the present Weil-McLain Boiler were devoted to the serious problem of conquering boiler waste. We fully realized that even the small fuel wastes of the best of the early types of boilers would now, due to high fuel prices, prove a financial burden. Just what our engineers have done to overcome these wastes is a subject of vital interest to every home owner.

Round-Type Boiler

For steam, vapor, vacuum and hot water heating; made in sizes for bungalows, residences and small apartments.

Sizes for Oil Burners

The quick, intense heat produced by modern oil burners demands in a boiler a great amount of concentrated heat-absorbing surface and a long fire travel. You get all this in Weil-McLain Boilers. The "5 section" and the "6 section" sizes of round-type boilers and the longer sizes of square-type boilers are most suitable for use with oil burners.

Two costly wastes now ended

An inspection of this famous boiler reveals advancements which we believe will change many of your ideas concerning boiler design and operation.

You will learn, for example, how in this boiler the two chief enemies of your coal pile and home comfort have been conquered; how costly wastes both DOWN INTO THE ASH PIT and UP THE CHIMNEY are finally ended.

No more waste into the ash pit

One means of ending waste in Weil-McLain Boilers is Scientific Combustion—an advancement in boiler efficiency of the most important character.

Scientific combustion not only means burning every available atom of fuel and ending waste down into the ash pit but it makes a world of difference in boiler performance and handling.

Those who have not studied this modern development cannot begin to appreciate what it means in satisfactory boiler operation.

Chimney waste is also ended

But it is not alone in combating this waste that Weil-McLain engineers have scored.

Never was there a boiler, thanks to their continued efforts, which goes so far in ending costly waste up the chimney.

The Weil-McLain corrugated "double-surface" crown sheet section, directly above the fire, and the corrugation of all other vital heating surfaces are improvements of the most far-reaching nature.

The heating surfaces are corrugated like this 〰, instead of straight like this ——, giving an increased area of heating surface, making possible greater heat absorption, preventing waste of valuable heat units up the chimney.

The corrugated design of the crown sheet section is particularly vital and valuable. This heating surface, located directly above the fire, is the most valuable heating surface in any boiler, as proved by the candle test.

By doubling the heating surface at this important point and by corrugating the heating surface in all other sections, a very unusual degree of heat absorption is achieved.

Another step in ending chimney waste

But Weil-McLain engineers went still further. By means of a new and different application of the tried and proved principle of long "back-and-forth" fire travel, they produced an effect which wins the admiration of experienced heating men.

The illustration shows how the hot gases must travel forward and backward between the sections. Hence, they are held longer in contact with the corrugated heating surfaces. There are no short cuts to the chimney.

The purchase of a boiler lacking "back-and-forth" fire travel, in view of these facts, would seem an unnecessary extravagance.

Other Weil-McLain advancements

The foregoing as well as the following features are appreciated in full measure only when long periods of zero weather demonstrate all that they supply in satisfactory home heating.

—Triangular grates which crush out stubborn clinkers.

—Lower one-third of firepot smooth and non-clogging, so fire shakes down easily and clean.

—Large fire and slicing doors for your convenience.

—Handy front clean-out doors in each section.

—And more heat from less fuel with oil, or any other kind of fuel or any method of firing.

BANDITS FEAST ON CHIEF'S WIFE AND DAUGHTER

Gives Followers "Most Precious Banquet."

BY CHARLES DAILEY.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PEKING, Feb. 3.—[By Mail.]—A most amazing and almost unbelievable tale comes to Peking from Kalgan regarding a feast on human flesh following the formation of a new group of bandits in Mongolia. The nucleus of the band is the former military garrison of Chang Pei Hsien, where it had kept order for more than four years.

After looting the city and robbing the people they had so carefully guarded, the bandits were last reported at Dolonor, and are believed to be raiding in the Jehol area of what is generally known as Inner Mongolia. The report comes from official sources and has been confirmed by foreigners.

Among the results of the recent political upheaval in China as the outcome of the fighting of last autumn and the coup d'état of Feng Yu-Hsiang, by which the Christian general obtained control of Peking and all the territory to the west thereof was the appointment of Feng Yu-Hsian as defense commissioner of the northwest frontier, which includes Mongolia and Chinese Turkestan.

Shoots 725 Soldiers.

He made Gen. Chang Chih-Kiang military director of the extramural area known as Chahar, the military capital of which is Kalgan, 120 miles west of Peking. On his arrival there during Christmas week Gen. Chang signalized his assumption of power by the wholesale shooting of 725 soldiers of the command of his predecessor, on the charge of looting. As told in dispatches to THE TRIBUNE at the time, these men were lined up in batches on the bridge across the river which bisects the town and were shot, their bodies falling twenty feet to the ice below.

Having duly impressed his authority upon the people of Kalgan, an important trading center and the end of the camel trails from Mongolia, Gen. Chang turned himself to the reorganization of the local and military authorities of the Chahar area. In due season his political agents reached Chang Pei Hsien, a walled city forty miles north of Kalgan.

The local magistrate, roughly corresponding to a county governor, was removed, and with him all his various underlings. The men removed included the commander of the local garrison and it was intended to replace his troops with others, following the usual custom. The only difference was the clapping into the jail of the garrison commander.

The troops of this captain, numbering about 120, knew that they, as well as the captain himself, would be put to death, and they decided to flee. They looted the town, battered the jail doors down, liberated the captain, and told him he was free to go where he pleased; as for them, they were going to return to banditry. The captain thanked them, and said before they departed he would like to give them a dinner.

Evening came and the 120 men sat down to a sumptuous feast, which included delicately cooked meats. At the conclusion of the feast the captain made an address to his men, in which he said:

"I have been deeply moved, and I thank you most sincerely for your loyalty and your action in releasing me from the prison, which in all probability would have been my death cell. In token of my appreciation of your loyalty I have given you the most precious dinner possible for me to provide and one that required heroic sacrifice on my part. My comrades, you have just eaten the flesh of my wife and my daughter. I have nothing else left in the world and life now means nothing to me. Hereafter I am with you as your leader in the enterprise you have undertaken."

COURT REFUSES THEIR PLEA

THE REV. JOSEPH LYCELL.

MRS. ANNA LINDSTEDT.

COURT FAILS TO CLEAR PARSON OF LOVE THEFT

Denies Mrs. Lindstedt's Plea to Annul Divorce.

Judge Joseph Sabath yesterday refused the suit for annulment of the divorce which Mrs. Anna Lindstedt claimed her former husband, John, obtained without her having been sufficiently informed of the proceedings.

Lindstedt obtained his divorce a year and a half ago, charging that his wife had had intimate relations with the Rev. Joseph Lysell, singing evangelist of the Swedish Baptist church. He roomed at their house while he was conducting services in the Edgewater Swedish Baptist church. Since then Lindstedt has remarried. The plea for annulment was brought after Lycell claimed that he had been disgraced by false charges.

The Judge's Ruling.

In denying the plea, Judge Sabath said: "There are three reasons for filing such a bill as this. They are fraud, error, or newly discovered evidence.

"If there is any fraud, Mrs. Lindstedt was as guilty as any one, because she knowingly permitted her husband to get a divorce on grounds of infidelity.

"If there was an error in the divorce proceedings, why did Mrs. Lindstedt and the Rev. Mr. Lycell wait for a year and a half before calling it to the attention of the court?

No New Evidence.

"And the records show that there has been no newly discovered evidence presented.

"I find no cause to sustain this bill and it is therefore dismissed."

SPIKE RUMORS OF STOKES TRIAL BEING STOPPED

Ex-Sen. Lewis to Protect Helen's Interests.

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK.

Ex-Senator James Hamilton Lewis' lengthy conference yesterday with Mrs. Helen Ellwood Stokes and her mother, Mrs. Arthur Scott Miller, gave rise to the speculation that the Chicago attorney was about to take an active part in the prosecution of W. E. D. Stokes, now on trial before Judge William N. Gemmill for conspiring with others to defame his wife.

Rumors that Attorney Lewis, on behalf of the two women, was to file a petition to act as amicus curiae during the rest of the trial was denied on all sides.

Friend Rather than Lawyer.

"Senator Lewis," Mrs. Miller explained, "is an old family friend of mine and of my people. He has kindly offered to be of any assistance to me during these trying weeks. But he is acting in the capacity of a friend, and not that of a lawyer.

"It is in that way that he will look out for my interests and for those of my family during the remaining days of the trial."

And there are to be "remaining days" of the trial. For the Stokes case is going on and the eight postcards are going out.

For Assistant State's Attorney W. W. Smith and Milton D. Smith, in charge of the prosecution; and Attorney Charles F. Rathbun, counsel for Mr. Stokes and his colored co-defendant, Robert H. Lee, both spiked any rumors to the contrary.

Remand Trial Was Off.

Ever since Friday afternoon when Judge Gemmill rebuked Prosecutor Milton D. Smith for reading to the jury a series of anonymous postcards which he implied had been sent, with their horrid messages, by Stokes to his wife, her two small children and her mother, there has been unofficial talk that the trial was off.

Judge Gemmill decisively denied any such rumors, and indicated that the trial would proceed as usual tomorrow morning.

"It is exceedingly unfortunate," W. W. Smith explained yesterday, "that a side issue in this important case should divert public attention from the main part of the story. Suppose, for the sake of argument, that Mr. Stokes did not write those postal cards, that doesn't make him a saint; nor does it free him one whit from the charge of conspiracy."

To Call Billig.

The state yesterday made plans to call as a rebuttal witness Hal Billig, a cousin of Mrs. Stokes, and the gentleman to whom Mr. Stokes, on the stand Thursday and Friday, devoted so much attention. Mr. Stokes described him, standing on tiptoe in Mrs. Stokes' dressing room, hiding from Mr. Stokes as he conversed with Mrs. Stokes, who, the old man testified, was clad only in her corsets, stockings, and slippers.

Mr. Stokes will be on the stand tomorrow for further cross examination by Prosecutor Milton D. Smith. Following Mr. Stokes, according to Mr. Rathbun's plans announced last night, will come the two Pullman conductors and three Pullman porters, alleged to have seen Mrs. Stokes and Hal Billig traveling together on the train.

Poor Artist Finds Picture by Morillo; Gets $30,000

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, March 7.—An unknown masterpiece, called "Christ's Vision in the Garden of Olives," by Murillo, was discovered in Nantes in the possession of a portrait painter named Maillard, who previously had been living in poverty. M. Maillard announced tonight that he had sold the painting to a private collector of London (it is understood to be Lord Rothschild) for $30,000. M. Maillard found the picture in an abandoned country house never visited by its owners. He purchased it for a song.

SEVEN CHILDREN OF W. R. MANIERRE SHARE MILLION

Seven sons and daughters will receive most of the $1,000,00 estate of the late William Reid Manierre, pioneer Chicagoan, lawyer and manufacturer, according to his will, filed for probate yesterday. Mr. Manierre died on March 3.

The will provides that each of the grandchildren be given $500, those who are named after the manufacturer to get an additional $500. Two "faithful employès," Bert Salvage and Alida Foley, are given $500 each.

The remainder of the estate is to be held in trust by the Illinois Merchants' Trust company, the income to be divided equally among the seven children, who are: George, of Milwaukee; Cyrus Edson Manierre, New York; Harold Lee Manierre, New York; Mrs. Marguerite M. Brown, New York; Mrs. Julia Edson Mann, 1507 North Dearborn street; Mrs. Peter Henderson, 1045 Park avenue, New York, and Mrs. Wilhelmine Rogers, 1507 North Dearborn street.

Labor Secretary Davis to Address Women Lawyers

The principal speaker of the evening will be James Davis, secretary of labor, and his subject will be the "Immigrant and the Immigration Laws." The Supreme court justices of Illinois also will be guests. Miss Charlotte D. White of 76 West Monroe street, has charge of the reservations.

On Two Weeks' Trial

J. A. Nelson, 4544 Lake Park avenue, was arraigned yesterday for beating his 7 year old son, Jackie. "I'd like to see the person who could handle him without beating," Nelson told Judge Morgan. "Well, I'm your person," said Assistant State's Attorney Marie O. Andressen. She then proposed to take Jackie for two weeks and try it, and the court agreed.

LAKE STATES TO CARRY ON FIGHT AGAINST CHICAGO

Cleveland, O., March 7.—A conference of attorneys general of all great lakes states except Illinois probably will be called to outline the next step in the battle to limit the diversion of Lake Michigan waters through the Chicago drainage canal, Harvey D. Goulder, attorney for the Lake Carriers' association, announced today.

Suggestion for the meeting is to go out in a few days as a result of the ruling of Secretary of War John W. Weeks Friday authorizing a diversion of 8,500 cubic feet a second.

Girl's Case Against Building Owner Delayed

When Joseph Callio, owner of a building at 114 Townsend street, was arraigned before Judge Henry M. Walker yesterday on a charge of attacking a 13 year old girl who lives in the same building, he asked for a chance to defend himself. His case was postponed until March 21, but he was held in the meantime in $10,000 bonds.

SANITARY CHIEFS SEE HARD CLIMB TO MEET TERMS

Estimate Building Costs at $70,000,000.

While members and engineers of the sanitary district were jubilant yesterday over the permit granted by Secretary of War Weeks for an 8,500 cubic foot flow of water for sewage disposal, they were all deeply concerned with the construction program imposed by the grant and agreed that Chicago and the drainage board face the hardest task in their careers to meet all of the obligations.

To provide treatment plants to care for a population of 1,200,000 in five years, as stipulated in the permit, means that the board will have to spend in the neighborhood of $54,000,000 as against $25,000,000 it had planned to spend for the same period.

Must Build Flood Gates.

Another unlooked for expense will be the construction of flood gates at the mouth of the river to prevent the flow of the river to lake in times of flood. Engineers refused to give any flat estimate of the cost of such a project but were of the opinion it would run several millions of dollars.

While the secretary of war followed in most cases the recommendations of the twenty-eight engineers who studied the sanitary district, in this case his ruling was contrary. The engineering board of review considered regulating works at the river's mouth but found no reason for recommending such an installation.

However, Chief Engineer E. J. Kelly of the sanitary district wired from New Orleans that the district has "won a great victory."

"I have not seen the decision," he said, "but if it carries out the program suggested in the engineering commission report, the district can meet the conditions, provided the legislature acts favorably on the bond and tax increase propositions. It is to be regretted that Senator McCormick could not have lived to see this victory, as he worked earnestly for our cause at all times and was greatly responsible for our success.

"Immediately on my return to Chicago I will take up the flood gates stipulation."

Big Financial Problem.

"The conditions of the permit are not easy," Phillip Harrington, assistant chief engineer said yesterday. "The people and the board are confronted with a serious financial problem to carry out the construction program outlined in the permit. "The engineering ability of the board will be taxed to the limit in meeting the obligations imposed."

Mr. Harrington roughly estimated that incidental and miscellaneous work in connection with the five year program laid down by the permit would bring the total cost of the entire program to between $65,000,000 and $70,000,000. Trustees pointed out the hardship of such a program in five years, when the board had planned to spend only $24,000,000 more over a twenty year period.

"I am glad, of course, that the permit has been granted," said Lawrence F. King, president of the board. "It has been a long and hard fight, but now that it is out of the way we will have an opportunity to get down to business and show the war department our willingness to carry out our part of the agreement. It will work a terrific hardship on the district and we will have to have some increase in taxes to care for operating costs of the new plants."

Mr. King estimated that with the passage of the bill now before the state legislature authorizing an increase in the bonding power from 3 to 5 per cent, the board would be barely able to meet the construction program.

TO PUSH METER BILL

Complete coöperation with the war department's demand for the speedy adoption of a city-wide metering program is planned by city administration leaders. Ordinances contemplating such a program were prepared more than a year ago by Commissioner of Public Works A. A. Sprague. Their introduction into the council as one of the major improvements pledged by Mayor Dever has been deferred, however, while the administration bent its energies toward solution of the city's traction problem.

While neither Mayor Dever nor Commissioner Sprague would discuss their plans yesterday, close friends pointed out that both have repeatedly urged a universal metering system.

Mayor Behind Issue.

The same friends recalled that in one of his first special messages to the city council, the mayor stressed the need of a metering program, the adoption of which, as one of several great public improvements, including a traction problem solution, the widening and double-decking of South Water street, consolidation of near south side railroad terminals and the building of the Calumet harbor, he would seek to accomplish during his administration.

With the traction problem out of the way after the April 7 referendum, the mayor's next step in realization of his improvement program, according to his friends, will be a drive to line the council up in favor of water meters.

Before that time, it is expected, means of financing the first year's installation of meters, at a cost of about $1,500,000, it is said, will have been found.

BROKER SEEKS $50,000 DAMAGES FROM U. S. AGENTS

Two government investigators were sued for $50,000 damages yesterday by Aaron Silver, 3558 Douglas boulevard, wealthy real estate broker, who charges them with arresting him falsely. The investigators are Clarence L. Converse and Patrick T. Roche. The praecipe was filed in the Circuit court.

According to Silver's attorney, Meyer Abrams, he was standing in the lobby of the Marquette building, Feb. 28, when the government men approached and attempted to take him into custody as "Goodman." Silver showed them personal letters, checks, and business papers to prove his real identity. Paying no attention to these, Converse drew a revolver and he and Roche forced him to accompany them to the federal building, it is charged.

There they held him for an hour, it is said.

OSBORNE WOOD BACK IN PARIS; TO ADJUST DEBTS

PARIS, March 7.—Osborne Wood, soldier, adventurer and gambler, returned to Paris today after an absence of nearly three weeks.

Slipping quietly into Paris from Spain, the son of the governor general of the Philippines would not discuss his escapade, but through his attorney the United Press was informed no action has been brought against Wood and all matters will be quickly adjusted.

Bandits Rob Store, but 1 Is Slain, 3 Shot, by Cops

Memphis, Tenn., March 7.—Six masked men tonight held up and robbed a chain store of several hundred dollars. In a running fight with police the driver of the bandit car was killed and three other members of the gang wounded.

KEWANEE
The Boiler that Never Smokes

Yes, you can see the Sun in Chicago every once in a while, but that's usually when the wind is from the East and blows the smoke on an enforced visit to Oak Park and Aurora. Ordinarily, however, the smoke wraps itself around the city, musses up the scenery and makes Chicago look like Pittsburg. Holy smoke!

Do you know what makes the smoke? Nothing more nor less than heating-boilers which are not equipped to burn soft coal without smoke.

But there wouldn't be any smoke in Chicago if all the big buildings were to use KEWANEE ALL-STEEL SMOKELESS FIREBOX BOILERS which burn any kind or grade of fuel under the Sun without smoke. If you want visual demonstration, visit any of the great buildings in Chicago which use Kewanee Smokeless Firebox Boilers. Not one of them contributes to the smoke evil.

Smoke is nothing but unconsumed fuel. Every column of black smoke which goes out of your chimney represents so many burned dollars. And look what the smoke does to the town—to the property—to the lake—to the lungs and the general health of the community.

Ask one of our young men to come to you and explain this situation—to show you the remedy—what it saves you in money—what it saves the city in the way of destruction.

SOCIALISTS TO BACK BRAUN TO SUCCEED EBERT

May Elect Walter Simons Temporary President.

BY JOHN CLAYTON.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, March 7.—The republican coalition was split wide open tonight when the Socialists voted to present their own candidate to run for the presidency of the republic. Otto Braun, former Prussian premier, will carry the Socialists' colors in the election campaign despite the plea of the late President Ebert that the party unite behind former Chancellor Marx.

As a result of the Socialists' decision there is a possibility tonight that the center group will enter the coalition with the right parties supporting Herr Stegerwalt, who is a member of the Prussian parliament and a follower of the center party, but who is far to the right in politics despite his Catholic affiliations.

Simons for President Pro Tem.

Meanwhile the majority parties in the reichstag are planning to pass a bill, which would make Dr. Walter Simons, former foreign minister, president of the Leipsic Supreme court. Herr Luther is at present acting as both president nad chancellor.

The socialists expressed a belief that the party might be split up if Herr Marx were backed on the first ballot, but they let the centerists and democrats know that they would be ready to support him on the second poll. To be elected on the first poll a candidate must have a majority of all the votes, while only a plurality is required on the second ballot where an entirely new list can be presented.

Coalition Would Aid Center.

There is little chance of the center party worrying about the socialists if it can enter a coalition of the democrats, people's party and nationalists with one of its own members as a candidate. If Herr Stegerwalt is chosen there is every likelihood that he will be elected on the first ballot. This would mean a distinct swing to the right in Germany and the monarchists would have a strong voice with few checks with their coalition in the saddle for some time to come.

SON OF EDISON TO WED VASSAR GIRL IN APRIL

Cambridge, Mass., March 7.—[Special.]—Notice of marriage intentions was filed here today by Theodore Miller Edison, youngest son of Thomas A. Edison, inventor, and Miss Anna Maria Osterhout, daughter of one of Harvard's ablest biologists.

Young Edison is 26 years old and a graduate of Massachusetts institute of technology. Miss Osterhout is 23 and a graduate of Vassar. She is the daughter of Prof. and Mrs. Winthrop Osterhout, chairman of the department of biology at Harvard. They will be married in Appleton chapel at Harvard some time in April.

The romance of the biologist's daughter and the inventor's son is proof that not even the most scientifically reared young persons are proof against Cupid. Miss Osterhout had intended to be a bachelor maid. She planned to be a doctor and was preparing for a course at Johns Hopkins when she met Edison.

"Why Didn't They Call Skeeles-Biddle?"

Mr. George W. Skeeles

Mr. John W. Biddle

Mr. F. Oliver Rockefeller

When, as occurs all too often in the case of funerals directed by undertakers of too little experience and still less adequate facilities, something "goes wrong," some one is sure to comment:

"How unfortunate! It never could have happened if Skeeles-Biddle had had charge of the arrangements.

"And they could have selected a much finer casket from the Skeeles-Biddle stock for a hundred dollars less than the price they paid.

"The house was too small, too, for all the people who came. There would have been no such crowding if they had accepted the free use of either of Skeeles-Biddle's two beautiful memorial chapels."

For in every neighborhood there are several people who have attended one of the many hundreds of funerals that Skeeles-Biddle conduct each year and so are familiar with really high-class undertaking service. Naturally they are provoked to criticism when details are bungled by an undertaker who either does not know or does not care.

Caskets
$25

A common cause for complaint is the furnishing of discreditable and ill-matched automobiles, even after the undertaker has promised to supply the best cars obtainable. Skeeles-Biddle cars are designed and built especially for their purpose and are of one kind and quality only—extra large, new and richly upholstered limousines of famous make, fitting complements of the distinctive and much admired new Skeeles-Biddle Casket Coach.

The distress of a bereaved family is often made more poignant and harder to bear by reason of temporary financial embarrassment and the refusal of "the nearest undertaker" to extend credit. There is no need to appeal to him. We gladly accommodate all deserving persons needing such courtesy. Use your telephone, at any hour of the day or night, to ask us for any information you may wish about our service and unequaled facilities. A request for us to call, no matter where you live, involves no obligation whatsoever.

AERIAL LINERS MAY TRANSPORT YANKS TO INDIA

Ships Each to Carry 100 Passengers.

BY A. ELLINGS.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

CALCUTTA, Feb. 10.—[By Mail.]—There is every possibility that the United States will be indirectly linked up with the imperial airship service which Great Britain proposes to start early in 1927.

Sir Sefton Brancker, director of civil aviation, is in India, having flown from England to plan the route of the proposed airship service to India. He told the Bengal chamber of commerce here that there is a project to link up New York and London, and that would bring India and America within a week's flying distance of each other.

"There were," he said, "three air route schemes:

"1. A big airship line.

"2. The intention to link up the Mediterranean with the Persian gulf.

"3. The possibility of a heavier than air line between Calcutta and Rangoon.

"Taking the case of the big airships first, it had been definitely decided to carry out an imperial government scheme on an experimental basis for three years. Two airships were being built in England—one by private contract and one in a government yard.

100 Passenger Air Lines.

"Each airship would be capable of carrying about 100 passengers with a liberal allowance of luggage, and it was considered that the flight from a British port to India could be accomplished in about 100 flying hours with one stop.

"To operate this airship service to India it would be necessary to have two terminals and a half way port of call. The object of his present visit was to select a spot in India where a shed could be erected for repairs, with mast, gas plant, etc. It also has been decided to make a temporary port at Ismailia, about halfway."

It was hoped, he said, that the two airships would be flying about the end of 1926, and an experimental service between England and India would be inaugurated early in 1927.

Private Lines Later.

Contracts for the experimental base in India consequently woud have to be arranged at once and the work commenced at an early date.

After that developments were for the moment uncertain. The policy of the authorities was that if they could prove the service a commercial success they counted on some commercial interests taking over the operation, the government parting with the two airships on easy terms, and it was hoped that more airships would be built on a commercial basis.

The experimental port at Karachi probably would be handed over to the government of India on easy terms, and it was further hoped that by that time the venture would have been sufficiently proved that local governments and local commercial interests would erect mooring masts at their respective cities.

For instance, a mooring mast might be erected at Bombay, where airships could call before going on to Karachi. Subsequently after a little more experience had been obtained of flying over the land in hot weather a mooring mast ought to be erected at Calcutta.

Sir Sefton saw no reason why masts should not be erected at Rangoon and Singapore and so on to Australia.

Maintaining Air Wharfage.

The cost of a mooring mast was roughly about £60,000, which included gas plant and other necessary appliances. Provision for the maintenance of the masts would be made by charging mooring fees, selling petrol, etc., to airships calling.

Sir Sefton replied to questions. Airships, he said, never had been used in a tropical country before. In order to get over early difficulties it had been decided to commission two old airships—relicts of the war—sending one to Egypt and mooring it at the mast for four or five months. It would work over the desert and go into the Indian ocean in order to get some idea of the atmospheric conditions with which airships would have to contend. The airships would use hydrogen, an inflammable gas, he said but the authorities were not afraid on that point with the use of heavy oil.

THUGS' VICTIMS TO PLEAD FOR STATE POLICE

Hundreds Will Visit Legislature.

The "Committee of Men Who Have Been Wronged," composed of citizens of the smaller communities in the state who have been the victims of highwaymen and thugs, will meet at Springfield on Wednesday. Spokesmen for the committee will appeal to the legislature to establish a state police force.

Several Hundred on Committee.

The membership in the committee already numbers several hundred, it was announced yesterday at the Illinois Chamber of Commerce which, together with the Illinois Bankers' association and the Illinois Agricultural association, is organizing the committee.

The committee which is going to Springfield comprises nearly 100 men and women, many of them bankers and others, farmers, merchants, and professional men. They expect to present a plea for protection for others who thus far have had the good fortune to escape criminal attacks.

To Present Data.

The committee will be joined at Springfield by Maj. Lynn G. Adams of the Pennsylvania state police. He will take with him from his headquarters at Harrisburg data to show that the cost of maintaining the Pennsylvania police force has been fully met by fines collected and the value of stolen property returned to its owners.

CHINA PAYS FOR BANDIT CAPTURE OF AMERICANS

Damages for Three Total $13,608.

BY CHARLES DAILEY.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

MISS LUCY ALDRICH.

PEKING, March 7.—The Chinese government through the legations of the various interested governments has begun the payment of damages to American and other foreigners captured by bandits who held up a Shanghai-Peking express train near Lincheng, Shantung, early in May, 1923.

The amounts which some of the American prisoners will receive are as follows: Lucy Aldrich, sister-in-law of John D. Rockefeller, $4-162 Mexican [$2,081]; Miss McFadden, $10,200 Mexican [$5,100], and John B. Powell, correspondent of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, $12,855 Mexican [$6,427]. Others will receive sums proportionate to the length of their captivity and losses.

The capture of the foreigners followed a sensational early morning attack on the train. The bandits routed all the occupants of the sleeping cars, including a number of wealthy Chinese, from their berths and robbed them. Some foreigners managed to escape, but the majority were hurried off by the bandits.

Release Some of the Women.

Several of the women, including the wives of two army officers, were released at once.

The bandits took John B. Powell and a number of other Americans and foreigners to Paotzuku, a mountain stronghold, where they kept them for almost six weeks. Mr. Powell was the hero of the long days of captivity, for it was his zeal and courage that kept up the spirits of the others. On one occasion he left the camp under parole to go to Tsao Chuang, headquarters of the rescue party, with an ultimatum from the bandits stating that if force was used, all the captives would be killed. He returned to the bandit camp although he did not know whether his life would be secure.

Belgian Missionary Captive.

Brussels, March 7.—[By Associated Press].—News has been received here that a Belgian missionary in China, who has been in that country for fifteen years, was carried off by brigands Jan. 15. It was said the missionary's captors, finding that they were being pursued by troops, sold their prisoner to a mounted band, who took their victim into the desert beyond the Yellow river. A Belgian missionary was killed in the same district last year.

Mayor Aids Legion Endowment Fund

NURSE WITH WAR HONORS LEADS LEGION DRIVE

The only woman in Chicago who wears a decoration that Pershing and Foch and Field Marshal Lord Haig are proud to own is taking a leading part in the effort to raise Chicago's quota of the American Legion endowment fund.

She is Mrs. Edna Coughlin Quinsler, possessor of the Distinguished Service medal and commander of Jane A. Delano post, No. 185, American Legion. Mrs. Quinsler is a member of the Visiting Nurses' staff.

First hand knowledge of the problem of the disabled soldier from the time she aided the wounded under fire until the present, when she almost daily comes in contact with cases traceable to war causes, has motivated her interest in the $5,000,000 drive whose honorary chairman is President Coolidge.

Gets Mayor's Signature.

Yesterday Mrs. Quinsler procured Mayor Dever's signature to the American Legion's credo, whose principal tenets are:

"I believe that every man who has incurred a disability because of his service to the nation in time of war deserves every opportunity for restoration to physical, mental, and spiritual health and a status of self-support and respect.

"I believe that the orphan children of those who made the supreme sacrifice for America are entitled to the same chance in life which they would have received had not their fathers given their lives to the nation."

"It is a great pleasure to sign this pledge," said Mayor Dever. "I thoroughly approve of this splendid undertaking."

Reason for Drive.

On her visit to Mayor Dever's office Mrs. Quinsler explained the Legion drive:

"The case of the disabled veteran with the government is an official, intricate, legal problem, involving many technical complications. Under given sets of facts, prescribed by law, the government can extend legally specified medical or hospital treatment, money compensation, or vocational training. Within its necessary limits, the government on the whole has done well, and is tending steadily to do better. It does not and cannot have completely intimate contact with the disabled men, his family, his needs.

"The problem is that of restoring to physical, mental, and spiritual health, and to a status of self-support and self-respect, a man who has suffered the wounds, disease, and shock incident to war."

LEGION NOTES

Verdun post of the American Legion will hold its regular meeting Thursday night in the clubrooms at the 122d field artillery armory.

To The Bungalow and Garage Department:-

After examining the report of your department for the last month, I wish to congratulate you upon the results accomplished to date.

Favored as we are in the purchasing of materials and with the backing of our architectural and engineering departments, you certainly are in a position to render an economical building service to the Chicago public.

But always remember that KRENN & DATO places satisfaction to its clients above any amount of profit. Therefore, bear in mind that in the administration of your department you are to abide by this principle to its fullest extent, so that the service you render will in every way equal the KRENN & DATO standard.

In closing let me wish you continued success and may your department help materially toward fostering the high ideals upon which the firm of KRENN & DATO is built.

Yours very truly,

Edward A. Dato

PS: Please place a copy of this letter in the hands of your office staff and salesmen, also your construction force such as carpenters, masons, cement men, plumbers and electricians.

This Is Your Guarantee

Mr. Dato's letter is proof of the service we stand ready to give, and our product is as good as our service. We found that our construction department could build very economically for our own needs. It was then suggested that we extend the services of this department to our clients and also fill their building needs at a saving to them. Our Engineering department then designed bungalows and garages which are not only practical but possess beauty as well. Only the best materials are used in their construction, and since we purchase our supplies at mill prices, you can get a KRENN & DATO Built Bungalow or garage for the price you pay for an ordinary structure.

SUBURBS WAGE HOT FIGHT OVER SUNDAY MOVIES

It's Center of Interest in Election Battle.

Campaigns to permit motion picture theaters to operate on Sundays are all but overshadowing the political issues in two Chicago suburbs—Evanston and Oak Park. With Berwyn and River Forest these two suburbs hold their annual municipal elections the same day as the Chicago aldermanic run-off and Dever traction plan referendum—April 7.

Other Cook county villages hold their elections on April 21. Illinois' confusing election laws provide that cities and villages containing one or more towns or those whose boundaries coincide with the territorial limits of a township shall hold their municipal election on the first Tuesday in April. All others organized under the general law hold their elections on the third Tuesday in April.

Another Set of Laws.

Cities that have adopted the commission form of government are covered in still another set of election laws that call for elections every four years dating from 1911. In Cook county these include Forest Park, Harvey, Chicago Heights, and Palos Park.

Evanston and Oak Park passed up their primaries Feb. 24 and are nominating candidates by the caucus and petition system to save the expense of a primary. In both suburbs the candidates are trying to keep the Sunday movie scrap out of the political one.

Three Cornered Race On.

Evanston is headed toward one of its hottest elections with a three cornered race for mayor. Harry P. Pearsons, five times mayor, is a candidate again. His chief opponent is Charles H. Bartlett, a contractor, who accuses Mayor Pearsons of favoring that section of Evanston east of the Chicago & Northwestern tracks at the expense of the west side.

The third candidate, James Huxtable, advocates a departmental clean-out at the city hall and annexation to Chicago unless Evanston taxes are reduced.

One Ticket in Oak Park.

So far only one ticket has been filed in Oak Park. This is the Citizens' Civic Welfare slate, headed by President Willis McFeeley, chief executive of Illinois' largest village. Trustee G. L. Hardig is a candidate for reëlection, with E. P. Keigher and Duncan L. Poden as new candidates on the McFeeley slate. Candidates' petitions will be accepted until March 23, President McFeeley said.

The Sunday movie proposition is said to stand a better chance in Evanston than in Oak Park, where the proposal has been brought up a number of times and always been voted down by the villagers.

In Evanston some of the community leaders are advocating the Sunday shows. These include Prof. William L. Bailey, sociologist and national population analyst of Northwestern university. He says Sunday movies can be shown to the betterment rather than to the detriment of Evanstonians, but believes the shows should be rigidly regulated.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA'S PRESIDENT HONORED ON 75TH BIRTHDAY

T. G. MASARYK.
[K. & H. Photo.]

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia, March 7.—[By Associated Press.]—President Masaryk, Czechoslovakia's "grand old man," celebrated his seventy-fifth birthday anniversary today. The senate in special session voted its congratulations to the president and the day was one of high festival throughout the country.

One thousand boys and girls, chosen from among the 300,000 children of the Czechoslovakian Red Cross, called at the castle to wish M. Masaryk many happy returns of the day. The children from each region presented him with a simple souvenir, such as a national flag from Bohemia, a basket of painted eggs from Moravia, a doll in Slovak costume from Slovakia, and decorated plates from Silesia. In return the president gave each child a gift.

Military delegations also came from different garrisons of the republic to bring the president the greetings of the army, and there was an imposing program of official congratulations.

OPEN MEDICAL MEET TOMORROW; 600 WILL ATTEND

The annual congress on medical education, medical licensure, public health and hospitals will be held at the Congress hotel, opening tomorrow and continuing until Thursday.

Six hundred leaders in medical education and hospital service are expected to attend. Dr. Arthur D. Bevan will preside over the sessions of the first two days, which are devoted to the council on medical education and hospitals of the American Medical association. Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, president of Stanford university, will open the session tomorrow.

Among the speakers on the program are Dr. William D. Haggard, professor of surgery in the Vanderbilt university school of medicine, and president-elect of the American Medical association; Dr. Samuel W. Lambert, New York, dean of Columbia university college of physicians and surgeons; Dr. Charles C. Guthrie of the University of Pittsburgh, school of medicine.

The sessions will be devoted to lectures and symposiums on the results of improved medical education, medical service in rural communities, conference on hospital service, and education of the public.

BERNE, Switzerland, March 7.—M. Canova, a member of the national council, was convicted as a blasphemer today for describing God as a "scoundrel," in his Socialist newspaper Volkswacht. He said in his defense that "as there is no God, there is no offense." He was fined 200 francs, with jail as an alternative, and announced that he would enter an appeal.

TEAPOT OIL SUIT ON TOMORROW IN CHEYENNE COURT

U. S. and Sinclair Ready for Lease Fight.

Cheyenne, Wyo., March 7.—[By the Associated Press.]—After a series of conferences that lasted throughout the day, attorneys representing both the government and the defense announced tonight they were ready for the opening in federal court here Monday of the government's civil suit seeking annulment of the lease of the Teapot Dome naval oil reserve to the Mammoth Oil company. The Mammoth is one of the Harry F. Sinclair companies.

Atlee Pomerene, who with Owen D. Roberts, is special government counsel, probably will open the trial for the government in a statement in which he will outline the high spots of the government's case.

The Government's Case.

These are expected to include the legality of the late President Harding's executive order, issued in May, 1921, transferring the oil reserve from the navy department to the department of the interior; and the allegation of fraud in execution of the lease, as charged by the government in the conduct of the negotiations by Albert B. Fall, former secretary of the interior.

Mr. Fall now is en route to Cheyenne from his home in El Paso, Tex., but, according to present plans of the government, will not be called as a witness until March 14.

Sinclair Brings Lawyer Army.

Mr. Sinclair, who arrived here Friday night, has brought together a large army of legal counsel for the Mammoth company. Included among the attorneys are Martin W. Littleton, E. H. Chandler, George P. Hoover, R. W. Ragland, J. H. Holmes, G. T. Stanford, and John W. Lacey.

Albert D. Walton, United States district attorney here, will assist Mr. Pomerene and Mr. Roberts on the government side.

Mr. Roberts said tonight the first witness to be called Monday would be E. C. Finney, assistant secretary of the interior.

MAX EASTMAN GETS ENOUGH OF SOVIET RUSSIA

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, March 7.—After Emma Goldman comes Max Eastman. The king of the Greenwich Village pinks, who recently came out of Russia after spending two years there, is reported as being entirely disgusted with the soviet régime. He is now living in Paris and it is stated that he is preparing a pamphlet in which he flays the whole Russian administration.

Max told friends that he found Russia far too expensive to live in. He is said to have described M. Zinovieff, president of the third internationale, as a complete fraud and the evil genius of Russia. Of two others of the leaders he is reported as saying M. Stalin is both untrue to Russia and the communist ideal, while Premier Rykoff is unworthy of trust and respect.

PROFESSOR TELLS OF EXPERIMENTS WITH HEREDITY

New experimental evidence to confirm the view that heredity is only slightly influenced by environment, was announced yesterday by Dr. H. H. Newman of the University of Chicago biological laboratories.

"By the time an individual is born," the professor announced, "its characters are already so far advanced toward a definite condition that only such radical disturbances as illness or gross poisoning are capable of altering the course of differentiation that has been shaped by heredity."

Dr. Newman reached his conclusion by a study of twins. There are two sorts of twins, he believes, ordinary ones which are merely brothers and sisters who chanced to be born at the same time and identical ones. Of the identical ones he says:

"It is practically certain though not as yet fully demonstrated for human beings, that the two individuals are derived from the two halves of a single life cell."

CUBS LOOK LIKE FLAG CONTENDER IN EARLY DRILLS

Smith Sees Big Gain from Pirate Trade.

BY FRANK SMITH.

Avalon, Santa Catalina Island, Cal., March 7.—[Special.]—After a week of intensive training both mornings and afternoons, it can be stated with the greatest of confidence that the north side fans will see in the Cubs a pennant contender in the National league. The trade that brought Charlie Grimm, first baseman; Rabbit Maranville, second baseman and shortstop, and Wilbur Cooper, left handed pitcher, from Pittsburgh to Chicago is proving daily that President William Veeck and Manager Bill Killefer knew what they were doing.

These three veterans, as baseball goes, are the life of this party, while reports about the three Cubs that went to the Pirates are not so good. The former standbys of Barney Dreyfuss' team are right on the job, while at this writing it is understood that Vic Aldridge still seeks more Pirate money, while Grantham will be a sub on Manager McKechnie's squad.

Cubs Gain Three Regulars.

Niehaus, the recruit first baseman, according to information here, will be right up there and should make a name for himself. The trade, therefore, gave the Cubs three regulars they needed, while the Pirates received only one. Cub fans know the holdoutitis bug that bites Aldridge every spring and know that the disease doesn't help the club with which he is affiliated. The relegation of Grantham to the bench will not help his morale. Dope your own conclusions.

Manager Killefer has about decided on his regular infield and his catchers. These have been enumerated in these columns. But for those who missed an issue of THE TRIBUNE they are repeated herewith. Grimm, first base; Adams, second base; Maranville, shortstop, and Friberg, third base. Hartnett, first string catcher; O'Farrell, second string, and Jonnard, bullpen. The outfield and regular pitchers remain to be chosen. Heathcote, Miller, and Statz appear to have the call, but any one of the three may be displaced once they show any inclination to slump in their hitting.

Grigsby Sets Fast Pace.

Bobby Barrett is labeled an infielder, but he can play the outer garden if called upon and he is going to be a tough bird to beat out of a regular position on the squad.

Don't forget also that Grigsby is here and is showing the boys a class of ball that would make their eyes pop back home if they could see him in action. Charley Taylor, the Beaumont, Tex., slugger, has not had much opportunity to show the boys what he has, but Manager Bill is not overlooking him.

Then we must not forget Butch Weiss, who came back from Wichita Falls with a batting mark of .377. Mel Kerr still is to be looked over, but his lack of experience may prevent his sticking around. It is not likely, however, that he will be let loose without some sort of string being tied to him. In the assortment of fifteen pitchers on the island, there are five Cub veterans, Alexander, Kaufmann, Keen, Jacobs and Blanke, and Cooper, who seems sure to stick.

Root Likely Hurler.

Three former members of the Cubs, Guy Bush, Percy Jones and George Steuland, must be given a lot of consideration; Jones and Steuland in particular looking the part of big league material. Of the three, Jones has shown the most progress, being able, under the direction of Coach George Gibson, to put them just where he wants them. In his previous attempts with the Cubs he has been wilder than a March hare. Wildness has been his failing and it again may crop up as one of his liabilities, the other being a poor fielder.

There is absolutely no foundation for the report Manager Bill Killefer of the Cubs has assured his brother, Wade, manager of the Seattle club, the Bruins will turn over Pitchers Nick Dumovich and George Steuland to Seattle. In effect this was the substance of an emphatic denial issued this afternoon by officials of the Chicago club following the circulation of a report from Los Angeles that such a deal had been consummated.

Steuland Is Signed.

Aside from assignment of Pitcher George Milstead to Los Angeles in part payment for Pitcher Charley Root, nothing of a definite nature regarding the disposition of any of the players has been reached, said Killefer. Reindeer will do nothing regarding Dumovich until after he has had a chance to talk to Nick when the Cubs reach Los Angeles next Thursday evening.

George Steuland today formally signed a contract with the Cubs. It developed that he was not a holdout in the real sense of the word but that he had previously accepted terms and only waited to sign to convince himself that his right shoulder, injured in a fall during the winter, had fully recovered.

The status of Brett and Morgan is up in the air while Nick Dumovich remains among the missing. Jacobs and Keen must look to their laurels if they expect to beat out one or two of the strangers.

On Monday five inning games will be the rule in the afternoon, with perhaps an increase in the number of rounds as the week progresses.

In the Wake of the News

KENTUCKY DERBY.

WITH nominations for the Kentucky Derby made public, attention of turf followers will center on the training and work of the crack juveniles until the fifty-first running of the blue grass classic at Louisville May 16.

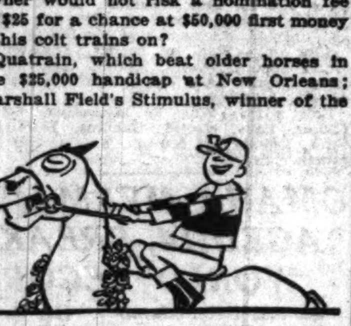
Because of its tradition, prestige, and continuity, the Kentucky Derby ranks the most popular 3 year old event of the year. In point of public interest it is the greatest. If you assert it is the greatest from a racing viewpoint, horsemen may disagree with you.

Opposing arguments are based solely on its being held so early in the turf year and upon its distance. All admit the Derby gives first reliable line upon 3 year old form. But some also assert colts do not reach their true worth until later in the season. Moreover, the original Derby distance was one and one-half miles. The Kentucky race is two furlongs shorter. May is too early to ask 3 year olds to carry stake weight over the longer route.

No other consideration than the race itself, however, weighs with the 75,000 pilgrims who journey to Louisville annually. It is a gala holiday and the winner is king of 3 year olds until he is outfooted later, if at all.

The 139 nominations for 1925 comprise the pick and near-pick of last year's 2 year olds. Naturally in such a list near-picks predominate. Why not? What owner would not risk a nomination fee of $25 for a chance at $50,000 first money if his colt trains on?

Quatrain, which beat older horses in the $25,000 handicap at New Orleans; Marshall Field's Stimulus, winner of the Pimlico Futurity; Candy Kid, winner of the Lexington Futurity, Mother Goose, winner of the Belmont Futurity; Sunny Man, Lee O. Cottner, and Kentucky Cardinal will be among the shorter priced choices.



Master Charlie would be in that favorite list were he sound. Master Charlie won the Kentucky Jockey Club stakes last fall. He is Chicago owned. It's a coincidence that Wise Counsellor, also Chicago owned, won the same stake in 1923. Wise Counsellor went wrong in training for last year's Derby. Master Charlie's misfortune developed earlier.

Whether the 2 year old aristocrats of 1924 will furnish the winner or whether the winner will come from the proletariat, as did Black Gold a year ago, will be determined May 16.

Athletes Who Have "Made Good."

Wilbur E. Hightower was a star quarterback at Northwestern, in fact, one of the conference stars, although the Purple ranked below its rivals at that time. Hightower is now on the board of directors and vice president of the American National bank of Oklahoma City, one of the largest banks in Oklahoma.

When the Geese Fly Home.

Honk, honk, honk,
The geese fly home,
Honk, honk, honk,
From their southern roam,
Wending their way
Through night and day,
WITH SUMMER CLOSE BEHIND THEM.

The geese bring news,
Hurray, hurray!
The ice in the sloughs
Has gone away.
Come, let's sing
Till welkins ring;
SUMMER'S CLOSE BEHIND THEM.

When the geese fly home
The green leaves sprout;
The frost in the loam
Goes melting out;
The cold winds crack
And birds come back,
FOR SUMMER'S CLOSE BEHIND THEM.

Wessader.

Our Goldfish Story.

The Wakes were preparing for a trip. Pep, the wire haired fox terrier, had long since passed out. Parking space had been secured for Caruso, the canary. Then WE thought of the goldfish, and inquired, "What shall we do with these?" pointing to the bowl.

Mrs. Wake replied, "We'll take them back to the store where we bought them, to be placed among the other goldfish."

"But how'll we tell them when we get back?" we remonstrated.

"What difference does it make?" was the reply. Now she tells every one about our "fishy solicitude." Come to think of it, though, what difference would it make?

FINANCE BOUT, KEARNS' ANSWER TO RING BOARD

Both Challenges Were Accepted, Says Manager.

GIBBONS OUT FOR TIME

ST. PAUL, Minn., March 7.—Tommy Gibbons, St. Paul heavyweight boxer, announced tonight he is out of the fight game for a month or two because of the illness of his twin sons. The twins are suffering with a severe attack of pneumonia. Tommy has abandoned active training to be at their bedside almost constantly.

Gibbons said he was surprised at the action of the New York boxing commission on Wills and Dempsey and asserted he believed he was in line to be recommended for the first chance at Dempsey's title.

BY HARRY NEWMAN.

New York, March 7.—[Special.]—The New York state athletic commission was up against a stone wall today in the heavyweight situation.

The boxing bosses plainly resented the attitude of Jack Dempsey and his manager in defiance of the commission's order the champion meet Harry Wills before Tommy Gibbons and that he answer the challenges of both men.

The commissioners were for the moment in the position of not knowing what they could do about it if Dempsey persists in ignoring their order. Chairman Farley disclosed that, for that matter, the champion has no status in New York state right now, his six months' license to fight here having expired some time ago. In view of that the commission cannot suspend his license, but it may put him on its ineligible list.

Hints of Action Friday.

"We'd better not cross our bridges until we get there," said Chairman Farley. The commission will take whatever action against Dempsey it can in its regular meeting next Friday if nothing is done about the matter before that time.

"Jack Dempsey is rated by us on the same plane with any other champion," Farley said. "He is entitled to no privileges. There is a rule requiring a champion to defend his title at least once in every six months, and that rule goes for Dempsey."

From his manner it was apparent that Farley, who gave Dempsey twenty-four hours to accept or reject the challenges of Harry Wills and Tom Gibbons, is serious about it.

Silent on Suspension.

"We want Dempsey to accept the challenge of Harry Wills in justice to Wills and in the discharge of our duty to the state and to the public," Farley said. "There is no question in my mind that the man in the street wants to see Wills get the next chance with Dempsey.

"I have nothing but the greatest admiration for Tom Gibbons, but he has had one chance. Let Wills have his opportunity now."

'FINANCE IT,' KEARNS REPLY

Los Angeles, March 7. — Jack Kearns, manager of the heavyweight champion, Jack Dempsey, in a statement to the New York state athletic commission today declared the titleholder would meet Harry Wills or Tommy Gibbons, or both, if the commission would guarantee to finance the match.

The statement, somewhat in the nature of a reply to the commission's demand to Dempsey to explain why Wills' challenge had not been recognized, declared Wills' challenge had been "accepted once and it was not necessary to repeat."

"Dempsey asks only the commission give its financial guarantee in the forms of a cash deposit," the statement said in part, "as is the custom in such cases and give its official assurance of its ability to carry out the match."

Both Challenges Accepted.

"The commission files will show that Wills' challenge has been accepted once, also Gibbons'. It is not necessary to repeat."

Kearns also "respectfully invited" the commission to follow up its matchmaking by acting as the promoter of either or both bouts, to be staged in New York state if it desires.

The manager declined to recognize any authority over the champion by a commission, pointing out that Dempsey was a citizen of California, established in the state in business matters, and belonged to one state as much as another.

TIGERS SURE OF TIE FOR EASTERN CAGE LEADERSHIP

Princeton, N. J., March 7.—By defeating Columbia, 23 to 10, tonight, Princeton was assured of finishing in a tie for first place in the Intercollegiate basketball league event, though the Tigers lose their remaining games with Dartmouth and Pennsylvania. Princeton, although leading at half time by only 2 points, pulled away in the second half and won easily. Lemon led the scoring with four field goals.

WIN TITLES IN PREP TRACK GAMES

Senn High school's teams annexed both senior and junior titles in the city public high school track meet at the Broadway armory yesterday. Hawkins of the winning seniors added five points to his team's total when he reached the tape first in the 50 yard low hurdles just a bit ahead of his teammate, Gentry, and Lieberman of Lake View. Bangert, who won the pole vault and high jump for Lake View, is shown about ready to take off in the former event. Grandstaff, another Lake View winner, is prepared to make his winning shot put. Small of stature, but possessing great endurance, Wojik of Lindblom, toeing the mark, outsped his more lengthy rivals in the mile run. [TRIBUNE Photos.]

139 Entered in Kentucky Derby of '25

Blue bloods of the turf to the number of 139 have been nominated for the fifty-first running of the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs in Louisville next May 16.

The list of candidates, which comprises the fleetest 3 year old thoroughbreds in America, representing people of the turf from the humblest owner to the aristocracy of Yankee racing, was made public yesterday by officials of the Kentucky Jockey club. The race, carrying its $50,000 in added money and the various entry and starting fees, will be worth close to $70,000 to the owner of the winning horse.

Parts of the entry list read like a blue book of the highest realm of equine society. Other parts contain names that are remote and unknown to the average American racegoer. They are the dark horses of what is usually the most uncertain sporting event staged in America, and some of them, nursed along for the one supreme effort in this great race, have never set foot on any race track.

Whitney Enters Dozen.

To Harry Payne Whitney of New York goes the honor of nominating the largest number of candidates. He has made an even dozen of his highly bred 3 year olds eligible, and next in line comes Edward R. Bradley's Idle Hour stock farm with five, and Willis Sharpe Kilmer with four.

Almost as conspicuous as the heavy Whitney entry are the two lonely

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question Paul Rhoades, 3400 North Ashland avenue was awarded $5.

The Question.

Do you think Eddie Collins will succeed as a major league manager?

Where Asked.

Franklin and Washington streets.

The Answers.

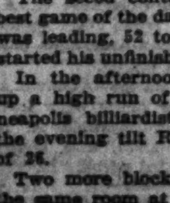
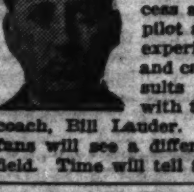
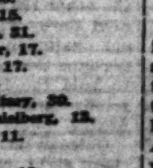
Edward T. Boissy, 4832 Thomas street, secretary—Eddie Collins will make good. The fact that he has played under some of the best managers in the major league is evidence he should profit well by the varied experience he has received from them. He will prove an able and adept manager as well as a winner. His motto is team work.



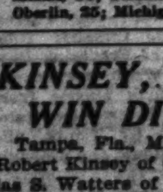
John J. Hewitt, 932 Montana street, clerk—I believe Eddie Collins will make a good manager because he has had fifteen or more years of experience in the big show. He knows how to handle players so as to get their best efforts. If there are few injuries to players you will see the team near the top. With Collins at the helm the team will display better work, which ultimately will give it what the fans desire to see at the termination of the season.



Anthony J. Rabo, 2614 West Huron street, clerk — Eddie Collins will make good as a manager. He has had at least fifteen years of major league experience and has had a careful study of the players. His great personality among them will assure harmony and force them to strive hard to make his first year as manager a success. This is what makes a victorious baseball club.



Eugene F. Blackburn, 2023 Bissell street, circuit court clerk—I think Eddie Collins will be a success as a manager, because he himself is an able thinker, and that will qualify him to think for others. He always did get along with his comrades on the ball field as well as off the diamond, so there should be great harmony with him as the leader. He is a great man to handle men.



John D. Graziader, 2658 West Superior street, clerk—Yes; I think Eddie Collins will prove a success as a major league pilot as he has had the experience as a player and can get the best results out of his men with the aid of his new coach, Bill Lauder. The White Sox fans will see a different team on the field. Time will tell the story.

ST. JEAN SETS NEW LOW INNING MARK AGAINST RUDOLPH

Irwin Rudolph and Andrew St. Jean of Minneapolis divided a National Pocket Billiard league series at Mussey's parlor yesterday, the former winning the initial tussle, 100 to 66, in fifty-two innings, while the latter set a new low inning record in taking the evening game in three innings, 100 to 52.

The second contest was easily the best game of the day, as the local cueist was leading, 52 to 35, before St. Jean started his unfinished run of 65.

In the afternoon Rudolph marked up a high run of 29, while the Minneapolis billiardist registered 19. In the evening tilt Rudolph made a run of 26.

Two more blocks will be played in the same room at 3 and 8 o'clock tomorrow.

BY HOWARD MARTIN.

Senn High school added two shields to its collection of trophies yesterday by winning both the junior and senior titles in the annual indoor city public high school track meet, held at the Broadway armory. The championship Glenwood avenue school squads scored 31 points in the senior events and 16½ in the junior class.

While many sterling performances were made, and the teams in the junior competition were well balanced, the fight for top honors in the senior class was the feature of the meet. The winning tracksters just managed to nose out Lake View for first place, the second place team accumulating 30 markers.

With only one senior event left on the program, Senn led Lake View, 23 to 25, and everything depended upon the high jump. Having Bangert entered, Lake View virtually had the event sewed up, and Senn placed its hope on Dash to take second.

Dash Prevents Tie.

Bangert cleared the bar at 5 feet 7½ inches to win the event, but Dash swung the tide for Senn by scoring three points for second place. The latter jumped a notch below the winner's height, but had a hard time of it. After two misses, he averted a four-way tie for second by going over the bar while his three rivals failed to equal his performance. Had he been tied, Lake View and Senn would have finished on even terms.

The two north side rivals scored more than half of the senior points. Hyde Park, with 13½, led the second division. In the junior division, Tilden, Englewood and Hyde Park pressed Senn, Tilden's 14 points, taking second. The other two tied for third.

Alexander High Scorer.

Bangert of Lake View and Alexander of Senn were the principal actors, each taking high point honors in their respective classes. The Lake View senior won the pole vault and high jump and fourth in the fifty yard low hurdles for 11 points. Alexander went Bangert two better, winning the junior broad jump and pole vault, and capturing sec-

BUCKEYES DOWN INDIANA IN FAST CLASH, 28 TO 26

Hoosiers Lead at Half by Two Points.

Bloomington, Ind., March 7.—Ohio State's basketball team won the western conference net crown by defeating Indiana, 28 to 26, in one of the closest and fastest contests seen here this season.

Ohio State now has ten victories and one defeat for first place, with Illinois second with eight wins and three losses. Indiana slipped from second to third with eight wins and four defeats. Purdue is in fourth place with six victories and four losses. Illinois and Purdue play again, but the result cannot affect the Buckeyes' standing. Ohio State meets Wisconsin next week for its last game.

Score Tied Five Times.

The play tonight was nip and tuck throughout, with the lead changing six times, while the score was tied five times. Indiana led at the half, 14 to 12.

The Buckeyes forged ahead in the second half when Miner and Cunningham repeatedly scored field goals and rolled up a 9 point lead. With four minutes to go and with their lead cut to 4 points, the 1925 conference basketball champions adopted stalling tactics.

Hoosiers Score Twice.

But Sponsler broke through for a tally, Replogle made good two fouls, and the 5,500 fans went into an uproar while the two teams battled up and down the floor with the score tied and seconds to play. Then Miner sneaked away for a short field goal and the game was over. Lineup:

MICHIGAN, 47; CHICAGO, 14

Ann Arbor, Mich., March 7.—[Special.]—In a rather farcical game here tonight, the Wolverine basketball five closed its season with a 47 to 14 win over Chicago. Chicago opened the first half with two baskets in rapid succession, but the Michigan quintet closed the gap immediately, the score at the half being 16 to 11 in the Wolverines' favor.

After the first minute of the second half, Chicago was left far behind, the Wolverines scoring almost at will. Capt. Haggerty, Michigan's star forward, closed his basketball career by scoring fifteen of the Wolverine total. Alyea, Chicago's star, was unable to connect frequently with the hoop due to the close guarding of Cherry. Lineup:

IOWA BUMPS PURPLE

Iowa City, Ia., March 7.—[Special.]—Iowa closed its basketball season with a victory over Northwestern here tonight, 26 to 15. Capt. Janse bowed himself out with five field baskets for high point honors, and Laude, the remaining third year man, boosted his free throw total to forty-six.

The game was loosely played, with both sides piercing the defense intermittently. Iowa proved more proficient in this field and won on it, Van Deusen and McConnell being worked through to score. The counters from the captain were largely brilliant shots from unexpected angles. For Northwestern, Greaves and Mathews proved the counting men, but White caused the most damage in the play. Baker was a marked man and had little chance. Lineup:

NURMI RACES FASTEST MILE EVER RUN; SETS INDOOR RECORD OF 4:12

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 7.—Paavo Nurmi, in his fourth successive day of running, clipped one and two fifths seconds off Lloyd Hahn's world indoor record mile on the 174th Infantry armory track here tonight. Nurmi's time was 4:12 flat, three-fifths of a second better than the world outdoor mark.

The winged Finn, scheduled to have run a mile and a half, changed his mind shortly before the race and concentrated on regaining the mile record wrested from him two weeks ago. He led his only dangerous rival, Jimmy Connolly of Washington, D. C., by sixty yards at the tape. Nurmi swung over the finish line with no visible sign of exertion.

CANNEFAX MEETS LAYTON IN CUE LEAGUE FEATURE

Clashes between Robert Cannefax of New York, title defender, Johnny Layton of Minneapolis, former champion, and Otto Reiselt of Philadelphia and Gus Copulos of Detroit, the league leader, claim the spotlight during the next six days of the title race in the National Championship Three Cushion Billiard league. The eastern players continue their invasion of the middle west.

Unless Cannefax can win against Layton, the latter may take from him second place in the race. Only a few points separate them, Cannefax having a record of forty won and twenty lost, against forty-five won and twenty-three lost by Layton.

Layton Hits Fast Stride.

An effort by Cannefax will be made Monday and Tuesday to stop the winning streak of Layton. In two weeks on the road the Minneapolis contender cleaned up nineteen of twenty-four battles. Two of his losses were to Cannefax. He is going in his old championship style.

Cannefax, who failed to disturb Copulos this week, losing three to him in Detroit and then dividing with Augie Kieckhefer, should be favored over Arthur Thurnblad at Milwaukee on Wednesday and Thursday and against Allen Hall at Chicago on Friday and Saturday. In the first round he split with the Milwaukee contender, but took four from the local entry.

Reiselt will meet formidable rivals in Tiff Denton, Kieckhefer, and Copulos. Kieckhefer is to take a brief trip, engaging Clarence Jackson at Detroit on Monday and Tuesday. That Jackson will be hard to handle is shown by his four recent victories over Denton. The standing:

| | W. | L. | H.R. | B.G. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Copulos, Detroit | 54 | 16 | 13 | 30 |
| Cannefax, New York | 40 | 20 | 13 | 36 |

Taberski Has Big Lead.

With forty games to be played, Ralph Greenleaf of Philadelphia, the champion, resumes the chase in the National Championship Pocket Billiard league next week in an effort to overtake the speeding Frank Taberski of New York. Greenleaf, recovering from the illness which caused postponement of recent games, receives Arthur Woods of Syracuse on the Quaker City table Friday, Saturday and Monday.

Besides the games with Woods, the champion faces 6 with Andrew St. Jean at Minneapolis, 10 with Erwin Rudolph at Chicago and Philadelphia, 12 with Pasquale Natalie at Baltimore and at home, and a final 6 games with Taberski. He divided a previous series with the former champion. The standing:

| | W. | L. | H.R. | B.G. |

| Greenleaf, Philadelphia | 44 | 24 | 82 | 6 |

WAUKEGAN NIPS NEW TRIER FOR DISTRICT TITLE

Waukegan's Suburban league champions advanced into the sectional tournament of the Illinois Athletic association state basketball tournament last night by trimming New Trier, 24 to 15, in the district final at Highland Park. The far north shore five will attempt to further its efforts toward winning the state championship at the Joliet section meet next Friday and Saturday.

In winning the district title for the second successive year, Waukegan put on a burst of speed to overwhelm New Trier. The two teams put up a nip and tuck battle for three quarters, but in the final session the champs stepped out and made nine points, while the losers were held to one.

In the semi-finals yesterday afternoon, Waukegan disposed of Elmhurst, 27 to 13, and New Trier whipped Hinsdale, 28 to 19. Lineups: candidates entered by Harry F. Sinclair's hitherto powerful Rancocas stable, winner of the Derby two years ago with Zev and the most formidable racing establishment in America for a half dozen years. A gray colt, Silver Fox, and a filly, Nedana, will be the only Rancocas color bearers. Gray colts and fillies seldom win a Derby.

139 Are Entered in 1925 Renewal of Kentucky Derby

Many other leaders of the racing and breeding industries have nominated candidates in the hope of seeing their silks carried to victory in the historic battle for turf supremacy. They include Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt II., Mrs. Payne Whitney, former Senator Johnson N. Camden, Desha Breckinridge, Montfort and B. B. Jones, Edward Cebrian, Gifford A. Cochran, James W. Corrigan, J. S. Cosden, Marshall Field, H. C. "Bud" Fisher, Hal Price Headley, Walter M. Jeffords, Willis Sharpe Kilmer, Frederick Johnson, Jefferson Livingston, Samuel D. Riddle, Mrs. Louise Viau, Walter J. Salmon, George D. Widener, William Ziegler Jr., Gerald C. Cudahy, and J. Hal Woodford.

"Rich Man, Poor Man."

In the same list of owners we scan the names of William Perkins, Negro owner and trainer; Mose Shapoff, proprietor of a selling plater establishment, and many others whose names are as strange to the list of stake winning owners as their Derby hopes are to the ranks of the candidates that stand out as possible Derby victors.

Candy Kid, winner of the Lexington Futurity, Master Charlie of the Jockey club stakes of last fall, Mother Goose, triumphant in the Belmont Futurity; Kentucky Cardinal, in the Queen City handicap; Quatrain, a recent winner of the $25,000 New Orleans handicap; Stimulus, the Pimlico Futurity victor; Nicholas, Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt's $60,000 imported colt and American Flag, and By Hisself, the first of the Man o' War colts to get to the races, are among the entries that will dominate the spotlight in the early Derby speculation.

Eight Chicago Candidates.

But from far back in the ranks of the other 130 candidates may come the next Derby winner and the next 3 year old champion. It is this uncertainty perhaps that allows the Kentucky race to hold the interest of the American public almost from one year to the next.

Chicago is represented by no less than eight candidates. Heading the list is the imported Master Charlie, purchased by William Daniel of the stock yards for $1,000 as a yearling and the winner of a fortune as a 2 year old; Marshall Field's speedy colt Stimulus; Cup Bearer and Pacier, owned by Gerald C. Cudahy; Blue Ridge, the property of Frederick Burton and John S. Ward, owners of Wise Councellor; Mark Master from Herbert G. Shimp's International stable; Special, owned by Trintz, and Richards and Step Along, the property of Fred M. Grabiner.

Kentucky may make a stronger bid than usual, Kentucky Cardinal, King Nadi, Capt. Hal., Lee O. Cotner, and Almadel standing out as dangerous contenders, while the east will rely chiefly on the rich stables of the Whitneys, Vanderbilts, Kilmers or Wideners.

It is a representative Derby field, those named as eligibles coming from every part of the country.

AMERICAN PACING DERBY ATTRACTS SPEEDY FIELD

BY FRANK S. COOKE.

With an entry of thirty-seven from fifteen states and one Canadian province, the $25,000 American Pacing Derby, which will be the headliner of the Kalamazoo Grand Circuit races, looks just about as good as it did last year, for less than half of that number will face the barrier. Kalamazoo did well in view of the struggle of the big trotting stakes to stay afloat, and in view of what some of the horses entered in the race have done, there is likelihood of a sharp, fast race.

Tommy Murphy, of course, leads the drivers in numbers, having bought four of the best in his judgment for just such affairs. The star of his aggregation in the opinion of horsemen is the 4 year old Theodore Guy that won all of his nine starts as a 3 year old and then took a time record of 2:02¾, just to show that he had a surplus under his belt.

Canadian Brings a Herd.

It remained for Robert Trench of Teeswater, Ont., to top the list of owners. Mr. Trench names four of his own, three of them Canadian bred, by that prolific sire of pacing speed, Grattan Royal, that Nat Ray campaigned one year dolled up with all of the accessories of the harness-makers. Grattan Royal is a midwestern product and after his racing career he emigrated to Canada, where he has founded a pacing tribe as swift and game as were the get of The Eel.

Jean Grattan, Tarzan Grattan and Jeanette Royal, the Grattan Royals picked by Mr. Trench, have not fast public records, but the owner must believe one or more of them can trip along as did Louie Grattan, that raced in two minutes for Vic Fleming. Mr. Trench's other one is Nancy Grizzel, by Belwin, that started nine times last year, but did not win, her trip evidently being in the nature of education.

Sep. Palin, the Indianapolis trainer who brought out Theodore Guy, has just one in the event, Braden Ruler, that took a 3 year old record of 2:08¼ and won three out of ten starts.

Vail Flirting with Luck.

"Doc" Vail should have had first money in the pacing Derby last year. He started Miss Belwin, which won the opening heat. A frightful send-off in the second ruined the chances of that mare and enabled Fred Hyde to win with Margaret Spangler, ultimate winner of the race, Miss Belwin drawing down second money.

Vail names West Virginia Boy this year and his chances really are better, as that horse has been a notable race winner.

Dick McMahon has the same entries that he had a year ago, Black Beau, Trampalane, and Trampanew. These pacers are owned by W. M. Wright and H. O. Reno of Chicago, the latter being the original promoter of the pacing Derby. Last year the stable made a sorry showing in the event, but the horses improved after that, and it would be fitting if his mount could be in the contention next July.

Walter Cox has but one, Skeeter W. He picked this mare up in Ohio late in 1923 and raced her down the line last season. She was not much during the early meetings, but Cox kept on trying until he had her tuned up to concert pitch in September when she won a heat in 2:03¼.

ILLINI SWAMP MAROON TANK TEAM, 43 TO 25

Urbana, Ill., March 7.—[Special.]—Conference records for the 75 and 60 foot plunge for distance were bettered when Illinois whipped Chicago in a dual swimming meet here tonight, 43 to 25. The Illini also took the water basketball game, 9 to 4.

Eldridge of Illinois plunged 75 feet in :37 4-5, bettering the conference record, and on the way shaved the record for 60 feet, making the distance in :15 4-5. He came within two-fifths of a second of the world's record for 75 feet.

Illinois took four first places and won the relay, while Chicago was garnering three. Noyes, speedy Maroon fish, was high point man with two firsts, in the 50 and 100 yard swims. Summaries:

Allen, who holds all of the ice skating titles of this country and Canada, piled up 360 points during the season, while Henry Nelson, Norwegian-American A. A., and Alfon James, Alverno A. A., tied for second honors with 180 points each.

In the girls' division Ruth Muhlmeier of the Austin-Columbia A. A., led with 180 points, while Olga Anderson of the Norwegian-American club was second with 120 points.

In team competition the Alverno A. A. led all the other clubs with 1,370 points, while Austin-Columbia A. A. was second with 1,070, and Henry Playground stood third with 1,030.

Woods and Waters by BOB. BECKER

ECHOES FROM THE MISSISSIPPI RIVER DUCK COUNTY.

ALTHOUGH the duck season is over until another autumn rolls around there are some hunters along the Mississippi who are still thinking about water fowl shooting and at the same time complaining about the hunting conditions that prevail along the "Father of Waters." Communications received from the gunners that do their hunting on the big river invariably contain an indictment of market hunters, scull boats and "flyers." Have you ever seen this trio in action on ducks? It's a new combination to us. However, some of the Mississippi river hunters say that it's an old story along their river, too old, in fact, and they would like to see a change.

Here is the way the gunners indict the market hunters and their scull boats. On the opening day of the duck season, one sees on the river a number of live decoy sets without a blind or any other place of concealment near the sets. Along the shore are the scull boats, decked over with grass with two men and automatic shotguns in each. A flock of mallards appears in the sky. They are flying high and it looks as if they were going to pass up the decoys in the river. But here is where the flyers come in. One of the hunters in a scull boat picks up a mallard decoy from the bottom of the boat and tosses it into the air. The bird beats it for his pals anchored in the middle of the river and the wild birds overhead come down pellmell as it looks like a safe bet to light there. When the ducks have settled down the scull boats come out from the bank. They make no noise and are propelled by an oar at the stern. When they have gotten within range of the wild birds the bombardment starts and, according to the outraged sportsmen, the killing is mighty efficient as ducks mean money to the market hunters and it's poor business to let any birds get away after a stalk is made.

As you can imagine, the sportsmen are setting up a healthy squawk over the activities of the scull boat operators, who, according to the indictment, are making an awful dent in the legitimate duck shooting. One chap in Clinton, Ia., says he hates to hear any talk about reduction of the game bag as under present conditions even he can't get a fair amount of shooting. Bucking the scull boat market hunter combination has been a losing game and has meant few ducks. Well, we've never sailed the waters of the "Mississip" on a scull boat, but if they operate as per the indictment they sure must be deadly contrivances and we have a desire to learn more about them.

OMAHA MERMAID, AGED 14, BREAKS WORLD RECORD

Omaha, Neb., March 7.—[By Associated Press.]—Corinne Condon, 14 year old swimming marvel of Omaha, tonight broke the world's record, held jointly by herself and Miss Helen Wainwright, when she won the National A. A. U. junior fifty yard free style in :28 flat. The event was held in a sixty foot tank. The former record was :29.

Miss Condon also lowered the Midwestern A. A. U. senior fifty yard backstroke record, negotiating that distance in :36 1-10. The former record was :39 4-5. She also made a new senior Midwestern A. A. U. record in the forty yard backstroke, being timed at :28 3-5. No definite mark had been officially recognized in the last event, however, and Miss Condon will be given credit for the record.

An Unknown Historical Fact

DID you know that George Washington, The adopted Father of our Country, just before he got on the Ferry to cross the Delaware for the Photographing of that now famous Picture, Did you know that he smoked two sacks of 'Bull' Durham while he was waiting for the Ferry? (things were just as late in his War, as they were in our last one). Now I have never heard of this 'Bull' Durham episode before, neither have I ever heard it denied. So if it's never either been affirmed or denied, there is no reason to disbelieve that it's not true. 'Bull' Durham originated in Virginia, and Washington lived in Virginia, and he was a great man to patronize home industries. And as Washington was the best man of his day, and Durham the best tobacco of its day, there is no plausible reason to doubt that these two most excellent Institutions didn't readily recognize the good in each other and get together.

Will Rogers

P. S. There is going to be another time in this paper soon. Look for it.

SIXTY-FIVE YEARS AGO!

In 1860 a blend of tobacco was born—"Bull" Durham. On quality alone it has won recognition wherever tobacco is known. It still offers the public this—more flavor, more enjoyment and a lot more money left at the end of a week's smoking.

WOLVERINES AND BADGERS GIVEN EDGE ON TRACK

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Following the announcement of entries for the western conference swimming, track, and field championships to be held on Friday and Saturday nights, Northwestern rules a strong favorite for the aquatic title, while Michigan and Wisconsin should engage in an interesting struggle for the track and field championship, with Northwestern, Chicago, Illinois, and Ohio State probable contenders.

The swimming championships will be decided in the University of Chicago pool. Preliminaries in all events will be held on Thursday night, with all finals on the following night. The track and field title will be determined at Patten gymnasium on Saturday night. Trials in the 440 and 880 yard runs, together with the pole vault, will be held on Friday night. Swimming coaches will meet with the managing committee at the University club at noon on Thursday to draw for heats and decide other questions pertaining to the championships. Track and field coaches will meet with the same committee on Friday at noon at the same place, where heats will be drawn and scratches made.

Faricy Picked to Win.

Because of the all around ability of its team, Northwestern should capture the swimming title. In Capt. Breyer, Howell, Corbett, Manovitz, Ortlepp, Ramsey, Bonnell, McCorrison, and LaPook, Coach Tom Robinson has mustered one of the most evenly balanced college teams in the country.

Other Big Ten universities, however, will be represented by point winners. Faricy of Minnesota will be hard to beat out of first place in the 200 yard breast stroke, and Hill of the Gopher school is favorite for honors in the 150 yard back stroke.

Chances of Illinois, winner of the track and field title last year, being a contender depends largely upon conditions at Urbana. Dan Kinsey and Dean Brownell, two certain point winners, were under the faculty ban for the Illinois relays, while Capt. Mieher and Evans were recovering from recent illness. Kinsey won the high hurdles in the Olympic games last summer and Brownell is the holder of the world's indoor record in the pole vault at 13 feet, ⅝ inch.

Badgers Look Formidable.

Wisconsin and Michigan, however, appear to have more team strength than any of the other entrants. Herbert Schwarze, the Wisconsin weight tosser, is a sure winner of the shotput. In Illinois relays, the Cardinal athlete won his event with an effort of 47 feet, 3½ inches. McAndrews should place in the dash and McGinnis will either win or place in the running high jump. McGiveran is a point possibility in both hurdles. Coach T. E. Jones will have some strong point contenders in the runs. Flueck, Hill, Hilbert and Kennedy are strong quarter milers and Bergstresser and Cassidy are expected to score in the half mile, while Vallely is one of the best milers in the middle west. Kubly and Krueger are distance runners who may count in the two mile.

Michigan also will present a strong front. Wittman was inches behind Locke of Nebraska in the dash at the Illinois relay games. Hubbard may also figure in this event aside from running in the low hurdles, which he won in last year's meet. The Wolverine colored star also won the low barriers in the Illinois meet a week ago yesterday.

Reinke of Michigan is one of the best middle distance runners in the conference, while the victory of the Wolverine team in the four mile relay at Urbana shows Coach Farrell has some sterling milers. Michigan finished second to Georgetown in the two mile relay at Urbana, and again Coach Farrell showed he has half milers of merit. Muns tossed the shot 44 feet 8½ inches in the Illinois relays. This mark should give him a place on Saturday night. Capt. Brooker should win the pol vault.

Guthrie Class in Hurdles.

If Kinsey is out of the meet Guthri and Snyder of Ohio State are the class of the high hurdlers. The former finished sixth in his specialty in the Olympic games, while Snyder has placed in most meets he has been in this winter. Werner of Illinois is a possibility in this event.

Northwestern has two sterling athletes in Martin and Boucher. The former is a middle distance runner, and Coach Frank Hill may elect to start him in both the 440 and 880 yard runs. Boucher is a pole vaulter of the twelve foot variety.

Maroons Are Stronger.

Chicago should make a better showing than any Maroon team of recent years in this set of games. Capt. MacFarlane will start in the dash and quarter mile. Russell should be a strong contender for first place in the high jump and he may score in the high hurdles. Cusack is a possibility in the half mile, and Bourke should count in the two mile.

Dauber of Iowa, who put the shot 45 feet 9 inches in the Illinois relays, and Coulter of the same school are among the best Coach Breshnahan will send to the games. Horner of Indiana is a place possibility in the mile, and Jones of Purdue may score in the shotput. Black of Ohio State and Rue of Illinois may be contenders in the mile, but none of the teams appear to have the all around strength or balance of Wisconsin and Michigan.

ILLINI MATMEN FLOP BUCKEYES FOR 14-6 COUNT

Urbana, Ill., March 7.—[Special.]—Illinois wrestlers threw Ohio's matmen for their first fall of the season, 14 to 6, here tonight before 3,000 fans, and now are tied with Iowa and Indiana for the conference lead, all having clean slates.

Capt. Kenney and Luthringer of Illinois tossed their opponents to the mat for falls, while Shaw and Mathis won decisions to account for the Illini total. Ohio won the three heavyweight classes with decisions.

These mermen are looked on as sure point winners in the Big Ten title swim meet which is to be held in Bartlett gym at the University of Chicago Thursday and Friday. The two Purple flashes are members of the championship relay quartet and also are expected to clip some records in individual events. The Gopher tanker is one of the speediest of the sprints swimmers in the conference, while the Badger star also is a speedy paddler and is counted to win his share of points for his team.

ILLINI SWAMP IOWA ON TRACK, 73 5-6 TO 30 1-6

Champaign, Ill., March 7.—[Special.]—Illinois smothered Iowa, 73 5-6 to 30 1-6, in a dual track meet here this afternoon, taking eight first places and the mile relay, the latter with a fifty yard margin.

The finals of the high and low hurdles saw four Illinois men as the only competitors and they deliberately broke the tape as one man, making it impossible to judge the winner. No armory records fell, but Ponzer ran the half in 1:58 2-5 to tie the existing Illinois record, and the Illini quartet bettered the Illinois record for the relay, winning in 3:28 2-5. This also is better than the conference indoor record.

Iowa collected firsts only in the high jump, shotput, and mile run. Phelps of Iowa was high point man with eight points, gathered with first in the mile and second in the two mile. Yarnall of Illinois, with first in the 75 yard dash and a tie for first in the 75 yard low hurdles, was second, with 7¼ points. Summaries:

The playgrounds team title went to Gallistel, which scored only 4 markers in the school meet, but which netted 33 in the open division, Lloyd playground, winner of second place, getting only 13.

Last Year's Champs Win.

Last year's champions were much in evidence in the open division yesterday, C. Yaccini, 105 pounder, taking his third consecutive title in the meet to add 7 points to Lloyd playground's total. R. ## ENGLEWOOD LIGHTS WIN CITY CAGE TITLE

GEORGETOWN U. IS TRACK CHAMP; 10 RECORDS FALL

New York, March 7.—[By Associated Press.]—Georgetown university tonight displaced the University of Pennsylvania as indoor intercollegiate track champions in a spectacular meet, which witnessed the shattering of three indoor world's records and seven intercollegiate standards.

Flashing a brilliant all-around exhibition, the Washington collegians gained their triumph by a decisive margin in a three-cornered battle with Harvard and Pennsylvania, which forfeited the title it has held for the last two seasons.

Georgetown's speed and brawn rolled up a total of 37 points in ten of the eleven varsity title events, including two spectacular relay victories and first places in the high and broad jumps.

It was the first time Georgetown has ever won an I. C. A. A. A. championship, either indoor or outdoor.

World's record performances, which also displaced the previous intercollegiate standards, were hung up by Georgetown's brilliant two mile relay team, which lowered its own mark to 7:41 3-5; Nelson Sherill, Pennsylvania star, who vaulted to a new pole vault record of 13 feet, and Charley Moore, Penn State timber topper, who set a new 70 yard high hurdle mark of 8: 3-5 seconds.

Besides these events, intercollegiate indoor records also fell in the one mile relay, broad jump, two mile run, and shot put.

The final point standing:

Georgetown, 37; Harvard, 24¼; Pennsylvania, 22¼; Princeton, 13¼; Cornell, 10¼; Yale, 10¼; Dartmouth, 9¼; Boston college, 9; Colby, 8; Columbia and Penn State, 7 each; Holy Cross, 5, and Syracuse, 2.

GOLFERS CASTING SHEEP'S EYES AT FLAPPER SPRING

BY MORROW KRUM.

Just now, as Spring, Nature's swift-stepping flapper, is packing her luggage and golf bags and preparing for her annual trip northward, a great stir is sweeping over the local golfers and the local golf clubs. Yesterday's weather accelerated the preparations.

On almost every hand you'll find the true lovers of the royal and ancient game inspecting their clubs, sighting along hickory shafts, trying the spring in drivers, and polishing up their iron implements. And so is it with the officials of the country clubs.

Members of the Knollwood club, a youngster amid our galaxy of golf clubs, are looking forward to the middle of June with great interest. It is then, possibly on the 15th, this new course, which is located amid the classic shades of that exclusive environ, Lake Forest, will be thrown open for play.

No Traps on Course.

Work on the Knollwood club was virtually finished last season, but workmen are unusually busy out there these days putting on the finishing touches, and the proximity of good golf weather is spurring their efforts.

Knollwood's course will measure 6,750 yards. According to Robert H. Hunter, secretary, no traps have been situated for the single purpose of vexing the beginner, yet the gentleman who shoots in the late seventies and early eighties will have plenty of excitement.

All of the club officials expect to take part in the opening day's play. They include:

Thomas Wilson, president; David J. Malloy, first vice president; Lucius Teeter, second vice president; John W. O'Leary, treasurer; Hunter; Gen. E. Gage, executive secretary; and L. W. Wasey, Fred A. Poor, Samuel Insull, Thomas R. Gowenlock, E. Edson White, Charles MacDowell, J. V. Farwell, Nathan William MacChesney, and Franklin P. Smith, governors. Harry Collins is the club's professional.

Other Signs of Spring.

From Park Ridge comes the news that work on the new clubhouse is going on at a furious pace and the roof will be completed within a few days. The officials and members hope to have the club completed by Memorial day.

The Calumet Country club has taken under advisement a plan to add a second story to the clubhouse building. Provisions for such an addition was made when the present building was constructed and the second floor can be added without difficulty.

J. V. Lanigan, an Olympian who is well known, is making plans to take a number of his friends and golfers on a spring training tour. Lanigan has sent out circulars on his plan and the price looks reasonable. According to present plans the party, which may mount to forty, will leave the Illinois Central depot March 20 and return to Chicago March 30 after visiting Gulfport, New Orleans and Memphis. The baseball players have their spring trips—why not the tee box tourists? Members of Calumet, Flossmoor and Olympian Fields have already signed.

Lake Shore in Big Group.

Announcement that the Lake Shore Athletic club, now under construction at the corner of Lake Shore drive and Chestnut street, has become affiliated with the National Town and Country group of clubs being organized in ten principal cities of the country was made yesterday by Lawrence H. Whiting, treasurer of the local club. Arrangements for the inclusion of the Lake Shore in the National Town and Country group were completed at a conference in New York between Whiting, representing the local body, and Louis E. Stoddard and Rollin J. Furbeck of the Town-Country organization. Under the terms of the agreement, members of the Lake Shore club are automatically made members of the ten National Town and Country clubs called for in the program of that organization.

Howard Smith, chairman of sports and pastimes at Exmoor Country club, has made a bid for approval of July 17 for the annual Jamboree and July 29 for the annual Old Boys' championship tournament. According to Joe G. Davis, secretary of the Chicago District Golf association, the latter event is open to senior golfers from anywhere and usually gives some good golf for the players and onlookers.

A. C. Allen, treasurer of the Western Golf association, is getting his spring training at Biloxi, Miss.

George Feery, formerly of the Rock Falls Country club at Rock River, Ill., has been appointed professional at the Lafayette Country club, Lafayette, Ind.

Now Pinehurst looms as the center of golfing. The woman's annual north and south title meet is scheduled for March 25-31, the north and south open event for April 1-2, and the north and south amateur for April 6-11. Miss Glenna Collett of Providence, R. I.; Walter Hagen, and Fred W. Knight of Philadelphia, champions in the above events as they are listed, are expected to defend their titles.

MARTIN STARTS EAST FOR CLASH WITH ROSENBERG

Eddie. [Cannonball] Martin, the world's bantamweight champion, who won a ten round decision over Peter Sarmiento at Milwaukee last Friday night, passed through Chicago yesterday on his way to New York, where he will defend his title against Phil Rosenberg in a fifteen round decision bout on March 20.

Aside from a slightly discolored left eye, Martin carried no other marks of the furious fracas with the Filipino. While Sarmiento made a gallant finish in the last three rounds, he fell short of overcoming the lead established by Martin in the early rounds of the fight. This match together with the one between Harold Smith and Eddie Anderson, which resulted in a draw, were the two best fights seen in the Cream City in years. There was action in every round and the fans certainly got their money's worth.

Following the bout with Rosenberg, the bantamweight champion will come west to meet Connie Curry of Iowa in Omaha on April 6. The fighter was accompanied by Manager Mel Cook.

Billy Wells, the English welterweight, matched to meet Frankie Welch of the west side at East Chicago, on March 16, will arrive in Chicago this morning from the coast, accompanied by Manager Chrley Harvey. Wells will establish training quarters tomorrow at the Arcade, while Welch will go into training at the Mullen gymnasium. Matchmaker Eddie Long will support the main event with three other contests.

Sammy Mandell of Rockford, claimant of the world's 135 pound championship, who has reëntered the New York lightweight tourney, will be in Chicago this week to resume training at the Arcade, according to [illegible] [illegible], who was responsible for bringing out the [illegible] [illegible].

MONDT, ROMANO BEGIN TRAINING TOMORROW

Following the matching of Mike Romano and Joe "Toots" Mondt for the windup of the wrestling show at the Coliseum on March 17, Promoters Krone and Cutler are scanning the heavyweight ranks for suitable opponents for Ed "Strangler" Lewis and John Pesek.

Both Lewis and Pesek are considered as future opponents for Wayne Munn, claimant of the world's heavyweight title, and the fans will be given an opportunity to see them against the best grapplers available. Lewis still claims the championship despite a referee's decision in favor of Munn. Strangler, however, is willing to meet Munn any time or place to determine which is the better man.

Start Training Tomorrow.

Mondt and Romano, who are about evenly matched in size and weight, are in Chicago and will start training tomorrow at local gymnasiums. Tickets will be placed on sale at the usual places on Wednesday.

Hans Steinke, the German grappler who is matched to meet Arthur Boganz in one of the feature bouts of Paddy Harmon's mat show at his Dreamland rink on Wednesday night, will give up part of his purse if he does not beat his opponent two falls in one hour. Steinke is anxious to meet Munn, Lewis, or any of the other top notch heavyweights. In another bout, Joe Stecher, former world's champion, will take holds with Ivan Zaikin, the Russian. Three other bouts complete the card.

Munn Decides March 15.

Billy Sandow, manager of Ed Lewis, was in Chicago yesterday, and asserted there is nothing new regarding a match with Munn. Something definite will be announced on March 15, when Munn and Manager Gabe Kaufmann either will accept or decline the offer of $100,000 for Wayne's services until June 1.

The major league lead hangs on the outcome of the Sparta-Pullman clash. The Bohemians are leading by a point, but if the Car Builders cop today they will be one point ahead of their opponents. Following is the complete schedule:

6 LIGHTWEIGHTS MIX TOMORROW IN SECOND ROUND

New York, March 7.—[Special.]—Contenders for Bennie Leonard's vacated lightweight championship who survived the first round of the state athletic commission's championship elimination tournament will struggle in three of the bouts in the second round Monday night in Madison Square Garden. Coöperating with the commission, Promoter Tex Rickard will conduct three twelve round bouts in which six of the victors in the initial round of the tournament will meet.

K. O. Clyde Jackie, Toledo contender, is to meet Jimmy Goodrich of Buffalo; Benny Valger, east sider, is matched with Basil Galiano, New Orleans entry, and the luck of the draw has sent Sol Seeman, Brooklyn boxer, into a match against Charlie O'Connell of Cleveland. In addition to these matches, a four round bout will be conducted, in which the principals will be Benny Tell and Johnny Pincus.

The fourth contest in the American section of the tournament is scheduled for decision on April 30 at the New York Velodrome, when Tommy O'Brien, Milwaukee lightweight, who injured his right hand in knocking out K. O. George Chaney, will tackle Joe Benjamin, California's elimination bout winner.

EDDIE IS SURE SOX SHORTSTOP WORRY IS OVER

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Shreveport, La., March 7.—[Special.]—"I've seen enough during this first week of training to stop me from worrying about the shortstop position on the White Sox."

Those were words spoken today by Manager Collins. If he isn't worried about the position it seems there is no use for further worry over it by the host of White Sox fans up in Chicago. Manager Eddie doesn't yet know which one of his many candidates will be on the job as the regular when the season opens, but he has been convinced already the place will be well handled by one of three or four of the candidates.

There is a strong possibility Bill Barrett will not even be a candidate. He is due here tomorrow or Monday, and when he arrives Boss Collins intends to leave it up to the man himself whether he tries for the shortstop job or returns to his former habit of outfielding.

Barrett Good Outfielder.

"I've heard that Barrett has said he doesn't want to be an infielder, but I don't know if it's true. I want him to settle the question himself. If he doesn't want to play in the infield I shall have him go back to outfielding. I know he's a good outfielder, and no doubt he will break into many a game out there. He hits right handed and hits well. He has a great outfield arm and can go and get the ball, too, about as well as the nert one. However, if he desires to be an infielder he can get right into the fight with the other candidates for the shortstop job.

"I feel quite sure that either Ike Davis or Young Butler can make good at shortstopping, and of course we know what little McClellan can do. He's stronger this spring than he ever has been in his life and seems to have more driving power in his hitting. It's pretty hard to find any one who can turn out snappier fielding than he does.

Get Holiday Today.

"The younger fellows, like Wojack and Cortazzo, may not be far enough advanced yet to fill such an important position, but I wouldn't say yet they haven't a chance. Possibly in a couple more weeks the situation will be considerably changed. Anyway, I feel certain that one of the fellows will fill the bill in style this year, and I've quit worrying about it."

When the Sox crew wound up its drill today the men were informed there would be no Sunday practice. So much was accomplished in the six days, with fine weather on tap all the time, that the manager felt it would be better to give the boys a day off.

From now on there will be games to be played every Sunday, but nothing is booked for tomorrow, and many of the boys, including the manager, intend to spend a part of the day at the country club and indulge in a bit of golf.

The first game will be played next Saturday here against the Shreveport club. Another is booked for Sunday, and if the warm weather continues next week there will be plenty of young pitchers ready to turn out some fast stuff.

Landis Due Tomorrow.

The gang is expecting a visit from Commissioner Landis the first of the week, word having come that he will arrive Monday morning. The manager intends to stage a five inning game for the former judge to watch, and then, after practice, he will be hustled off to the country club for a round of golf.

MAROONS LOOK FOR GOOD BASEBALL YEAR

The outlook for the baseball season is about the most promising it's been for University of Chicago fans in recent years. A good crop of recruits has sprung up from last year's yearling string, which, together with a few notable performers who occupied berths on the Maroon nine last year, should enable Coach Nels Norgren to produce a likely outfit.

Forecasting the occupants of berths on the Midway team is precarious business right now, for final examinations for the winter quarter intervene before the opening of the diamond season. Barring scholastic difficulties, however, there should be at least a dozen strong candidates.

In the pitching department, which has been weak at Chicago for several seasons, Coach Nelson will have Wallie Marks and Joey Gubbins, the former being a sophomore who threw high class ball in his freshman year. Gubbins was a regular last season. There will be three bidders for backstop, including George Benton and Looie Shimberg and Jim Webster, who is another soph and a likely hitter. Norgren is looking for some one who is faster on his pins than is either Capt. Russell Cunningham or Bill Weiss for first base, and if that man is found the leader will play shortstop, while Weiss will take to the garden.

MAJORS TO USE 70 SOUTHPAWS THIS SEASON

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Left handed pitchers have ruined the disposition of more than one big league manager, but that particular variety of athlete continues to be popular. In fact, the southpaw is now a cherished article and figures prove as much, there being approximately seventy wrong armed twirlers scattered through the sixteen big time training camps that stretch across the country from Florida to Catalina island.

The southpaw slabber came into his own last season after several years in which the managers looked upon right handers as their chief stock in trade. The return of the southpaw was just a natural evolution and when it was noted that they were particularly effective the clubs sent scouts hither and thither with instruction to pick up anything that could pitch with the left arm.

Upset Pet Theories.

The sudden increase in the effectiveness and popularity of left handers caused a change in at least one of baseball's pet theories. For many years the outfielder who walloped from the port side of the plate was looked upon as more desirable than the right handed hitter. The managers reasoned that the left handed hitter was one step closer to first base; also that left handed batters hit right handed pitchers with greater ease.

Now, with the left handed twirler in the ascendency, there is a crying need of right handed hitting outfielders. Take the Cubs, for instance. Last season Killefer's outfield was rendered null and void by southpaw pitching. To remedy the defect President Veeck spent the better part of the winter trying to beg, borrow, or steal a man who batted in orthodox fashion. The man wasn't found, and now Killefer's only hope is to keep Hack Miller in action.

Resurrected Vean Gregg.

If the figures mean anything, the southpaw craze has hit the American league clubs harder than the National. There are about forty southpaw candidates in the camps of the junior major and about ten less in the other league. No club has more than a half dozen left handers, however. In that class are St. Louis, Philadelphia, Boston, and Cleveland of the American and Brooklyn of the National.

Funny thing about the southpaw lists is that some of the real stars are what you might call old gentlemen. Art Nehf of the Giants, for example, is no colt. And what about Rube Marquard of the Braves, Wilbur Cooper of the Cubs, Herb Pennock of the Yankees, Sherry Smith of the Indians, Eppa Rixey of the Reds, and others. Washington, with Mogridge, Zachary, Ruether, and the resurrected Vean Gregg has the nucleus of an old man's home. Gregg starred for Cleveland twelve years ago and then passed on. If he makes good some club will want to sign Jack Pfiester next season.

Road Chief Sees Early Solution of City Congestion

Chicago to Lead Country in Unit Traffic Plan.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

FULL control of the metropolitan traffic area through the coöperation of all road building agencies will clear up traffic congestion in Chicago and in like transportation terminals the country over, in the opinion of Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the United States bureau of public roads.

Most suburban areas, those bordering Chicago included, he terms as "no man's land" in his latest discussion of city motor travel and road development, based on the joint traffic survey made recently in Cook county.

The solution for the city's congestion problems, he declares, lies in the agreement between federal, state, county, and city road builders to develop highways and streets in the Chicago zone as a unit in future, rather than parts of four separate improvement programs.

"Every day of the year at the border line between Cook county and the city of Chicago," says his report, in part, "the state, county, and other roads at fifteen principal entrances discharge into the city a total daily volume of traffic equal to 40 per cent of all of the motor vehicles registered in Chicago and Cook county.

"Because of a lack of improved through traffic routes within the city those fifteen entrances concentrate or focus at practically five points.

"The Chicago plan, which was established about fifteen years ago, began to relieve traffic conditions existing in the loop district, a very small area in the heart of the city. The Chicago Plan commission is the advisory body of the city authorities, making recommendations for street improvements. The state and the county authorities beginning outside of the city boundaries have been leading the main state and county arteries up to the city limits. Between the inside development, the work within the congested districts of the city, and the work that has been done by the state and county authorities outside the city limits, we find that territory which we call 'no man's land,' existing at the city limits.

"To illustrate the condition which exists: In order for the traffic to enter from the south, it must go west two miles to Western avenue and then North and after having gone north for a considerable distance, must go back into the city, a four mile detour. Every day the average traffic discharged at the Western avenue gateway into Chicago is over 15,000 vehicles. Within the loop district there are approximately 175,000 vehicles per day, 10,000 street cars, and 1,000,000 pedestrians. And lying between the outlying suburban and country districts and the loop district we find this borderland.

"And why does this condition exist? The state and county build their highways through the taxation of the county or of the state as a whole. Within the city the improvements are made through local improvement certificates, and the property benefited is assessed for the cost. We get into his borderland at the county limit and find that that property is not of sufficient value to carry the assessment to build the highways, and so the city, county, and state improvements are not properly connected because of a conflict in jurisdiction, and because we do not synchronize our outside and our inside improvements in such a way as to allow a free flow of traffic.

"Outside of the city limits there are cemeteries almost without number. There are 110 golf clubs. There are eighty-nine villages, towns, and cities from 70,000 population down. The roads within the city, east and west, north and south, are what we call sketchy. They are interrupted by the physical obstructions of rivers, canals, marshes, and by railroad tracks, so that we do not have adequate continuous traffic through streets north and south or east and west.

"The same condition exists in the county, and this condition is being rapidly accentuated by the laying out of new golf clubs, by the increasing area of cemeteries, and particularly by the development of new villages and towns which take jurisdiction over their streets and do not permit the free flow of traffic from the focal centers of that great metropolitan district out into the suburban district for a distance of twenty, thirty, or forty miles. In addition to the physical obstructions are the legal obstructions of city, state, county, village, and even township and certain districts which are under no municipal control, which we have, for lack of a better term, called 'orphans.'

"Now, is it any wonder that we have traffic congestion, that we fail to obtain the service from the motor vehicle which it offers, if we allow a condition of that character to exist within a territory which is the focal center for the whole Mississippi valley, one of the richest agricultural and industrial regions of the whole United States?

"Congestion is not a factor of our inability to take care of our traffic, but it is a factor of the stopping of traffic and not allowing it to flow freely over our streets.

"In order to synchronize and do away with this 'no man's land,' we have brought the Chicago plan commission, the county of Cook, the state highways department of Illinois, and the federal bureau of public roads into an agreement that a major plan covering the metropolitan area of Chicago, and including city, county, and state roads, will be established, and that a plan providing for through traffic arteries focusing at the congested centers of the city and extending out into the suburban districts will be set up as the objective of all of the public officials who are spending public money for the improvement of highways; and that these improvements will not only be coördinated so far as the plan is concerned but that they will be synchronized, so that, in point of time, the work done by the state and by the county will connect up with that done by the city, so that we will provide traffic arteries over which the traffic is free to flow."

FOOLING THE THIEF

One way to hinder the busy automobile thief lies in closing the fuel feed valve of a parked car. This prevents the flow of gas through to the carburetor, as illustrated here. Of course, organized bandits could easily push the car away or tow it to their garage, but the closed valve will add to their trouble. [Keystone Photo.]

SHORT CIRCUIT.

A short circuit will occur if armored cable which is wound over insulated wire is crushed.

Keystone State Will Post History Along Lincoln Way

HARRISBURG, Pa.—The department of highways is completing plans for the erection of permanent markers at all important historical points along the Lincoln highway in Pennsylvania. At this time there are few such places indicated by markers and yet historic associations teem along the road from the Delaware to the Ohio.

Historic associations line this road of our forefathers across the famous old Keystone state, from the point near where Washington crossed the Delaware, through the "City of Brotherly Love," along the old King's highway where British and Continental troops have marched, along the trail of the first westbound pioneers to the "Forks of the Ohio" and Pittsburgh, with all of the romance and history of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries.

No road in America traverses such historic country for such a distance as the Lincoln in Pennsylvania. No road in America had an earlier origin or has witnessed a more thrilling and impressive throng of travelers as the centuries have passed since the first settlers trod the trail in the seventeenth century.

Along the road retreated the first congress before the British from our first capital at Philadelphia to Lancaster and later to York. Along the same road in Pennsylvania marched and countermarched the troops of both the Union and the confederacy before the battle of Gettysburg. Along this road have passed Washington, Franklin, Hamilton, Lincoln, Grant—nearly every famous character of American history.

The state highway department is also planning to erect signs at each stream over ten feet wide so that tourists may know the name of the stream and connect it with its historic significance.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question $5 is awarded to Ben Wadington, 6241 Addison street, Chicago.

The Question.

What Chicago boulevard do you consider the safest motor road?

Where Asked.

Madison and La Salle streets.

The Answers.

Albert Otto, 4217 South Mozart street, deputy clerk—Western boulevard, from 31st street to Garfield, is my idea of a safe street. The intersections are wide open without buildings and shrubbery to hide the cross traffic. It is an important road connecting with all southbound highways.

William Clare, 705 West 71st street, bailiff—Grand boulevard, from 31st street south, is the safest and most pleasant drive in the city. The stop lights are so arranged that a car can run almost continually and the wide pavement and lack of cross streets helps the drive.

William C. Porter, Blue Island, Ill., clerk—Since the widening of Western avenue, from Garfield south to Blue Island, it is the safest motor road that I know of. It is wide enough to allow motorists to pass without danger of collision and the center boulevard divides opposite traffic lines.

Clarence Ramseen, 2143 North Mozart street, chief clerk—I think the northbound drive from Belmont avenue to Irving Park boulevard is the safest drive in Chicago since the width of Sheridan road there was doubled and the traffic flow divided. This road leads to all north and northwest main highways and is a boon to Chicago motorists.

Willard C. Nelligan, 646 North Lockwood avenue, auditor—I think Austin boulevard, from 22d street to North avenue, is by far the safest place to drive in Chicago. There are fewer accidents and chances for accidents on this road, which is policed by the west park police and the Oak Park motorcycle police. It is a good road for all west connections, too.

Los Angeles and Chicago Alike in Highway Division

SENTIMENT in southern California for a square deal in any future highway program was crystallized at the meeting recently held at the headquarters of the Automobile Club of Southern California in Las Angeles when some three hundred representative citizens from the thirteen southern California counties attended a highway conference.

Briefly, the motoring organization contends that the past highway program has given southern California only about 34 per cent of the expenditures for state highway development and about the same percentage of the state highway maintenance fund, when approximately 50 per cent of all money for construction comes from this section and 57 per cent of the funds for maintenance are raised in the thirteen southern counties.

Strong opposition also is manifested toward the proposed legislation that will include some $117,000,000 worth of new roads in the 6,524 miles of the state system, when there remains $214,000,000 worth of work to be done before the 6,524 miles are completed.

The club sets forth that it is contending for a more equitable plan of financing, a standard of measurement that shall determine which roads shall be built by the state and which by the district benefited, a plan of improvement in accordance with travel demands, and a better plan of finance.

A Landslide for Willys-Overland!

NEW WILLYS-KNIGHT SEDAN.... BRILLIANTLY ENGINEERED.... WITH GREATER POWER.... FINDS INSTANT FAVOR IN CHICAGO

There is no mistaking Chicago's admiration of the new Willys-Knight Sedan. February sales in the Chicago territory were the highest ever recorded for that month in all Willys-Overland history!

The real reason for this great success is not hard to find. Buyers are comparing automobile values these days.... and in comparing this fine new Willys-Knight Sedan with other cars, they find that it excels in beauty, in comfort, in power, and in sustained performance that is absolutely trouble-free.

The performance of the new Willys-Knight places this great car in a class by itself. Its famous sleeve-valve engine is free from noisy tappets.... it is the only type of automobile engine that actually and literally improves with use.... there is no carbon trouble.... there are no valves to grind.... and the celebrated Lanchester Balancer, built into the engine, prevents vibration at any engine speed.

In keeping with its acknowledged mechanical superiorities, the body style and body construction of this fine new Willys-Knight Sedan have been still further improved. Attractive in appearance.... marvelously smooth in operation.... dependable beyond measure.... $200 lower in price.... the new Willys-Knight Sedan is undoubtedly the sanest automobile investment on the market.

Expert Explains How Lubrication Makes or Breaks

Paints Picture of Oil Action in 1925 Motor.

HOW lubrication prevents or greatly reduces friction and wear in an internal combustion engine such as used in automobiles, motor trucks, tractors, airplanes, and motorboats, and how fouling or dilution of oil by gasoline, water, and dirt affects lubrication were explained in popular language and in a simplified way by S. W. Sparrow of the automotive research staff of the United States bureau of standards at a meeting of the Indiana section of the Society of Automotive Engineers in Indianapolis.

"So far as the internal combustion engine is concerned, the primary object of lubrication is to prevent or reduce wear," he said. "It is accomplished by maintaining between the two working surfaces some substances which will prevent them from being in contact while they are in motion. The maintaining of this desired separation depends upon the reluctance of the lubricant to depart from between them. That property upon which the reluctance depends is known as viscosity.

"Too high a viscosity is bad, too low a viscosity is worse, for if the viscosity is too low there will be excessive friction and excessive wear under full load conditions.

"Dilution reduces the viscosity of the crankcase oil. The seriousness of dilution is not primarily the reduction in viscosity, but the instability, the continuous changing viscosity. Unfortunately, the high viscosity desired for full load operation comes after a period of operation at full load and the low viscosity which makes the engine easy to turn over in starting comes after the engine has been turned over and supplied with the rich mixture necessary for starting.

"After the engine has reached its rate of crankcase oil dilution depends normal operating temperature, the primarily on the average temperature of the cylinder walls, on the fuel volatility, and on the average fuel air ratio, but does not depend much on the temperature of the incoming fuel charge nor on the degree of vaporization of the charge. If the temperature of the oil film on the cylinder wall is lower than the dew-point temperature at which the first drop of fuel will condense on cooling or the last drop will evaporate on heating, the liquid spray striking the cylinder wall will not be evaporated and vapor striking the wall will be condensed.

"The dilution which takes place under normal operating conditions is likely to proceed at a rather steady rate and eventually to reach an equilibrium value. The situation is somewhat different with respect to the dilution that occurs during the starting period. An increase of more than 1,000 per cent in fuel must be provided at low temperatures to get sufficient fuel vapor to form an explosive mixture. The unvaporized fuel comes in contact with the cold oil film, dilutes it, and eventually reaches the crankcase.

"Where starts are frequent and periods of continuous operation are rather short, the rate of dilution is likely to be extremely high and the diluent must be eliminated from the oil at a comparatively rapid rate to maintain the viscosity of the oil at a safe value.

"The target to be aimed at in lubrication is to provide a lubricant which will keep the metal surfaces apart, effectively seal the combination chamber, and not go where it is not wanted."

TUNED BY FAIR MECHANICS

Ship Loaded Trucks.

Shipment of loaded motor trucks on flat cars by rail between large industrial centers has recently been suggested by David Halliwell of the general superintendent's department, London, Midland and Scottish railway, as a new method of coördinating rail and highway transportation.

The primary object of the plan is to expedite traffic between points not within easy trucking distance, by eliminating the transfer of goods between rail carriers and motor trucks at terminals and by means of the greater speed attainable on rails.

Tourist Sleepers.

DON'T hynotize yourself when you drive on country roads, is the advice given by Riley D. Moore, an osteopathic physician, who writes for American Motorist.

"Do not stare," he says. "Remember that the normal eye is a restless eye and that cramps in the eye muscles, like cramps in the legs, frequently follow prolonged immobility. In city driving, one is not so prone to stare as when on a long stretch of open country. Here sometimes a fixed eye on a straight road leads to a sort of self hypnosis (did it not sound like a bad pun, I should say auto hypnosis) and dangerous dreaming at the wheel. Driving with a dropped chin, so that one must raise the eyes slightly to see ahead, increases the strain on the eyes and the tendency toward the dazed dreamy state, a condition in which the driver is not equal to sudden emergencies."

DON'T RACE MOTOR.

If you care to keep your engine in good condition, do not race it when starting it on a cold morning. It is better to permit engine to idle until the oil, thick and heavy from the cold, is worked up to the parts needing lubricant. Give the oil a chance to circulate.

STEERING GEAR.

Do not neglect your steering gear. If it is worn the wear on your front tires as a result will very soon amount to more than the cost of having the gear repaired. Also, if the gear is loose, it is difficult to place the car accurately, and there is danger of losing control.

Launch National Scheme for Road Numbering System

AN important step toward the uniform numbering and marking of interstate highways was taken yesterday when Secretary of Agriculture Howard M. Gore appointed a board, composed of officials from the bureau of public roads and the state highway departments, to prepare a plan and secure its adoption by the various states. Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the bureau of public roads, is chairman of the new body.

Commenting upon the helpful results which will undoubtedly come from this action, Secretary Gore said: "The Association of State Highway Officials has been giving earnest consideration to this matter for several years and each state, as a unit, has been frantically passing ordinances, erecting signs, eliminating railroad crossings, and using the generous space in the daily press to teach the public safety methods of highway transportation.

"There have been a number of safety council meetings and gatherings of various groups interested not only in highway safety but in highway convenience, which have from time to time published their suggestions, but it has been found that there have been so many divergent views and conflicting ideas that the general public in traveling over the highways through the several states encounter considerable confusion because of the great variety of direction signs and danger signals.

"This joint board will not only adopt uniform signs and danger signals to be approved by the states, but will also number the main highways throughout the country. The purpose of this is to simplify traveling directions for the public so that a person traveling from New York through Chicago to San Francisco may be able to do so by following a certain number all the way. Then also every danger sign will mean the same in every state. It is believed that these measures will add much to the safety of the traveling public, as well as to their convenience and personal comfort. You would be surprised if you knew the additional expense met by the public in the unnecessary mileage traveled because of misdirection or no direction at all.

"Thirty-eight state legislatures are now in session and, while a few states have no legislation on their statute books to provide for this coördinating work, a vast majority already have that authority, and it is expected that the remaining states will gladly fall in line."

Aids Church.

Motor busses are utilized by the Memorial Baptist church of Cortland, N. Y., for the transportation of rural members of the Sunday school. Each Sunday the machines cover the macadamized highways within a radius of seven miles of the town, picking up all within the zone.

"We are justly proud of this car—It's the best we've ever built!"

—Russell E. Gardner

"—and why shouldn't it be!

"Everything that could be learned from more than 40 years of catering to the public's needs in individual transportation has gone into the building of the new Gardner Eight-in-line.

"Everything that the public has learned to prize most highly in its 25 years of automobile use is in this Gardner—beauty, style, individuality, power, durability, performance.

"And the price is a revelation!

"That's why the public's swing to Gardner is so pronounced. Public demand has so swamped our plant with orders in such a short time, that we've found it necessary to double our production.

"It's the new Gardner Eight-in-line people want—and they want it because it's the outstanding car value of the year!"

Battle of Eights Is Year's Feature in Motor Market

Small Car Forges Ahead as U. S. Roads Improve.

BY WHITCOMB WILLIAMS.

DETROIT, March 7.—[Special.]—A pretty battle is now under way in the automobile industry, and will undoubtedly continue throughout the year in a bid for popularity. This fight for public favor is between engines of the V type eights and the straight line eights, and the sixes.

A study of the 1925 lineup shows no less than half a score of the leading automobile makers have adopted the straight eight type and are producing them in quantity sufficient to make them a challenging factor in cars selling above $2,000. Needless to say, each variety of engine will have its partisan followers who will put up a convincing argument that their respective favorite is the better equipped vehicle. Other motorists are yet to be convinced, being loth to see an improvement; in the same way they still maintain that balloon tires and four wheel brakes are more of a fad than additional safety and "roadability" features.

Then comes the question which is frequently asked: "What is an eight?" It must not be forgotten that all high class automobiles are not of the eight variety. Nobody will argue the fact that cars such as Rolls-Royce are pretty good cars even if they are sixes.

Some of the chief points for argument in favor of the eight are new quality of flexibility and response to the throttle, elimination of vibration, increased power combined with reduced consumption of fuel, new compactness of construction, which means easier service; speed, hauling power, and quick pickup.

But automotive engineers are not yet satisfied that the ideal engine has as yet been developed, and claim—or at least a few of them do—that the present straight eight engine is the forerunner of the car of the future that will be equipped with the "pocket" type of power plants. The trend, too, is toward much smaller cars. Then, too they are looking forward to the day when all the super highways that are now blueprinted will be a reality and the United States from one side to the other will be smooth boulevards. From authoritative sources comes the announcement that this will be in just about twenty years.

So those interested in motor cars and the motor industry in general have something to watch—V style and straight eights, sixes, and the size of the next car. They are already pretty well satisfied that it will be an inclosed model, probably with balloon tires, possibly with four wheel brakes, but they are satisfied the choice will be a good one whichever way they may decide if it be any one of the present two dozen makes with established reputations.

Motor Hotel.

"The automobile hotel" has been contributed to the life of the road by a French architect. It is a light reinforced concrete building, to be placed anywhere along the main automobile highways. The ground floor is a garage with all the essentials; the second floor a restaurant, and the third floor a hotel, but a hotel of peculiar type. Instead of rooms, there are cabins, as if on a steamboat, which makes it possible in an emergency to house a large number of people for the night. On the roof is the wireless.

BATTLE EASTERN STORMS

New York state motorcycle officers did yeoman work for the relief of snowbound motorists recently when heavy snowstorms practically halted all highway traffic. Here are three of the state inspectors who are credited with leading the rescue activities on roads about Binghampton.

Strict Laws for Pedestrians Cut Coast Death Toll

SINCE the installation of the new traffic laws in Los Angeles, it is interesting to note that deaths through motor vehicle accidents there have decreased almost one-half in the comparison of January of this year with the first month of 1924.

This decline, reported by the public safety department of the Automobile Club of Southern California, is believed due in large part to observance of the jaywalking and traffic ordinances. Auto accidents, the report shows, caused twelve fatalities in January of 1925, while twenty-three are recorded for the first month of last year.

Fatalities among pedestrians crossing streets elsewhere than at crosswalks totaled two last month, as compared with seven for January of a year ago. One death is recorded for last month through crossing a street carelessly, although three fatalities came under this heading during January, 1924. Another favorable indication is that no fatalities resulted through pedestrians becoming confused in traffic during January of this year, although there were three from this cause last year in that month.

Fear Lawmakers Will Injure Big Motor Bus Field

WASHINGTON, D. C.—There is grave danger that the motor bus, on which millions of people in the cities and in the rural communities are now wholly dependent for transportation, may be seriously crippled and that many bus lines may be forced to suspend operations and cancel schedules as a result of drastic tax and restrictive measures urged in the state legislatures now in session.

This warning was broadcast yesterday by the American Automobile association and was based on an analysis of scores of measures designed to regulate and tax the motor bus.

Many of these measures, the statement declared, are of so drastic a character that the bus lines would be virtually wiped out of existence and the development of this new agency of mass transportation brought to a standstill. The most destructive of these bills have been introduced in states where motor bus transportation has not yet reached the stage that assures it popular support against unfair and restrictive legislation.

Outlining the serious consequences from the standpoint of public transportation that would result from these restrictive proposals, Thomas P. Henry, president of the association, said:

"The measures for taxing and restricting motor bus transportation are primarily due to the failure on the part of many well meaning legislators to visualize clearly the fact that the era of motor bus transportation is here. To retard its development by discriminatory legislation is to restrict a public service that has had tremendous expansion in the last few years because of a great need it filled.

"Although the bus has come to be a common every day convenience, few realize the dimensions it has reached as a transportation agency. As far back as 1923 the London busses carried a billion and a quarter passengers, equivalent to 40 per cent of the passengers carried, while in Paris 336,000,000 passengers were carried. In Chicago 96,000,000 people annually use the bus while a similar number use it in Newark, N. J. In New York last year 101,000,000 passengers rode on the busses; in Detroit 20,000,000, and in St. Louis 13,000,000. Busses carry 200,000,000 people yearly in the state of New Jersey."

KEEPS TRAFFIC MOVING

Highway authorities in Wisconsin have found that snow removal on the main highways during winter months is a gigantic task, but have succeeded in keeping traffic moving throughout the winter. Here is one method approved by road men of Rock county, who have built these snow fences to prevent big drifts. This scene is on the Janesville-Edgerton road.

Easy Does It.

A spine is a good thing to have, but sometimes you should be like a jellyfish, according to Riley D. Moore, an osteopathic physician, writing for American Motorist.

"When riding over a rough, rutty road," he advises, "go into low gear, travel very slowly, and ride low; by that is meant, hold your head down and let the body slump. The nearer you can approach the condition of a jellyfish, the better. If you sit stiffly bolt upright, you may bounce up and hit the roof of the car. Many cases of bad sprain or crick in the neck have been from this cause alone."

Used First Chains.

Charles T. Knisely has the distinction of being the first man in Chicago to use tire chains on his car. He bought them in 1903 just after they had been developed by Harry D. Weed and introduced them to the west to overcome the hazard of getting stuck in the mud. They were quite a novelty in the early days of motoring and Knisely was given a guarantee of "money back if they don't work" with his first pair.

Day of Rest.

Old Dobbin has his off days now—Sundays and holidays. No longer is he hitched to the family "rig" on Sundays and commanded to take the folks to church, nor does he have to attend picnics, socials or other holiday celebrations against his will. Instead, when Sunday rolls around now, Dobbin is turned loose in the old green pasture to browse around the entire day. Motor cars have replaced horses to an extent that more than 4,000,000 automobiles are in use on farms today.

Ten Cents a Mile.

Experts at the Iowa State College of Engineering are reported to have compiled reliable estimates showing that the average cost throughout the country of operating an automobile is 10.27 cents per mile. Busses, they calculate, 24.10 cents for the one-man type. Trucks are figured to average a cost of 11.05 cents per ton mile.

POPULAR CARS.

The Paris auto show, just closed, exhibited twelve American cars. Among its features were twelve new chassis models, novel brake construction, an increase in fabric bodies, and a preponderance of small cars.

Foreign Pilots Plan Invasion of U. S. Racing

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—There will be another foreign invasion of the international motor sweepstakes at Indianapolis on May 30 of this year. T. E. (Pop) Myers, secretary-treasurer and general manager of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway company, has just returned from Europe, where he spent a month visiting automobile factories in England, France, Italy, Belgium, and Germany. He says that the racing enthusiasm on the continent has practically reached the peak it occupied before the world war swept away all thoughts of racing. The factories have dropped back into the groove where they consider racing as their most important method of advertising their cars.

Myer's trip was not one of mere pleasure. His purpose was to listen to factory and independent drivers who have a desire to pit their speed and skill against America's finest in the 500 mile race this year. Part of the speedway manager's pleasure was in visiting with several of the great foreign drivers who in years past have dueled with American drivers at the speedway on the outskirts of the Hoosier capital. Among these was Jules Gouz, the first foreigner ever to win the 500. Jules turned the trick in 1913. Another was Rene Thomas, who won the following year. Still another was Albert Guyot, who has finished well up at Indianapolis three times. Jean Chassagne, who has participated at Indianapolis several times, and Pierre de Vizcaya, who captained the Bugatti team in the 1923 500 mile gasoline derby.

The continental drivers like the Indianapolis track because it offers them the same hazards and demands the same driving skill that their road races do. This is especially true of the track's four corners. Track racing has not a great vogue on the continent, road racing being supreme.

"What we should like to see," said Myers, "is to have the three truly international races—the French grand prize, the Italian grand prize, and the Indianapolis race—all participated in to as large an extent as possible by representative American and European pilots. There is a closer feeling along this line than there has ever been before, and as a result we expect to have the foreign factory entries of five or six cars at Indianapolis. In addition to the factory entries we should have two or three free lance drivers, if they are successful in obtaining mounts. We hope to be in position to make definite announcement of the cars and the drivers within the month."

New Museum Adds to Tourist Interest In Yosemite Park

YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK will have one more point of interest for motoring vacationists this summer with the completion of the new museum about April 1. It was originally estimated that the building would not be completed until around May 1.

Exhibits in the museum will ultimately be arranged in consecutive order so that they will tell the story of Yosemite National park from its geological beginning ages ago to the present, according to plans.

Construction of the new Yosemite museum was made possible by the American Association of Museums, which interested the Laura Spelman Rockefeller memorial in the project. This organization obtained an appropriation of $70,500 for the building and equipment of a fireproof museum.

Easy to Park.

An unusual parking device has been invented for automobiles. An extra wheel is attached to the rear of the automobile and may be lowered to the pavement. This makes it possible to wheel the car sideways and back it into the street in places where there would not be room enough for backing out or turning around in the usual way. The fifth wheel also serves as a "spare."

Pedestrian Tags.

Realizing the constant danger that the residents of Paris face on the highways, it has been proposed to use identification tags, such as those hung from the soldier's neck in the world war for pedestrians. This would preclude the necessity of taking the unfortunate to the morgue when he finally falls a victim of reckless driving.

Dangerous Car.

Because a bootlegger's car was fitted with a smoke screen, the United States navy department has sought action to seize it as a "combat car" and destroy it as a dangerous weapon. But the bootlegger is fighting for his car, in the District of Columbia courts.

At one step, the new good Maxwell creates an immeasurably higher conception of the dollar's buying power in its relation to motor car speed and power.

The owner of this new good Maxwell finds in it an ability for sustained speed which wins his respect no matter how powerful the cars which he has driven before.

He becomes used to leading traffic in the city because of a flashing acceleration which is not surpassed by any car built today.

He finds himself enjoying these advantages at an operating and maintenance cost which owners declare is lower than any previous motor car experience has ever taught them to expect.

For the cause of this revolutionary achievement, credit the engineering genius which produced the Chrysler Six, the wonderful plants in which the new good Maxwell is manufactured from wheels to body, from radiator to rear axle.

In this new good Maxwell, Chrysler engineers and Maxwell's fine workmanship have advanced the ability of four cylinders beyond anything the industry had previously produced. We enthusiastically invite you to let us prove Maxwell's superior quality and value.

Uncle Sam Plans Pan-American Good Roads Campaign

Argentine Conference to Cement Good Will of Republics.

GREAT economic advance for Latin America, directly promotive of increasing trade benefits for the nations of both continents, in which Chicago and the middle west should participate, were pointed out yesterday by J. Walter Drake, assistant secretary of commerce, as the probable result of the forthcoming Pan-American roads congress, scheduled to be held in Buenos Aires in May, 1925.

"Something more than two years ago," he said, "the fifth annual international conference of Pan-American states held at Santiago, Chile, passed a resolution calling for an official Pan-American highway congress. The director general of the Pan-American union asked the department of commerce for advice and assistance. Following a conference it was decided that the best plan would be to invite a group of outstanding representatives of the Pan-American countries to visit the United States as the guests of American industry to study at first hand our highways, highway construction, and motor transport. Other industries joined in the plan and with the help of the department of state some forty road engineers and experts selected from nineteen Pan-American nations were invited to this country.

"Last May the delegation arrived in the United States. Under the direction of the officials of the bureau of public roads the party was escorted through nine states as the guests of governors and state highway departments. The itinerary followed was selected with a view to giving them approximately the same conditions of climate and soil as prevailed in their own countries. While they saw the highest type of modern road surfaces, most of their time was spent in states where a large part of the mileage is sand-clay, gravel, and other light type roads.

"Questions of finance were discussed with experts. The visitors were shown our most modern roadbuilding machinery in operation. Particular attention was devoted to studies of the influence which the highway has exerted on living standards, health, suburban development, education, and associated subjects. Government, industrial and public agencies everywhere along the line gave their full coöperation toward making the event a great success. The visitors found their American friends deeply and sincerely interested in their welfare. They gained much valuable first hand knowledge of American conditions and in return left in the communities they visited a much better understanding of Latin America.

"The whole venture was so successful that at the conclusion of the trip the visitors voted to organize a permanent association to be known as the Pan-American confederation for highway education. It was agreed that national boards should be set up in each country. This was at the end of June, 1924. Since that time boards have been organized and are now functioning in Argentina, Cuba, Chile, Honduras, and Peru, with cabinet members and highway officials as personnel. Detailed reports of the observations made here have been printed in Uruguay, Costa Rica, San Domingo, Brazil, Panama, Guatemala, and the other countries of Central and South America. Road congresses have been held in Chile and Brazil. The press of Latin America has given support to the practical benefits of the plan.

"The actual task of preparing for the participation of the United States in the forthcoming conference has been centered in an executive committee composed of Dr. Lee S. Rowe, director of the Pan-American union; J. Walter Drake, T. H. MacDonald, chief, bureau of public roads; Wilbur J. Carr, assistant secretary of state; Roy D. Chapin, vice president of the National Automotive Chamber of Commerce; W. O. Rutherford, president, Rubber Association of America, and Fred I. Kent, well known banker."

The first action of the committee was to recommend that the United States send an official delegation to the Buenos Aires conference, which has received the indorsement of the President.

Steady Production.

Labor in the various automobile plants in Detroit, which include parts and accessories factories, is showing a rapid increase. The announcement given out by the Employers' association for last week shows a gain of 1,391, bringing the total up to 209,275.

One year ago the corresponding week showed a total of 241,134, but manufacturers were then building for storage and the anticipated spring rush of cars, which failed to develop. This year they are building according to orders received, and from reports will be kept normally busy for several months to come.

Costly Skids.

Lewis E. MacBrayne, general manager of the Massachusetts safety council, is authority for the statement that skidding accidents alone cost thirty lives in his state in 1924. At the conservative figure of $5,000 each the total loss represented by these lives would have bought approximately 45,000 sets of tire chains, enough to equip both rear wheels of 22,500 Massachusetts cars.

WANTS UNIFORM TAGS

Motor license tags in the United States are a study in useless variety, in the opinion of Ray M. Hudson, chief of the simplified practice bureau of the United States department of commerce. He is shown here illustrating the types in plates now in use and urging uniform coloring and size for the adoption of all states.

Better Auto Market Pictured in Report to Manufacturers

ACTIVE spring markets were indicated both in the factory shipment reports and the statement of business conditions by dealers which were presented at the directors' meeting of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce in New York.

Two hundred and seventy-seven thousand six hundred cars and trucks were manufactured in February, as estimated from shipping reports compiled to date. This is 15 per cent ahead of January.

Industry regards the situation as favorable since there is less tendency to stock in anticipation of spring demand this year and accordingly output figures reflect actual sales.

Reports from dealers of most sections of the country bear out this fact, stating that new car stocks are light, that used vehicle inventories are cleaning up, and that demand in the truck field continues active. Winter sales have been better than last year in the middle west, though lighter on both coasts.

Gossip of the Auto Trade

OLD timers in the industry who are familiar with the remarkable record of C. W. Nash believe that the new Ajax Motors company, a subsidiary of Nash, will be quick to attain industrial prominence on a par with its famous parent. It is a matter of record that in nine years of manufacturing the Kenosha concern has climbed to the pinnacle where stand the handful of makers who turn out 85 per cent of all cars produced, annually. The balance sheet, with total assets amounting to nearly $46,000,000, shows no bonded indebtedness for Nash, no bank loans, nor any money owing except for nominal current liabilities.

Vast manufacturing resources are assembled behind the new Ajax plant in Racine, and the new car will be produced practically in its entirety within the Racine factory buildings, except for the inclosed bodies made by Seaman.

A steadily increasing demand for the new and complete line of Marmon cars, manufactured under the painstaking and efficient policies of the recent plant reorganization, is reported by factory officials. The Indianapolis plant has been speeded up to meet the new sales peak.

Frederick E. Moskovics, president of the Stutz company, has announced the appointment of F. P. Nehrbas as assistant general manager in charge of production at the Indianapolis factory.

John N. Willys, president of Willys-Overland, is authority for the statement that spring will see a real car shortage. He declares that production in the entire industry is not approaching the demand that the tremendous 1925 buying power forecasts.

Final steps in the reorganization of the Duesenberg company were taken recently when assets and property of the old company were bought by the stockholders' protective and the creditors' committees and the property turned over to the newly organized Duesenberg Motors company for $375,000. Fred S. Duesenberg is president of the new corporation.

School Kids Sit in Judgment on Jay Walking Companions

SAFETY is being brought home to Detroit school children in a new light under a plan inaugurated by the bureau of public safety of the police department. The plan calls for the organization of a student safety patrol and a modern traffic court system in each school.

One day this week 1,300 students attended a session of court in a school auditorium and listened to the "trial" of a 12 year old youngster whose offense was jay walking—he had crossed the street in the middle of a block.

It looked like a discharged case until the prosecutor got through with the "prisoner." He pointed out that jay walking is an offense against the school. The boy claimed he broke the law to save time. The case was turned over to a student jury, who found the prisoner guilty, and the judge sentenced him to the task of washing blackboards for a period of one week.

Other traffic law busters were given a hearing. Some were discharged, while others drew sentences adequate to the crimes committed.

The lowest maintenance cost, we believe, of any car in the world.

A Car You Will Be Proud to Own

These qualities make it the most wanted and largest selling car of its class in the world.

It is the finest Essex ever built. It is the smoothest, most reliable Essex ever built. It is the best looking, most comfortably riding Essex ever built. And the price, because of volume, is the lowest at which Essex ever sold.

Surely you cannot be satisfied with less than Essex offers when its cost is but little more than cars of the lowest price.

None Can Copy Its Chief Values
The Chassis Is Patented

Just as the Coach, invented by Hudson-Essex, changed practically all buying to closed cars, so the patented Super-Six principle and other exclusive advantages, forecast the mechanical design which all must seek to rival.

But the extensive copying of the Coach type and the Coach name, even by costliest cars, cannot be carried to the Essex chassis. That is patented and no other maker can use it. It is responsible for the smooth vibrationless performance and long lasting reliability for which Essex is famous everywhere.

Hudson and Essex are of one quality.

$323 For those who desire, special arrangements have been made whereby an Essex Coach may be purchased for a First Payment of $323. The remaining payments conveniently arranged $323

FARM AND GARDEN

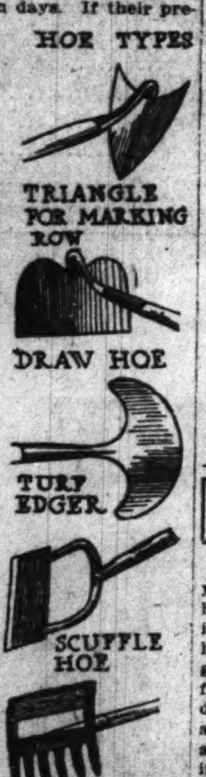
Planting Time for Early Vegetables Is Close at Hand

Soil Should Be Prepared as Soon as Frost Has Gone.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

GOOSEBONE weather prophets say there is an early spring just around the corner. Their guesses may be right, despite the zero weather in the Great Lakes region during the last ten days. If their predictions are correct, planting time for the earliest vegetables of the season is only a few weeks away.

HOE TYPES



Novices are usually too late with their early spring gardens. Unfamiliar with the whims and fancies of the garden seeds, they are likely to think vegetables will not grow until the weather is warm and the planting is delayed until it is almost the time when experienced growers are ready to start harvesting their first crops.

Truckers who have been in the business for years disregard temperature in taking their first steps toward planting the earliest crops in spring. The soil is prepared as soon as the frost is out of it and it has dried out enough to be safely worked.

Test Soil to Make Sure.

Testing the condition of the soil is simple. As soon as the frost is gone, walk across the garden, and if your shoes do not sink in and leave deep footprints the soil is probably dry enough to be spaded or plowed. To make sure that the soil is right mold a ball of it in your hands, strike the ball, and if it crumbles the ground should be plowed. If the ball flattens and sticks together, it is too wet to be worked. Soil worked when it is wet forms clods and will cause trouble all year. Even the heaviest and stickiest clay will crumble if worked at the right time.

Light freezes never bluff veteran truckers. Even when it is cold enough to freeze every night, if the ground is dry, they go on with their work, and plow the garden and plant the hardiest vegetables. Of course, they always take a chance but the odds are in their favor and seed is cheap, so there would be little loss, even if replanting were necessary. The seed will not be injured if there is light surface freezing of the soil. Late freezes, however, may catch unprotected seedlings after they break through the crust, but commercial truckers are always willing to take this risk. The amateur home gardener usually has a small plot and is able to give artificial protection to the earliest crops, if there is a late freeze.

Plant Hardy Vegetables First.

These are the hardy vegetables that should be sown as soon as the ground can be worked: Beets, carrots, onions, lettuce, smooth seeded peas, parsley, parsnips, radishes, salsify, spinach, Swiss chard, turnips. All of these may be started from seed sown in the open garden. Onions may be started either from seed or sets.

Many of the vegetables will grow as soon as the temperature of the ground is up to 50 degree Fahrenheit, gardeners claim. There are a half dozen or more of the vegetables commonly grown in the home garden that should not be started until the ground is at least 60 degrees and the danger of frost is over. These tenderer ones include cabbages, cauliflower, celery, celeriac, endive, kohlrabi and wrinkled peas. These crops would probably fail if planted early with the hardy vegetables included in the first planting. These seeds might rot in the ground, or if they germinated and came up the seedlings would probably be caught by frost.

It is a common understanding among those who have been gardening for at least two or three years that none of the beans should be sown until the temperature of the ground is 65 to 70 degrees in day time. It takes a fairly warm soil to germinate beans. They rot easily in a cold ground. If the ground is warm bush beans may be included in the second planting along with wrinkled peas. Cabbage and cauliflower plants are set out about the same time.

Many gardeners in this section follow the practice of planting sweet corn about two weeks before field corn is put in the ground. In the latitude of Chicago field corn is planted about the middle of May, so that sweet corn can usually be started the first of May.

Tender Vegetables Indoors.

Plants started indoors or under glass are always tender and easily injured by frost. They are soft and are easily nipped by frosts even where they are carefully hardened off in the hotbeds or greenhouses. Cabbages, cauliflower, Brussels sprouts, and kohlrabi will stand cool weather and may be set out earlier than most of the tender crops that are started indoors.

The tender vegetables that are commonly started indoors are eggplant, pepper, and tomatoes, and should never be put in the open garden until after the last frost of the season. The last frost date varies, but in the Chicago latitude it is usually about the middle of May. That is the time when the last seed of the tenderest vegetables may be sown, including the warm weather crops, such as cucumbers, watermelons, cantaloupes, pumpkins, and squashes.

Among the plants started early under glass, lettuce is an exception because of its hardiness. Head lettuce must be given an early start indoors if it is to be matured sufficiently to head before hot weather. Lettuce is hardy enough to be started indoors; then set the plants in the open about the time the early crops are sown.

The lettuce seed should be sown in March. It may be started in flats in the home. The plants should be set out in the open as soon as the garden can be prepared. Such early transplanting is always a risk, but it is worth taking. Sow enough seed in the flats so that in case of failure a second batch of plants will be on hand to replace those that are killed. The lettuce seedlings will stand a lot of frost.

In the selection of varieties of vegetables for the home garden it is not safe to follow the commercial gardener, whose object is entirely different from that of the grower who is producing crops for family use.

Horticulturists point out that cultivated gardens have been made for at least 3,000 years and a great many vegetables commonly found in our American markets can be identified as having been grown by the Romans. Improvements have been made from time to time and since scientific breeding methods have been put to use generally, improvements are much more rapid.

But they have been made for definite purposes and the gardener should remember that varieties which qualify from the standpoint of the market gardener are not always best for the home gardener. The commercial grower wants varieties which will ship without serious injury—varieties that can stand the ordinary handling necessary between the truck grower's field and the city consumer's table. This is apt to mean tougher fiber of the vegetables. Men who produce vegetables for the market pay more attention to size and color than to flavor.

Shoppers who go to the fresh vegetable stores sometimes have curious ideas which are not always justified by facts when they use certain colors as a mark of quality. For instance, a tomato of one variety when half ripe will be orange colored; another variety in exactly the same stage will be pink. Buyers almost always take the pink tomato, though it may be inferior to the orange tinted fruit.

Golden bantam corn, the finest sweet corn grown, is rejected by a big percentage of consumers who think all yellow corn is tough. They associate yellow sweet corn with yellow field corn. They know that to get high quality roasting ears field corn must be pulled when it is white and in the milk stage, and when it turns yellow it is hard. The same rule does not apply to golden bantam corn.

Tomatoes and golden bantam sweet corn are two examples of the unreasonable and unjustified prejudices that market gardeners have to contend with in the growing of varieties that will sell to city customers.

The gardener who is growing crops to be harvested within a few feet of his own table and served within a few minutes or hours after they are gathered can disregard all such false standards. He is concerned little with the size, color, and keeping qualities of vegetables that are to be consumed immediately in his home, so he can select for his garden the tenderest and highest quality of varieties to be found.

The following list of varieties of vegetables has been selected for the home gardener because it includes the tender, high quality varieties that have stood the test in this part of the country. They are handled by all seed stores. The variety names are given following the name of each vegetable:

First planting:

BEETS—Crosby's Egyptian, early; Detroit dark red, for main and late crops.

CARROTS—Early Chantenay, large, and Nantes half-long scarlet.

ONIONS—Bermudas. (Plant green onions which are started in Texas early enough to be available in the northern markets in time for April planting.)

PARSLEY—Hamburgh.

RADISHES—Twenty day and scarlet globe.

PARSNIPS—Hollow crown.

TURNIPS—Purple top milan, and bangholm Danish.

SPINACH—King of Denmark.

LETTUCE—Grand Rapids (leaf) and big Boston and New York (head).

Second planting:

BEANS—Wax, stringless green pod, and round pod kidney (bush).

CABBAGE—Early Jersey, Savoy, and Copenhagen market.

CAULIFLOWER—New snowball.

PEAS—Little marvel, and dwarf defiance (wrinkled).

Third planting, about May 1 in Chicago latitude:

BEANS—Fordhook bush lima, Henderson's bush lima.

Fourth planting, about May 15 in Chicago latitude:

CUCUMBERS—Davis perfect.

TOMATOES—Earliana, and Ponderosa.

CANTALOUPE—Early knight and emerald gem.

VEGETABLE GARDEN PLAN

GARDEN NOTES

Before you start gardening this year, figure out what kind of soil you have and then treat it to correct its ills. All garden soil that is acid needs lime. Clay and sandy soil may be greatly improved by mixing with it a few wheelbarrow loads of manure and decayed leaves. Clay soils are usually acid and need, in addition to limestone, a liberal sprinkling of manure worked into the first three or four inches on top. One of the best mixtures for a sandy soil is a few loads of leaves, manure, and decayed vegetable matter taken from a compost heap.

Tomato growers should know the kinds and amounts of fertilizers to use if they expect to get big fruits and high yields. Earl M. Page of the University of Missouri says to scatter the fertilizer in the rows as they are being marked off and cultivate the soil lightly before setting the plants. For the cannery crop he recommends 200 to 300 pounds to the acre, depending upon the kind of soil. On soil that is of good medium fertility use a 2-16-2, 2-14-2, or 2-12-2. If it is of fair to poor fertility, use a 3-12-4 fertilizer mixture. On sandy uplands and other soils low in potash use a 2-12-6 fertilizer formula.

Patch the lawn early, if you expect to have it smoothly carpeted with a velvet turf this summer. Bald spots are likely to be common after a winter like the one that is now fading into the background. Seed with a mixture like the one used originally so lawn will be uniform.

The best time to plant the standard varieties of strawberries is in the spring, according to horticulturists. In some sections, however, everbearing strawberries seem to get a better start when planted in the fall.

DAIRYMEN'S JOTTINGS

While much attention in the dairy field has been given to marketing—coöperative marketing—during the last few years, such authorities as Canan of Purdue still believe the outstanding problem of the dairy industry is the reduction of the cost of producing dairy products. Canan would begin by improving dairy breeding as an outstanding important step. He says slightly less than 3 per cent of all the dairy cattle in the United States are registered in the books of the various organizations. The four generally recognized leading breeds—Ayrshire, Holstein, Guernsey and Jersey—comprise 80 per cent of all registered dairy cattle in the country, he claims.

Farmer owned creameries in Illinois pay their patrons from 5 to 6 cents a pound more for butterfat than the noncoöperative creameries, according to a survey made by the Illinois Agricultural association recently. The data for the comparison were compiled from reports of all coöperative creameries in the state and from reports received each week by the state dairy department from men who sell their cream to cream stations in forty-four counties, says A. D. Lynch, director of the state farm bureau's dairy marketing department. "The survey proves that coöperative marketing pays in dairying," he adds.

Moore and Graber of the Wisconsin station have just issued a circular on "How to Grow Sweet Clover," which should be of special value at this time of the year to dairymen and general farmers. A post card addressed to the college of agriculture, University of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis., will bring circular No. 178.

G. R. Skinner, a county agent in Boone county, Missouri, says the dairyman who looks ahead and considers his business on a long time basis, and who can coöperate with his neighbor in a bull association, getting the best breeding for the least money, will succeed.

POULTRY TIPS

In making a digest of farm economics, True D. Morse, Missouri College of Agriculture, says that for a number of years farmers in the corn belt have been encouraged to turn to dairy and poultry because prices for these products when compared with other farm products have been holding a favorable position. These branches of the farm industry are now showing the results of greater production. There is certainly nothing in the present situation to encourage a further expansion of the dairy industry.

The record for egg production in the United States is 335 eggs in 365 days, according to Dr. D. C. Warren, Kansas State Agricultural college, adding that official records made in the United States which exceed 300 are exceedingly rare, although thousands of hens are trap nested each year by the various experiment stations of the country. With our present knowledge of management an annual production of 300 eggs is approaching the maximum production capacity of the domestic hen, he believes.

Scientists class eggs as a protective food. Dr. McCollum says: "The fats of eggs are fully comparable with butter fat as a source of fat soluble A, and egg yolk is at least comparatively rich in water soluble B and in water soluble C."

Wisconsin market specialists say in their crop and live stock report that it seems probable that during the coming season of flush production egg prices will be higher than a year ago. Storage stocks of eggs are low. Prices of market poultry, however, may be low for the first half of the year, due to extremely large stocks of poultry in storage.

Tests Show Ford Can Run 60 Miles on Gallon of Gas

The amazing fact that a Ford can run 60 miles on a gallon of gasoline was recently brought to light through tests conducted by America's foremost engineers. Great strides have already been made in this direction by the recent invention of a simple attachment which can be installed in a few minutes without any alterations to motor. A. C. Winterburn made 41.4 miles on 1 gallon of gasoline after this device was attached. B. O. Weeks, famous aviator and inventor, wants agents, and will send sample for trial. FOR TEN YEARS—DEPENDABLE

Exceptional dependability has been a characteristic of Dodge Brothers Motor Car since the day the first of these sturdy cars was marketed.

Not once in a decade has it failed to uphold and enhance its reputation for faithful performance.

The reason for its consistent goodness and continued betterment points directly back to the ideals of the founders.

Instead of fluctuating between an endless series of annual models, they determined to concentrate on the perfection of a single chassis.

Dodge Brothers Motor Car today is the embodiment of that ideal—an ideal that will endure as long as the institution itself.

"BUILT OF THE BEST"

The Remarkable Success of The Tribune's Offer of One Million Insurance Policies Has Caused the Hearst Paper to Protest!

The Tribune Extends Its Sympathy

Last Sunday The Tribune announced an offer of ONE MILLION INSURANCE POLICIES—the most sensational insurance offer ever made—a $7,500.00 Travel Accident Insurance Policy for the small registration fee of $1.00.

Within one week The Tribune received so many applications for this policy it has been impossible to count them all.

The number already received will run into several hundred thousand.

A whole floor of additional space has been rented—more than two hundred clerks and typists have been employed to handle the mail and the force still is inadequate to cope with the avalanche of applications received.

The remarkable success of The Tribune's offer has caused the Hearst paper, the Herald Examiner, to protest. It is obviously envious. For it has in the past offered insurance policies as premiums to secure subscribers. It has charged fifty cents for the policy, but in addition the buyer has had to subscribe to the paper for one year and pay for such subscription at least $10.80.

It is natural, therefore, that the Hearst paper should protest. For why should anyone want one of its policies at a cost of fifty cents and an additional cost of $10.80 a year for the paper, when it is possible to secure a $7,500.00 policy from The Tribune, offering in some instances ten times as much insurance, WITHOUT the necessity of subscribing to the paper?

To get a Tribune policy all you have to do is to clip an Application Coupon, which appears on page 3 of The Tribune every day and Sunday, and send it to The Tribune with the small registration fee of $1.00.

The Hearst paper has felt the tremendous demand for The Tribune's policy. In making its protest it did not even resort to the old alibi of filing a complaint in the name of a taxpayer or a disinterested citizen.

Instead, two of its employes visited Springfield last Thursday and after considerable lobbying, filed and signed a protest with the State Insurance Department.

This protest in no way attacks a single provision for the protection of the holders of Tribune policies. It is directed solely against the technical phraseology of the Policy Form.

The protest sets forth that there is a discrimination in The Tribune Insurance Policy in favor of readers of The Tribune. However, nothing in the protest in any way affects the protection given by the policy, nor in any manner modifies or invalidates the protection.

The real cause of the Hearst paper's feeling in the matter is undoubtedly due to the fact that, although the count is incomplete, it is already certain that The Tribune received twice as many applications for its policy in five days as the Hearst paper received in an entire year. The protest of the Hearst paper also proves that The Tribune's Insurance Policy is wiping the subscription tie-up policy plan of the Hearst paper off the map.

Readers of The Tribune know that The Tribune finishes anything it starts. The protest made by the Hearst paper is merely the wail of a bad loser.

The Tribune wishes to advise the public that all the customary legal steps were taken before The Tribune policy was offered. The policy was first submitted to the Illinois Insurance Department for consideration. The department found no objection to it and promptly authorized its issuance.

The Tribune extends its sympathy to the Hearst paper, but nevertheless announces that it has increased its facilities for the issuance of the $7,500.00 Insurance Policy and is now in position to issue 20,000 policies a day instead of 10,000.

An Application Coupon appears on page 3 of The Tribune every day and Sunday. If you have not sent for a Tribune Policy for every member of your family, send the Application Coupon at once with the small registration fee of $1.00 and a $7,500.00 Travel Accident Insurance Policy will be sent you. And you do not have to subscribe to The Tribune to get it.

The Federal Life Insurance Company of Chicago—with $7,500,000.00 of assets—has issued these policies and its resources are behind them, and The Tribune stands behind its policies and will see its policy holders protected.

SUMMER TO SEE NEW CLUB BUILT IN NORTH WOODS

Wisconsin Lakes, Links Call Chicagoans.

ALFRED E. CASE.

With the calendar announcing the good news that winter is to linger with us only a little uonger comes the additional announcement of a new summer sport club in northern Wisconsin, where 1,000 Chicagoans and their families are expected to spend the vacation months of future years.

Though the club is located in another state — on Lower Clam and McLaren lakes, at the headwaters of the Chippewa river, in Sawyer county, to be detailed—it is to be typically of Illinois.

Alfred E. Case, for two score years a member of the bar in Chicago and Lake county, is the leading spirit and financial parent of the club. All the members will be of Chicago and greater Chicago. And the architect of the clubhouse and the twenty-five cottages which will surround it is Byron H. Jillson of Chicago.

Clubhouse, $200,000.

The clubhouse alone is expected to cost $200,000, and the cottages, each containing living room, two bedrooms, bath, and kitchen, and the other buildings, are expected to bring the total investment up to half a million dollars. In addition to which there are 500 acres of wood and farm land.

Officially the organization is to be known as the Wisconsin North Woods Golf, Gun, and Reel club. Among those already charter members, declares Mr. Case, are: M. M. Chesrown, W. T. Boyd, E. H. Bauch, Capt. A. Wood, Walter W. MacIndoe, Dr. Luther L. Blaine, M. F. Beaudoin, Elmer A. Held, Dr. Frank H. Seubold, H. E. Rice, Dr. Carl Bertram, Dr. J. A. Boyer, R. G. Campbell, Charles J. Sauft, Christ Beermann, and Dr. A. H. Peck.

The club grounds, which are on Wisconsin state road 77, will contain an eighteen hole golf course, a trap shooting range, and a fish hatchery for restocking the lakes. It is proposed to invest $50,000 in small boats.

Plenty of Good Fishing.

The fishing, say the club's backers, is excellent. Muskellunge, black bass, and trout abound, they say.

One of the chief features of the club is to be its motor bus service. Not only are busses to run from Glidden, nearest railroad station, but a weekly bus service is to cover the 400 miles between Chicago and the club.

The club is to be limited strictly to 1,000 members. Work is to start on the new buildings as soon as snow is off the ground, and it is expected that a large part of it will be completed by Sept. 1.

The floors to be occupied have been remodeled under the supervision of Holabird and Roche.

The opening of the new offices marks the ninetieth anniversary of the arrival in Chicago in 1835 of the senior H. O. Stone, founder of the firm. It was in that year that he opened his first store, devoted to general merchandising, on North Water street, when Chicago's population was about 1,200.

Since that time, the firm has moved progressively to Lake street, State and Lake streets, La Salle and Adams streets, Monroe and Clark streets, and lastly to the present offices in the Conway building at 111 West Washington street. ## 'BUSINESS FINE!' CRY PROPHETS OF BUILDING CHEER

Predict Busy Up Curve for 1925.

From two sources this week come prophesies carrying good news for the real estate business.

"The prospect for at least the next three or four months is for a continuance of the present high rate of business activity, with a probable spring expansion in March and April," W. C. Clark, economist for S. W. Straus and company, told the Paint, Oil, and Varnish club at a meeting last week.

"The general curve of real estate activity, which for the past year has been decidedly above the normal as shown by the 1916-1923 records, but which slanted rapidly downward in the general business uncertainty of last fall, is again headed decidedly upward as the year 1925 gets under way," declares the National Association of Real Estate boards in the announcement of their latest market survey.

High January Index.

Taking the average market level during the period 1916-1923 as 100, and basing their report on surveys in forty-one cities, the association finds that the index for the cities studied was 144 for last October, for December was 158, and for January of this year was 171.

"Soon after the close of the war the market recovered," the report recapitulates the situation. "It reached a peak of 135 in 1920, after which it fell to the level of the average in 1921. A sharp recovery began at the beginning of 1922, which culminated in a peak of activity early in 1924.

"The index figure for the forty-one cities in February of that year reached 183. The index figure for the first month of 1925 shows a degree of market activity unprecedented except for the high point reached in the early months of 1924. The index for January, 1924, was 182."

The association announces that from now on the market index is to be announced monthly from figures taken from the official records of the actual number of real estate transfers and conveyances made each month in the forty-one typical cities.

Looks for Record Year.

"Assuming that good business continues throughout the year," Mr. Clark told the paint, oil, and varnish men, "I look to see throughout the country as a whole a volume of construction closely approaching that of the record breaking years, 1923 and 1924. I believe little change will be seen in business costs."

In Chicago, he said, projects already contemplated would seem to assure a greater building year than 1924. He reiterated the caution that Chicago be not overbuilt in certain districts, but declared there was no need for alarm. The small percentage of vacancies, he asserted, were only a sign of health.

WILL SUBDIVIDE 154 MORE ACRES IN FOUR TRACTS

Two firms, Arthur Dunas & Co., and Arthur T. McIntosh & Co., are opening up four new subdivisions; the former, three, of 30, 20, and 30 acres; the latter, one, of 74 acres, making a total of 154 acres to be thrown open to purchasers this spring.

Dunas & Co. have 30 acres in Niles Center, bounded by Oakton street, Central Park, Cleveland, and Major avenues. Building will be restricted to business and apartments. The second subdivision is a 20 acre tract in Park Ridge, bounded by Center and Elm streets, and Seminary and Hamlin avenues. The 30 acre tract in Evanston is bounded by Ridgeway avenue, Harrison and Park streets, and Crawford avenue and Ridge road. The company, when it puts these three new tracts on the market will have opened 64 subdivisions.

McIntosh & Co. are opening up a 74 acre tract opposite the Glen Oak Golf club in Glen Ellyn, to be divided into 70 foot lots, for homesites only. Several parks are planned for, the subdividers say, and hundreds of elm trees have been planted.

WHEAT FALLS 25c FROM TOP PRICE LAST MONDAY

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Liquidation was on again in the grain markets following an early bulge of 4c in wheat on strength in Liverpool and short covering on reports of export sales of around 2,000,000 bu hard winters and springs at the seaboard.

May sold up to $1.85, but as soon as the buying ceased, the market practically collapsed and dropped to $1.77, getting ½c under the low point made during the early February break, and was off 25c from the high on Monday and 15⅝c under the finish on Thursday. A strong rally due to short covering came toward the last and the finish was only ⅛@¼c lower with May $1.80¾ to $1.81; July, $1.62¼ to $1.62½, and September, $1.49⅛ to $1.49¾.

Other grains were more or less influenced by the action of wheat, pronounced liquidation developing in oats. Corn closed unchanged to ⅛c higher, with May $1.28¾@1.28⅞, July $1.31½@1.31⅝, and September $1.30½@1.20⅝. Oats were ¼@1⅝c lower and rye ⅝@2¼c lower.

Wheat in Big Decline.

One of the most sensational declines in wheat under normal conditions was witnessed during the last week, with May going from 27⅝c over the July to 18⅜c over at the last and closing 19c lower than the previous week, while July was off 9¾c and September 4¼c. Liquidation was on and news counted for little during the closing days of the week. Corn was 5⅛@6¼c, oats 1⅞@4¼c, and rye 7@18⅝c lower for the week. Provisions were as strong as grains were weak, lard gaining 32½@40c, ribs $1.25@1.30, and bellies $1.60@1.65 per 100 lbs higher, a sensational advance in hog values being the main influence.

Early news was favorable to holders. In addition to the export business an official Indian report made condition in that country 70 per cent of normal, suggesting a short crop, and there were further claims of dry weather in the American southwest, with no rain overnight. However, after shorts had covered it took but little selling to start values downward, and under $1.80 for May heavy stop loss orders were uncovered. The market toward the last fluctuated in the violent manner that usually occurs when a big advance or decline is culminating.

Corn Gets Good Support.

Corn showed the same stubborn resistance to pressure as recently, and while breaking down to $1.27 for May, a new low on the present downturn rallied quickly when pressure let up. Bulk of the trade was of a local character with professionals the best buyers. Strength in hogs continues to attract attention. Cash demand remains slow with the spot basis easier, No. 6 grades selling as low as 37c under May.

May oats touched 49¼c on the extreme break, or within 1½c of the lowest price of the season. Liquidation was on with numerous stop loss orders uncovered on the way down. Cash demand continues slow.

A good export business was put through in rye with sales of 250,000 bu or more. This was reflected in aggressive buying of futures, but the market declined in sympathy with wheat.

Weakness in grains more than offset a firm hog market and with an increase in pressure provisions eased with lard 10@17½c lower at the last while ribs were 5c lower, and bellies unchanged. Deliveries on March contracts were 50,000 lbs lard. Prices follow:

MORE CORN MOVING

Corn receipts increased last week, but were materially under last year's. Total primaries of all grains were 16,510,000 bu for the week, an increase of 3,700,000 bu over the previous week, and a decrease of 4,490,000 bu from last year, being 17 per cent below the five year average. Details follow:

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

Break in wheat futures brought in large buying orders for both cash and futures from abroad, with sales in all positions finally estimated at 2,000,000 bu, while some seaboard interests claimed a larger business. The bulk of the business was in American hard winters and springs with France taking around 800,000 bu hard winter. There were indications of more business toward the last. The United Kingdom, Germany, and Scandinavia were identified as buyers. Rye sales were 250,000 bu or more.

Chicago handlers sold 33,000 bu wheat, 25,000 bu corn, 45,000 bu oats, and 6,000 bu barley to the domestic trade with 25,000 bu hard winter wheat to exporters, at 11c over May f. o. b. Baltimore, and there was 100,000 bu corn sold to go to store.

The unsettled condition of the futures market prevents any material business in the cash wheat markets, and the basis on spot here was unchanged at 7@8c over May for No. 2 red and 1c over to 2c under May for No. 2 hard. Receipts, 26 cars. St. Louis reported good domestic sales made overnight, but nothing done in the sample market. Kansas City was 1@3c higher early, and unchanged at the last while Omaha was unchanged to 3c lower.

While choice corn on spot here sells readily, buyers are slow in taking hold of the poor kinds, and the basis was off 1c with No. 6 grades at 26@37c under May, while No. 5 grades were 16@35c and No. 4 grades 13@20c under the future. Receipts, 287 cars. Outside markets were 1c higher to 4c lower.

Demand for cash oats was less active and the basis easier at 1c over May for No. 2 white and 1@2¼c under for No. 3 white. Receipts, 74 cars.

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

Sentiment in the wheat trade at the close yesterday was mixed. It was said that the market is acting as it frequently does at the end of a big bulge or a break. Wheat has a wonderful comeback and meets selling on all bulges and the disposition on the part of most traders is to sell on bulges, and look for a rapidly fluctuating market. There has been an enormous liquidation and with wheat at a new low level for this turn, those who are bullish are disposed to take on fair lines while every bulge encourages the bear interest to increase its selling.

Traders are looking for a bullish government report on farm reserves on Monday and with American wheat selling cheaper than Argentine as the result of the big break here, 25c since Monday, the market is in better condition than it has been for a long time as the bulls see it.

"Export buying of wheat on the break was not as large as it should be," said S. C. Harris, "and I remain bearish."

While one set of traders are bullish on corn on a short crop theory there are others who are selling futures because of the wide discount of the low grades under the May. The fact that there is a good profit in feeding corn to hogs for the first time in months tends to induce buying by those who consider this significant.

The government report on farm reserves of all grains, also mill and elevator stocks of wheat, the percentage of merchantable corn of the 1924 crop, also the percentage to be shipped out from the countries where grown is to be given to the trade on Monday, at 2 p. m., Chicago time. Estimates on wheat range from 112,000,000 bushels to 120,000,000 bushels on the farms March 1, as compared with 137,717,000 bushels last year. Mill and elevator stocks are estimated at 76,000,000 bushels, compared with 98,000,000 bushels last year. Corn reserves are estimated at 778,000,000 to 880,000,000 bushels by the different statisticians, and compare with 1,154,000,000 bushels, or 37.8 per cent of last year's crop. The percentage shipped from the counties where grown last year was 19.7 and the percentage of merchantable 80.8 per cent. Oat reserves are estimated at 515,000,000 to 550,000,000 bushels against 447,000,000 bushels last year.

The condition of the Indian wheat crop is 70 per cent or normal as officially reported, with weather there too dry. Cables said that offers were 9d to 1s 6d higher.

High prices for grains are justified, according to a report credited to the department of agriculture. Commenting on the wheat situation it says: "Competitive bidding between countries whose wheat crop was short last year and who are forced to import wheat to adequately supply themselves justifies the present high price of wheat. Whether the price will go still higher than its present level depends largely upon the quality and quantity of the coming crop. If reports indicate a larger production of wheat next season the present prices with possibly a slight rise just before harvest may be expected, but if a short crop is indicated, bidding for wheat now on hand would force the price to an appreciably higher level."

Indications are for a moderate decrease in visible supply of wheat on Monday, also for a reduction in stocks at Chicago, and Kansas City, with world's shipments of around 17,000,000 bushels, compared with 18,122,000 bushels last year. A good increase on ocean passage is also expected.

Message from the experimental station at Curtis, Neb., said: "Wheat on corn ground is all right. On disked stubble some killed and in fall plowed there is 50 per cent killing in many fields."

DRY GOODS AND GARMENT NEWS

PARIS.—Despite American supremacy in the motion picture industry it remained for the Galeries Lafayette, one of the largest of the Paris department stores, to use the cinema in a novel method of stimulating trade. One of its largest show windows has been darkened by building an arcade over the sidewalk and on a screen in the back of the window latest styles of wearing apparel for both men and women are shown.

NEW YORK.—The Gotham Silk Hosiery company, Inc., has just completed the purchase of the Oscar Nebel company, Inc., hosiery mill at Philadelphia, for about $1,000,000.

BRADFORD, England.—Efforts to get all Bradford worsted spinners to curtail production in an effort to strengthen market demand have so far been unsuccessful.

BERLIN.—On top of the general commercial uneasiness caused by the death of President Ebert with its resulting uncertainty as to who would be his successor and what would be the policy of the new government toward business, publication today by the ministry of finance of the January foreign trade statistics caused widespread apprehension that the newly established currency would not be able to much longer withstand the steady pressure of adverse trade balances.

BANKERS READY WITH WILSON CO. REORGANIZATION

BY O. A. MATHER.

Announcement that a reorganization plan for Wilson & Co., the big packing concern now in receivership, probably will be made public this week led yesterday to wild rumors and wilder gyrations in the company's securities.

On a rumor that the reorganization plan would bring a termination of the receivership, the Wilson shares rose sharply. But they dropped precipitately when Frank C. Wetmore, chairman of the bankers' reorganization committee, stated the receivership could not be lifted for several months, even if the plan meets no opposition.

Neither the forthcoming reorganization plan nor any other prospective development in the affairs of Wilson & Co. affords any basis for the recent upturn in the Wilson stocks.

Assets Rated at $100,000,000.

The bankers' plan contemplates a reorganization on the basis of around $100,000,000 of assets, which is a scale-down of about $20,000,000 from the last report, issued a year ago. The new capitalization will be apportioned approximately as follows:

1. Holders of the present $23,000,000 first mortgage 6 per cent bonds will get an equal amount of bonds of the same character.
2. Holders of the present $15,000,000 convertible 6 per cent debentures will get new preferred stock and a bonus of new common stock, probably one share.
3. Holders of the present $9,000,000 convertible 7½ per cent debentures will get new preferred stock and the common stock bonus.
4. The banking creditors holding $31,000,000 of claims will get new preferred stock and the common stock bonus.
5. Holders of the old $10,000,000 preferred stock will be offered approximately one and a half shares of new common stock for each old preferred share.
6. Holders of the 202,000 old common shares will be offered approximately one-half share of new common stock for each old common share.

Probable New Securities.

This proposal would result in the new Wilson & Co. capitalization being about as follows: First mortgage bonds, $23,000,000; other liabilities, $9,000,000; preferred stock, $55,000,000; common stock, 800,000 shares. Obligations ranking ahead of the new common stock would total $87,000,000. On the basis of $100,000,000 assets, this would leave $13,000,000 equity for the common stock, or about $16 a share.

On the proposed basis of exchanging new common stock for the old preferred and common shares, the old preferred would be worth about $24 a share and the old common stock about $8 a share.

Whether the plan will be accepted by the Wilson & Co. stockholders remains in doubt. Mr. Wetmore stated yesterday he had received no word from the preferred stockholders indicating approval.

Refusal to accept the plan would result in a long receivership or a foreclosure by the banking creditors and debenture holders. Interest payments on the debentures were defaulted several months ago.

FINANCIAL NOTES

The Northern Pacific has better prospects for 1925 in both gross and net earnings, according to President Charles Donnelly, who said conditions everywhere in the northwest were favorable. "Soil conditions in the region are first class," he added, "banks are in healthy shape and agricultural interests in North Dakota, eastern Montana and Minnesota are in the best frame of mind that they have been for five years."

The rise in Western Union shares to 135¼ yesterday, the highest price since 1881, when it sold at 137⅛, revived expectation that the directors either at the March or June meeting would consider an increased dividend rate, provided the present satisfactory business outlook continues. The company's cable and land line business thus far this year has shown improvement.

The National Leather company will redeem its $7,000,000 8 per cent notes at 101 on May 15, without necessity for a new issue of securities. About $1,500,000 to $2,000,000 will be drawn from the current assets and bank borrowings will provide the balance. The company is understood to have substantial lines of credit untouched.

Stockholders of the Alabama and Vicksburg railroad were granted authority to practically double the capital stock in an order issued by the Mississippi railroad commission. Under this authority the railroad will add approximately $2,000,000 to its capital.

An offer to purchase 60 per cent of the outstanding capital stock of the Columbia Phonograph Company, Inc., on or before March 25, involving 51,000 shares at 350 a share, has been received by the directors from the Constructive Finance Company, Ltd., of London, which acquired the English branch of the Columbia Graphophone Manufacturing company in November, 1922. All stockholders will be given an opportunity to participate pro rata in the sale and a committee has been appointed to receive the stock.

More than $500,000 in profit sharing dividends for the year ended Feb. 15, 1925, will be distributed to employes of the Procter & Gamble Co. today at the semi-annual dividend day celebration at the various plants and offices in the United States and Canada.

Fewer commercial failures this week are reported by R. G. Dun & Co., the total of 390 comparing with 401 a year ago. An increase of nine in the south was offset by a decrease of six in the east, twelve in the west and two on the Pacific coast.

RAILROAD NOTES

The interstate commerce commission yesterday found not justified proposed rates on sand and gravel from points in Illinois and Wisconsin on the Chicago and Northwestern to Chicago. The Chicago and Northwestern proposed certain increases and reductions. The Consolidated company, United Materials company, Northern Gravel company, Fisk Material and Coal company, and Chicago Fire Brick company of Chicago, protested against the proposed changes.

The American Railway Engineering association will hold its twenty-sixth annual meeting at the Congress hotel, March 10, 11, and 12. The annual dinner will be given in the Gold room of the Congress hotel on the evening of March 11, at 7 p. m. Addresses will be made by James C. Davis, director general of railroads, and Frank H. Alfred, president Pere Marquette railroad.

Rates on poultry, eggs, and dairy products from western trunk line territory to points east of the Indiana-Illinois state line were attacked by western shippers, including the American Farm Bureau federation and the National Poultry and Egg association, in a complaint filed with the interstate commerce commission.

On Feb. 15 class one railroads of the United States had 11,816 locomotives, or 18.4 per cent of the total number on lines, in need of repairs, an increase of 502 over the number reported at the beginning of the month, according to the American Railway association.

I Learned from Big Investors how to Become Independent in only a Few Years on a Small Salary.

"I went to an old banker for financial advice," a successful investor wrote recently. "He frankly told me exactly how he was investing his money, exactly how he had built up his fortune. His secret was a revelation to me! He showed me how to double my money in a little over ten years, and how to build a comfortable fortune by following his tested plans. That talk took place five years ago. Every year I have invested $1,000 according to his plan in the safest securities I could buy—First Mortgage Real Estate Bonds. By laying aside $1,000 each year for the next twenty-five I expect to have at the age of 57 the splendid fortune of $83,801.70! Of this amount only $30,000 will be money which I have saved and invested, the remainder being the interest earned and reinvested (at 6%)."

Any man or woman can accumulate a fortune in exactly the same way. It is a significant fact that many of the larger investors who formerly bought tax exempt securities are concentrating their funds in First Mortgage Real Estate Bonds. Through following tested plans it is possible for you to attain wealth without risk. These unusual plans are fully described in a book which has started thousands on the road to substantial wealth. This book will be sent you absolutely without charge or obligation of any kind. Merely fill out the request blank below.

The pennies that slip through your fingers

They could make you RICH

THE pennies that are frittered away thoughtlessly from day to day represent a real fortune. Do you know that less than 17 cents a day invested in a U. S. National Certificate would soon amount to a thousand dollars? You not only get back the money you save, but with a handsome profit besides. For example, for a $1,000 Certificate you actually pay only $660 on terms of $5 a month (less than 17 cents a day). Your profit is $340, representing a net return of 9½% on your money.

As safe as a savings bank

U. S. National Certificates, offered by the U. S. National Building and Loan Association, are secured by mortgages on Philadelphia real estate. The Association is under strict State Banking Supervision, giving you the highest protection. Yet, you realise a far greater return on your money than any savings banks could pay because U. S. NATIONAL is a mutual savings association and all profits go to its shareholders. You are at liberty to withdraw your savings at any time with interest earned.

Over seven million investors have taken advantage of the building and loan savings plan, which has been in successful operation for over ninety years.

Fortune-building book FREE

Send today for the remarkable book that explains how the pennies you thoughtlessly spend can make you financially independent. See how you can start at once to accumulate a comfortable "nest-egg," of $5,000 to $50,000, or any amount you choose, on monthly savings you will scarcely notice. The full facts about the savings plan of the U. S. National Building and Loan Association will prove a revelation to you. Mail the coupon today for the free book

Movement of hogs on the week-end session proved extremely slow. Five thousand still were in the pens at the close, consisting largely of weighty hogs. An early clearance was effected on the limited number of choice light and medium weights, suitable for eastern trade, which sold under fair competition at steady to 10c higher prices, lightest weights showing the most strength.

Weighty Butcher Hogs Lower.

Choice weighty butchers sold below the top price for the first time of the season, bringing $14.15, while best 220 pounders topped at $14.25. Many instances of 10@15c decline were cited on weighty hogs compared with the high time Friday. General average cost of hogs reached $14.00, against $12.10 previous Saturday and $11.45 two weeks ago.

Hog receipts last week totaled 130,600, the smallest since week ending Oct. 11, 1924, being 66,700 smaller than previous week, 63,100 smaller than a year ago, 86,200 smaller than two years ago, and 44,200 below the five year average. Estimated average weight of hogs at 220 lbs was lightest since 1918, being 1 lb under previous week, 12 lbs lighter than a year ago, and 17 lbs under the five year average. General average cost of hogs last week at $13.00 was highest since November, 1920, showing a $1.25 advance compared with previous week, $5.65 compared with a year ago, and $2.65 compared with the five year average.

Continued light supplies of cattle, together with the sharp rise in swine values, strengthened the market for beef steers following a topheavy opening last week. Advances of 50c for the week were general, in-between grades in spots reflecting sharper upturns, with price range showing a tendency to narrow further. The week's average cost at $10.10 stands highest of the year and within 30c of the highest in 1924, being 40c above the previous week's average and $1.05 higher than three weeks ago when the top for the week at $11.50 was the lowest weekly top in over four months. Best yearlings reached $12.35 last week. Butcher stock closed unevenly 15@40c higher. Calves advanced 50c. Stockers and feeders show gains of 15@25c since a week ago.

Lamb Prices Wide.

"Spread" in lamb prices was widest of the season during last week's trade, burdensome supplies of 95@110 lb Colorado and Nebraska offerings forcing extremely weighty lambs below the $16.00 line, while top light and handy kinds fluctuated from $18.00 to $18.25. The latter kinds closed 15@25c above a week previous, while weighty stock held barely steady. Aged sheep were 50@75c higher for the week, and yearlings strong. Average cost of lambs at $17.05 stood 5c above previous week and $1.55 above a year ago. Sheep average advanced 50c at $9.00, but stood 25c under a year ago.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 23,000 cattle, 58,000 hogs, and 20,000 sheep, against 22,142 cattle, 48,490 hogs, and 23,574 sheep a week ago and 23,209 cattle, 74,204 hogs, and 21,461 sheep the corresponding day a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 55,000 cattle, 175,000 hogs, and 70,000 sheep, against 54,341 cattle, 224,152 hogs, and 73,979 sheep a year ago.

Predicts Big Rail Deal by Kansas City Southern

New Orleans, La., March 7.—Arrival in New Orleans of L. F. Loree, chairman of the board of the Kansas City Southern railway, and other officials of that line was followed today by publication in the New Orleans Item of a report that officials of the line are considering purchase of the Louisiana Railway and Navigation company.

The newspaper quoted Mr. Loree to the effect that the proposal was being investigated. Its acquisition would give the Kansas City Southern direct communication from Kansas City to New Orleans.

The Item also says the merger plans may be upon a much larger scale and include the St. Louis Southwestern railway lines, the Missouri, Kansas and Texas, and the St. Louis-San Francisco Railway company.

Diversification.

One of the essentials to wise investment is too often overlooked by the amateur investor. This is diversification of his holdings. The old adage about it not being wise to put all your eggs in one basket is still a good one. On the question of investing all one's funds in one security, Mark Twain is quoted as saying: "Put all your eggs in one basket and then watch the basket." He did. He lost.

No matter how safe a security may appear when it is purchased, there is always the possibility that something unforeseen may arise to lessen its safety or cause it to become a total loss. Absolute safety is not present in any security, although in those of the highest grade it may be very nearly approached so that the chances for loss are almost negligible. The unexpected or unforeseen may happen, however, and if all of one's funds are tied up in one security he may lose all.

If, on the other hand, one has his funds distributed over a number of securities and anything goes wrong with one, he still has the others to fall back on and the major part of his funds is still intact.

The investor who has found one security that he considers safe is too apt to keep putting his money into that particular one rather than looking further for others of equal grade. This is an unwise policy to pursue.

It is far better to spread one's funds over a number of different securities and, providing care is used in selecting high grade securities, the chances of loss decrease in proportion as the number of different securities increases.

Three important factors are to be considered in seeking diversification of holdings: Difference in type, locality, and maturity.

The types of securities include those of governments, municipalities, railroads, public utilities, industrials, land banks, real estate, etc.

In the matter of locality, the properties on which the securities depend should not all be located in one locality but should have wide geographical distribution.

The maturity date is of importance in that, if all the securities mature at about the same time, it might so happen that the principal would all be returned to the investor at a time when conditions were not good for reinvestment.

If something disastrous were to happen in one industry, it might not affect other industries. Business depression may not adversely affect public utilities, or poor business for the railroads may not weaken real estate bonds.

Considering the geographical distribution of properties, something might seriously affect the business in one section of the country while it had no effect on that of other sections. If one's holdings are well distributed as to locality, therefore, only those in the section where conditions were bad would be affected, while those in the other sections would not suffer.

It is well to select types of securities which will not be adversely affected by the same causes, to select those secured and depending on properties located in various widely separated parts of the country and to choose those of different maturities, so that they will be coming due in different years instead of all at one time.

Diversification is an important element in the safety of one's holdings. It is too important to be overlooked.

An Experienced Mercantile or Industrial Executive

Is now and has been for past two years with a large mercantile house. In charge of department composed of units of manufacturing, assembling, stockkeeping, testing and inspection of merchandise, and handling of orders, employing 100 people with payroll of $2,300.00 per week.

Thirty-two years old, single, Protestant, American of Scotch-Irish and German descent. Graduate of a well known university. Background of legal and business experience.

This man desires a position whose problems involve a broader knowledge and experience than his present position requires; where his progressive ideas will be given play and where his general executive ability will receive prompt notice and just remuneration.

He would like to have charge of a small mercantile or industrial plant employing 100 to 500 people. His knowledge of general operating system and his ability to cut cost and produce inside plus his capacity to cope with legal, financial and business situations outside combine qualifications very valuable to a small enterprise.

The man running this ad is not broke, discouraged nor about to be let out. His present position is creditably held and advancement both in responsibility and salary is certain. He feels that a connection as outlined above is his natural field. He is ready to relinquish the present certain but slow paying connection if offered a situation of less certainty but where the rewards are high. He has nothing to invest but himself. He must have a proposition clean enough and big enough that he may unreservedly cast himself wholeheartedly into it.

SOME DANGERS OF BETTING NOW ON OIL SHORTAGES

BY SCRUTATOR.

An oil company which has 55,000,000 barrels of crude in storage was borrowing money to buy more just a few days ago.

There is pretty good evidence that there is something back of the talk of prospective oil scarcity, but it is to be hoped that investors, thus tempted to go into oil, will be sure that the companies they buy into have the oil or some place to get it.

Any real oil scarcity at this period following the wholesale turning of many industries and shipping to oil fuel, and the sensational consumption of gasoline revealed for a year of such restrained prosperity as 1924, is bound to result in feverish activity of promoters and engineers, who will seek to develop the several substitutes for petroleum that are in sight.

Oil scarcity, it always should be remembered, is not merely a question of quantity. Whenever the petroleum produced, no matter how much in the aggregate, has to be pumped from vast numbers of wells, the price is bound to approach that of substitutes, which are now impractical because of the manufacturing costs. When oil wells are gushing thousands of barrels a day, and the gushers are producing enough to determine the price, talk of making fuel by the destructive distillation of any substance is rather far fetched. But when the production of oil is a matter of costly harvesting from wells yielding a little bit a day the margin between mining and manufacturing is narrowed.

It is interesting in this connection to note the average production per well in some of the older fields. There is no reason to doubt that ultimately the same picture will be presented in California, Arkansas, Texas and Oklahoma.

The average production of Pennsylvania oil wells at the close of 1924 was about .30 of a barrel per day; central and eastern Ohio, .60; northwestern Ohio, .30; West Virginia, .80; Illinois, 1.30; Kentucky, 1.70.

In these old fields great improvements have been made in pumping and much labor has been dispensed with. But for all that the picture presented by such a field as that of Illinois is of a great deal of machinery, piping and labor for mighty little oil.

Teapot Dome is credited in the last estimates of the American Petroleum Institute with a daily average yield of only 2,150 barrels. This is among the smallest averages recorded for any going pool tapped in recent years.

Even almost deserted Spindletop at Beaumont, greasy El Dorado which now sounds almost as ancient as Comstock, Cripple Creek, or Leadville in mining lore, is producing half that much.

Teapot failed to gush votes as expected, and it seems to be falling down on oil, too.

But whenever you bet on high oil prices you bet against thousands of eager, hardy men who are looking for more all the time. At any minute there may come a roar and a rush that will shoot oil up and oil stocks down.

CHICAGO CURB MARKET

While net price changes in the local unlisted securities market last week were somewhat irregular, a number of issues showed substantial improvement.

Bucyrus common soared over 16 points to high sales at 144, and closed at 142 bid, 147 asked. American Seating common rose sharply, sales ranging between 100 and 118, up approximately 30 points. The regular preferred was wanted at 105 and the stamped preferred at 70. After selling at 74½ Wahl preferred was quiet at 73½ bid, 75½ asked. La Salle Extension was traded in between 19 and 20. A firmer tendency was noted in Pyle National, 48 being bid with limited offerings around 50. Chicago Railway Equipment common was steady at 47 to 50, while the preferred was quoted 26½ to 27½c. Northwestern Yeast was again offered at 170 with little interest shown on the buying side.

Creamery Package nonvoting stock sold off a point to transactions around 30. The voting shares were a point lower at 31 to 32½. Interstate Iron and Steel preferred gained another 2 points to 92 bid, 94 asked. By-Products Coke was in better demand and a full point higher at 52 bid, with limited offerings at 54. Elgin National Watch lost a point in being traded at 63¼@64½. McCord Manufacturing issues were slightly easier, the common being shaded a fraction at 4⅝ to 5¼, while the preferred was a full point lower at 40 bid, 43 asked. Little interest was shown in Butler Brothers with transactions between 33½ and 34. Palmolive preferred was a point higher, 104 being bid.

An improved undertone was noted in the early trading in the public utility list, but weakness later developed, resulting in the majority of issues registering declines for the week. National Power and Light was an exception to the trend, selling up some 20 points to high sales at 218 and closing with a net gain of some 14 points at 212. Tennessee Electric Power common gained over a point to high and last sales at 54. American Light and Traction closed at 147⅝. The preferred was fractionally lower at 94½ to 95. Although Commonwealth Power sold up in the early trading to 115, it later reacted to 110 and closed unchanged at 112½. The preferred was steady between 81 and 81½.

Adirondack Power and Light Corporation sold up 2 points, but later relinquished this gain and closed at 36 to 37. American Gas and Electric sold off from 75 to 72. American Power and Light improved 3 points to high sales at 58. It later, however, developed weakness and sold at 55½, and the close of 56 to 56½ reflected fractional improvement. Northern States Power was active with high and last sales between 108½ and 109. The trend of American Super Power "B" was toward lower levels throughout with transactions between 29 and 29½. Electric Bond and Share rallied to 63¼, but later declining to 61, a net loss of 1⅝ points. The preferred was steady between 102½ and 103½. On small sales Western Power sold up a fraction of a point to 34. The preferred was steady around 87.

New York, March 7.—Stock prices drifted lower today, with trading in large volume for a half holiday session. There was nothing in the day's news to account for the decline so it was generally attributed to the customary week-end profit taking. Some of the selling, however, is also believed to have been for the account of traders who were converting paper profits into cash in order to meet income tax payments.

One of the features of the session was the violent fluctuations in Wilson & Co. preferred, which closed last night at [illegible], soared to 60 in today's early trading and then broke to 43½, when a large volume of stock was pressed for sale. The spirited advance followed the widespread circulation of a report that the lifting of the receivership was imminent, and the subsequent break took place after official denial was made.

Pivotal Issues Lose Ground.

All the so-called pivotal industrials lost ground. U. S. Steel common, in which a new forward move appeared to be under way yesterday when it crossed 125, fell back nearly a point from last night's close at 124. Baldwin showed a net loss of 1⅝ at 140⅝, and American Can fell back nearly 2 points to 181⅝.

Pool operations again were apparent, however, in some of the oil and motor issues. Maxwell Motors "A" and "B" established new peak prices for the year at 88½ and 59, respectively, but later forfeited part of their gains. California Petroleum common and preferred also reached new high ground at 32⅞ and 113, respectively, but the gains were canceled and each closed fractionally lower. Buying of these petroleum issues was based on reports of a merger of the California Petroleum and General Petroleum companies.

Other Shares Are Irregular.

Some of the other outstanding strong spots were American Chicle common and certificates, Detroit Edison, S. S. Kresge, Laclede Gas, Loose-Wiles Biscuit, Pacific Coast common and second preferred, Park & Tilford, and Symington. General Baking broke 13½ points to 121 on one sale.

Weakness of the local tractions reflected the opposition of the state transit commission and other organizations to the Interborough Rapid Transit company's application for an increased fare, and the gloomy picture of the road's finances painted by its general counsel. Manhattan Elevated guaranteed broke 10 points to 80, Interborough Rapid Transit dropped 2⅝ to 24⅝, and Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit and Manhattan Modified Guarantee each lost about 1½ points. Renewed weakness again developed in the Commercial Solvents issues.

New York Reserves Drop.

In line with Thursday's reserve bank statement, with its decrease for the week of $45,000,000 in reserves held for member banks, todays' report of the New York associated banks showed sweeping reduction of reserves. Yet it was strongly illustrative of the suddenness with which reserve credits at the federal bank are created or canceled that, although the actual decrease in cash reserves as compared with a week ago was $34,000,000, leaving a deficit (the largest of the year to date) of $15,000,000, the statement by daily averages showed a moderate surplus and a reduction of only $2,500,000 in reserve bank credits.

Presumably, however, the statement means tightening of call money rates on Monday and then fresh recourse to the reserve bank's rediscounting facilities.

WALL STREET NOTES

Chicago stocks were dull and irregular yesterday in the week-end session. Kraft Cheese afforded the only feature with a further rise of 2⅛ on a turnover of 4,400 shares. Middle West Utilities gained 1⅛. Armour "A" and Omnibus were about steady and National Leather was weak.

The International Lamp company was placed in receivership on petition of creditors with claims of $1,284. The petition placed assets at $100,000 and liabilities at $200,000. Following this action the directors called a special stockholders' meeting for March 16 to vote on changing the common stock from $25 par to nonpar and exchanging one share of new stock for two old shares. This would give the company 40,000 shares of new stock to be used in liquidation of debts.

What has become of the Man who wore the Pink Silk Lined Stove Pipe Hat?

What has become of the old fashioned man who wore the pink silk lined stove pipe hat?

He has gone the way of the long flowing whiskers and the boots outside the trousers.

He is remembered only in the family album.

What has become of the Chicago World's Fair Lady on the tandem bicycle, with the leg-of-mutton sleeves?

She has gone the way of the Danderine Sisters.

Do you remember them with their long flowing hair—never bobbed?

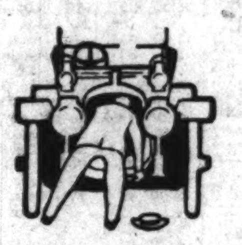
What has become of the old fashioned car with the two wheel brakes?

It is almost obsolete.

What has become of the old fashioned high pressure tire?

That is almost historical.

What has become of the old automobile with a hand crank?



Gone to the place where rests the whirling shirt front.

What has become of the old fashioned bulky, high hatted expensive automobile—as high as Mount Everest?

Gone.

What has become of the high priced two cylinder of the year 1905?

Gone.

What has become of the high priced four cylinder of 1910?

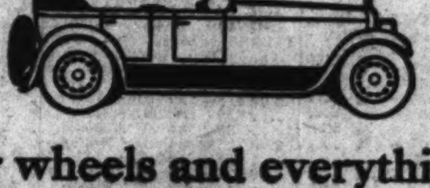
Gone.

What is happening to the high priced six of those dim and distant years—1923 and 1924?

Going.

The Line Eight—smooth—quiet—full of pep—thrilling to handle—quick get-away in the traffic and a joy to drive—that's the automobile of today.

Here's The Great Jordan Line Eight.



It has four wheels and everything.

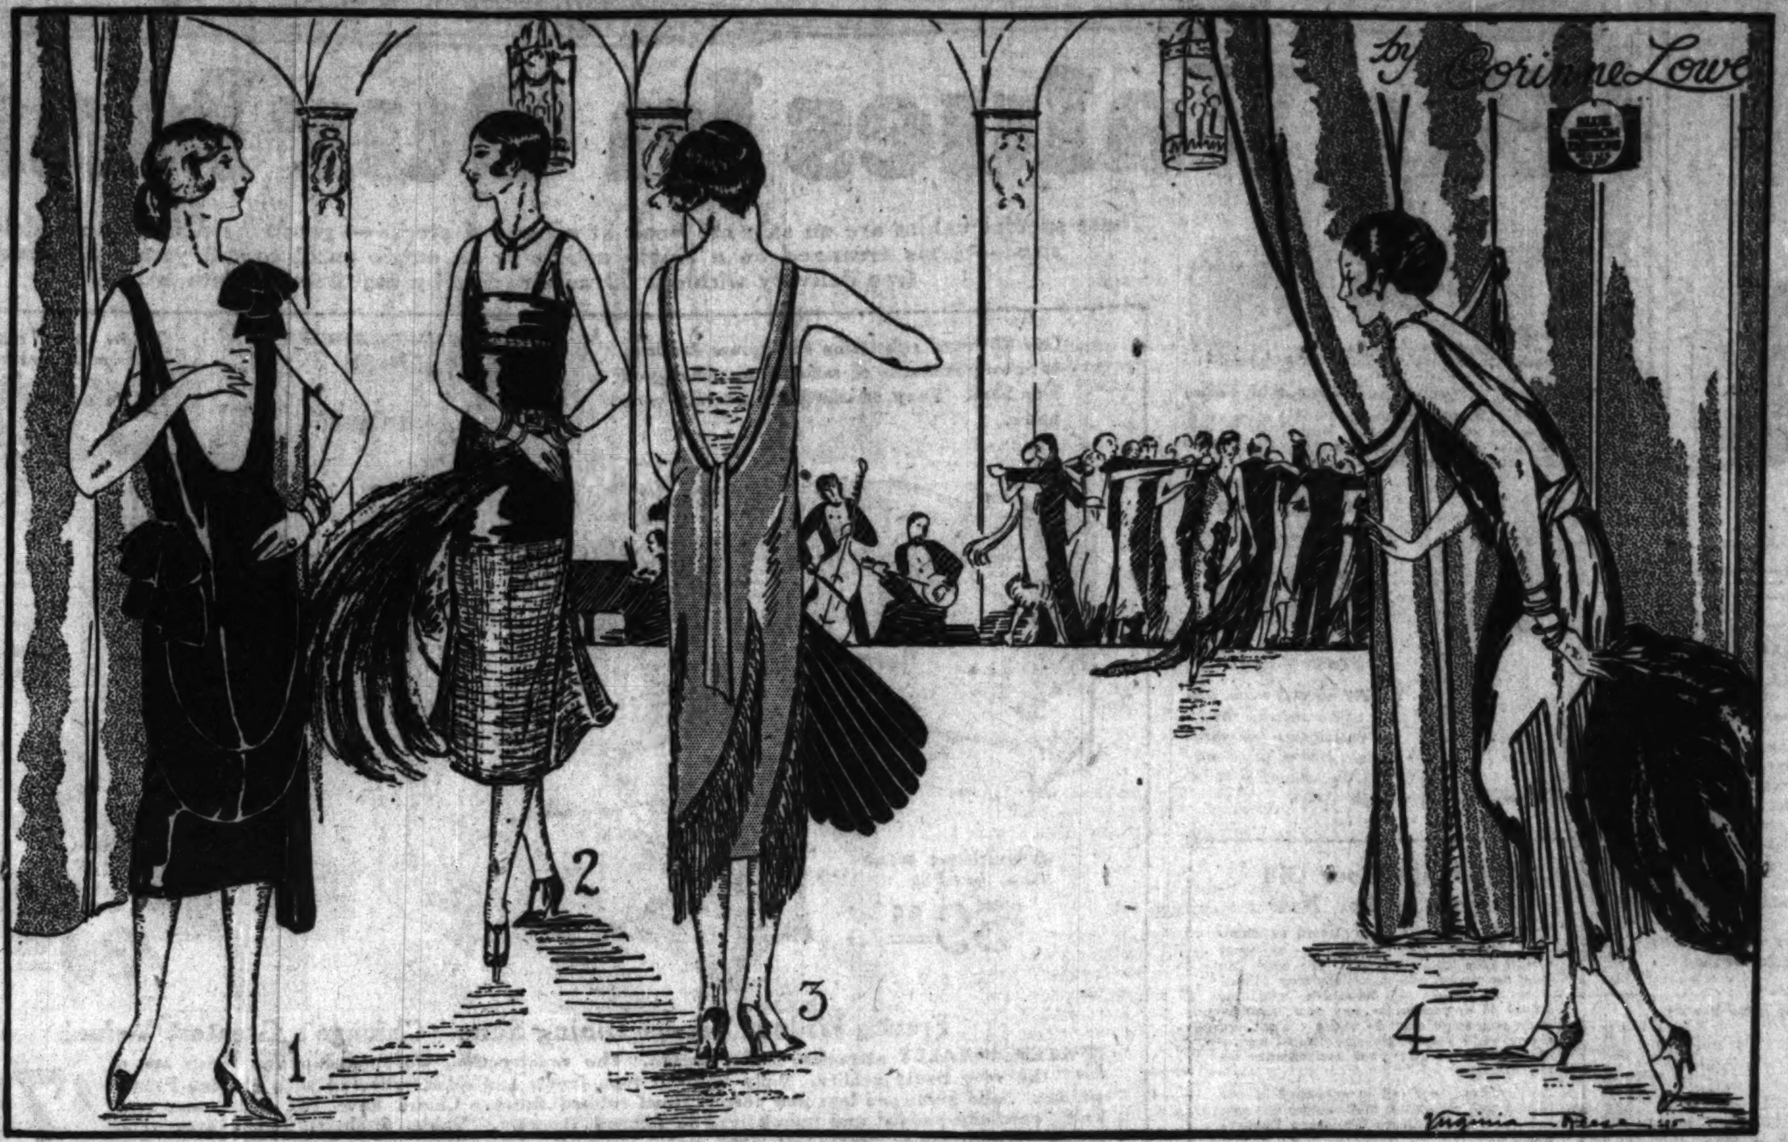
EVENING GOWNS SKETCHED AT CHARITY BALL RECORD THE SPRING MODES



by Corinne Lowe

Bias folds of self-material describing a curve both on the front and back of the skirt of a chartreuse colored satin frock are the outstanding trimming details of the left hand model. Loops of the material on hip and shoulder, an underbodice of gold tulle, and a panel at the left side are the other recommendations. Next, the molded corsage is presented in a frock of black satin combined with gold tissue. The third figure wears a white moire with distinctive trimming of black and silk fringe. Plaited white chiffon fills in the deep V in the back. Last, a peach colored chiffon is outlined with narrow folds of black velvet and exploits in draperies of deeper pink the prevailing vogue of plaits.

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—Charity begins at fashion—one is always tempted to say this after attending one of the charity balls that are such a feature of New York's winter season. Of course, not all those who go to these affairs are models of chic. Nevertheless, there are always a few beacons who guide our steps toward the coming mode.

Take the four figures illustrated today, for example. These were sketched at one of the big charity balls. It is interesting to note that all wear costumes which do more than keep step with the mode. They anticipate it; and in color, line, and trimming effect we find a number of the style points developed by the spring openings of Paris.

Among such style points we find first the raised waistline. This has represented a strong and almost universal current of thought. Of course, the long corsage is still lingering in the lap of style. It has not been banished from our midst. Even so, there are numbers of the new frocks where the waistline has shunned the lap. It approaches a point that is almost normal, and if it doesn't jump upward in the back it frequently does so in the front.

At the right we observe a frock which presents to you this new character and which presents also two other salient details of the spring fashion. You observe that the peach colored chiffon gown achieves the required note of fullness about the hem by a number of plaited draperies that are applied in a slanting line. These bring us to our chapter on plaits.

Plaits! For several thousands of years fashion writers have been trying to infuse a strain of novelty into their record of this trimming touch. For plaits, like the poor, are always with us. They have been with us since the days of Cretan civilization and probably long before that. This spring, though, the old plait-itude is present more constantly than ever. Plaits classical and plaits jazzed, plaits large and plaits small—these ramble around the dress landscape with a vigor and an opulence that make all previous luxuriance look sickly and stunted.

Perhaps the most favored way of introducing the plait upon the favored evening sheath of chiffon is via the short flounce finishing the frock. This is frequently shown in fine plaits that are echoed by the plaited ends of the matching scarf. Incidentally, let me here repeat one of my old jokes. Again the scarf dance and the spring song are one, and again they are unsyncopated by any more recent thought. Usually the long scarf matches the frock, and usually its ends are ornamented with the trimming—fringe, embroidery, or plaits—that is sounded on the frock itself. Nor can we live down that charming trick of attaching the scarf by a single bloom on the shoulder.

As far as the plaits are concerned, one prefers as a more individual interpretation than the flounce such draperies as we see in this frock. After all, that plaited flounce, in spite of the fact that it is still good, always subjects a woman to the danger of being referred to as "one of those women in plaited flounce dresses." The same thing may be said of the still fashionable skirt of tucked tiers.

In deciding upon pink for its tone, this frock cast its ballot with the majority. After months and months of wear, all shades of pink and red, ranging from the palest of flesh to the most exotic of reds, are casting the same old glow on the fashionable landscape. Often two shades of this color are combined. Thus in this model the draperies and the belt—placed firmly at the natural waistline—are of a pink much more decisive than the pale background.

The last charming touch of this gown was devised, I believe, by Patou, who is perhaps the greatest uncommon deviser we have with us. It consists of a narrow binding of black velvet around neckline and armholes, and introduced further to head each drapery and to stripe the girdle.

Although many of the great Paris couturiers will have none of it, there is literally the mold of form. This effect of molding the gown to the upper part of the torso was developed last fall, especially by M. Patou, and this spring the motivation has been more general. Second from the left we encounter a typical example of this treatment in the frock worn by a fashionable debutante at the ball of which I am writing.

The corsage is of black satin encircled with bands of gold tissue, and that corsage fits at the top in a way that would have brought no shame to the proud record of an 1880 basque. The shoulder straps are of the metal cloth, and so also is the short circular skirt. Here we have it—one of the spring silhouettes—the molded top with a flaring skirt! The top band of metal cloth is drawn around so as to simulate a yoke. This is much in the spring fashion picture. Yokes are introduced impartially upon all types of frocks and coats. Their employment is particularly striking in some of the new sports coats, both separate and embraced in a costume.

In the sheath gown sketched in the center we find black and white silk fringe arranged in curved and widening segments, as the strain of novelty on this creation of white moire. A second significant trimming detail occurs in the rolled collar that forms in front a modest U and dips down in the back to a rather rounded V. Such rolled collars have formed the finish of a number of exceedingly smart evening models this winter. This one accomplishes a note of difference through the fact that it is lined with black chiffon, a fact linking up the top of the gown with its fringed border.

We are still minding not our Ps and Qs but our Vs and Us. As against a number of square and rounded finishes the V—especially the V-shaped back—is still a predominant feature of the decolletage. There are different ways of giving this triangle some variety, among which the classic impulse to accent it, as is done in this frock, while a long streamer of self-material still maintains its prestige.

At the left of the page is a satin frock of the chartreuse tint—that type of yellow green—which is being widely exploited this season. Its distinguishing feature is formed by the bias bands applied to the skirt both front and back. These bands are set on in curves that complete the effect of the rounded decolletage. Here is a fashionable detail and one which has been noted for both afternoon and evening gowns. Sometimes there are two or three of such horseshoe bends on the skirt, and sometimes the ornamentation is repeated in similar motifs on the corsage.

The winter has bequeathed us a number of its favorite trimming treasures. Ostrich and embroidery, ruches and appliqued motifs, beads and lace—these appear frequently in the freshest of evening creations. Even fur seems destined to become implicated with our spring apparel to a greater extent than ever before. Red fox, for example, officiates in places where you would least expect it, and next week I am showing one of the spring chiffons trimmed with this ruddy pelt.

Again this spring M. Poiret has been making to have the habit. Well, perhaps some of us may be talked into the bustle, but with the great majority of us it will doubtless prove much ado about nothing.

As for evening wraps, both capes, for which Paris predicts a great success this spring, and the coat of tailored persuasion are offered. Shoes and stockings seem for their part as stable as the wraps. However, it may be added that the tendency to wear both slippers and stockings dyed to match the gown is becoming more marked.

THE LEAN SOUPS.

If all the soups of all the rest of the world were put together, they would not equal in number those which the French have invented. Since the poorer people of France have had a soup with bread dipped in it for two meals a day, it is no wonder that their list of solid soups—purees of beans and peas, and soups thickened with bread, rice, and other cereals—is so long. They also make wonderful, even famous, fish soups, including the bisques of shell fish. Their onion and potato soups are almost as famous as some they make of beans, and they certainly have played up and played with and perfected bean purees.

From France, too, has come the Lenten or "maigre" (meatless) soups, as opposed to the meat or fat (gras) soups. Some of these are exceedingly thick with vegetables, cut in all sorts of fashions, and almost equal to the rather wonderful purees. The way one Frenchman introduced the subject of meatless soups was by giving the following invitation: "Make a cross on the soup pot; it is Easter time. I have at your disposal a collection of maigre soups to delight a saint."

We might go right through the alphabet of vegetables, from artichokes to yams, in presenting a list of soups, but the bean soups, for instance, are best for the cold days of winter, and as we get into the spring the soups of cress, beets, and even the turnip seem the most suitable, real "printanieres," which means springtime. Cream of carrot soups are capable of many variations, and parsnips make a better soup than one would guess, when the cooking is good. For lightness and daintiness and besides for real caloric weight, we may use almonds and chestnuts and raw peanuts for soups. Fish soups, even a soup of canned salmon, ought to have their turn, and always, for simplicity, we may come back to the potato and onion soup. And, speaking of onion soup, we may be reminded of the tapioca thickened soups which may be so delicate and suitable at this season.

Picking a few from my own favorite list I would present the following:

Beet Bisque.

4 medium sized new beets (one bunch).
1 tablespoon butter.
1 or 2 teaspoons salt.
1 cup boiling water.
4 cups hot milk.
Thickening and garnishes.

Wash, peel, and put the beets through the food chopper, fine disk. Put them into a saucepan with the butter and salt, and heat up quickly. Add the cup of boiling water—less if anything. Cook ten or fifteen minutes. Have ready the hot milk, which may be slightly thickened, combine with beets, add salt, and serve as it is, or, for fine and handsome service, strain. A little additional butter may be added, and a tablespoon of cream to each cup, when it is served as a luncheon number. If the milk is not thickened, a cracker rolled fine may be added to the soup after it is strained to make it bisquelike.

Cream of Beet Soup.

Make a thin white sauce, and add cooked and hot beets, chopped fine, to it. A little cream improves the quality of soups like this, sometimes called "apple blossom" soup.

Water Cress and Potato Soup.

1 medium bunch water cress.
1 or 2 onions.
1 tablespoon butter.
2 or 3 medium sized potatoes.
2 cups of milk.
Salt to taste, and cream.

Wash the cress, and lift it out of the water into a small flat bottomed aluminum kettle, cover the kettle closely, set over small fire, and cook until cress is tender. Chop the cress and add it to the potato which has been cooked, mashed, and then cooked a little with the milk. Cook all together for a few minutes, then press through a strainer and add butter and salt. After that heat up if necessary and serve. A tablespoon of cream per

ANSWER TO WHAT'S WRONG HERE

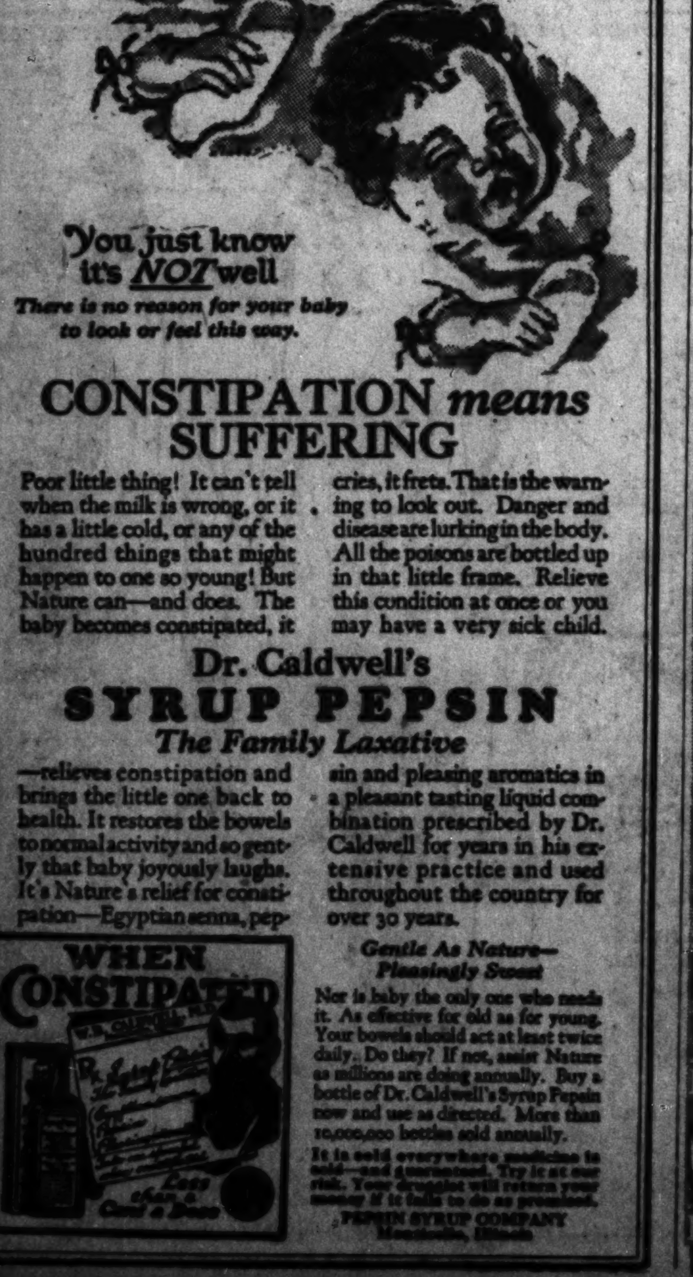
The seventh feminine bore is the antique belle. She who remembers how Theodore Roosevelt saw her once at a ball before she or he were married, and asked "Who is the beautiful lady?"



You just KNOW it's well
Your baby, too, can laugh and coo and crow in the best of health.

You just know it's NOT well
There is no reason for your baby to look or feel this way.

CONSTIPATION means SUFFERING

Poor little thing! It can't tell when the milk is wrong, or it has a little cold, or any of the hundred things that might happen to one so young! But Nature can—and does. The baby becomes constipated, it cries, it frets. That is the warning to look out. Danger and disease are lurking in the body. All the poisons are bottled up in that little frame. Relieve this condition at once or you may have a very sick child.

Dr. Caldwell's
SYRUP PEPSIN
The Family Laxative

—relieves constipation and brings the little one back to health. It restores the bowels to normal activity and so gently that baby joyously laughs. It's Nature's relief for constipation—Egyptian senna, pepsin and pleasing aromatics in a pleasant tasting liquid combination prescribed by Dr. Caldwell for years in his extensive practice and used throughout the country for over 30 years.

Gentle As Nature—Pleasingly Sweet

Nor is baby the only one who needs it. As effective for old as for young. Your bowels should act at least twice daily. Do they? If not, assist Nature as millions are doing annually. Buy a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin now and use as directed. More than 10,000,000 bottles sold annually.

It is sold everywhere medicine is sold—and guaranteed. Try it at our risk. Your druggist will return your money if it fails to do as promised.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

Fashion puts fullness in the front of frocks with inverted plaits.

Combinations of contrasting colors in diaphanous fabrics are smart for spring.

New version of the jumper blouse buttoning in back, with the skirt following suit.

A novel trimming for sports suits is vari-colored crochet.

FIRST OFFICIAL FRENCH MODELS FOR SPRING.

By Bettina Bedwell.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Fullness is moving forward on the first spring frocks. That the clothes line is concentrating in front is evident in the premier fashion shows of the grander couturiers of Paris, which are now in progress. All sorts of insets are used, from the simple gathers that grandma made to the most elaborate shaped and patterned godets, and they are generally placed well forward on the new spring models. Of course, they aren't going to deprive us all of a sudden of our beloved straight line, so they are giving us all sorts of room to move around without disturbing the line too much.

Most of the new spring materials, even the woolens, are of extraordinary suppleness, so that they can be gathered, plaited, or made circular, without the result of departing altogether from the straight silhouette. One of the pet tricks of Paris couturiers is to make a straight tube frock and then set in a large flounced section at the center front from the hips to hem line. Another is to do the same thing by putting in clusters of plaits. If they have a bit of trimming made for a particular model they hang it somewhere on the front of it and leave the back pretty much alone and unadorned.

An example of this is demonstrated in our first offering, which is one of the first official spring models shown in Paris. It is from Sandra, one of the many aristocratic Russian refugees who have invaded Paris and turned their Slavic talent for color and line to the couturier field.

This little afternoon lesson in the art of simplicity was designed by Mme. Sandra for her friend, Lady Carson. It illustrates well the clever way they are hanging decorations on the front of spring fashions, and in this case the ornamentation is decidedly novel and attractive. The triangular pockets and the band down the center of the bodice are made of black suede, which is covered with odd Russian motifs painted on to the leather with barbaric colors. Each motif is outlined with a delicate embroidery in gold thread.

Amplification occurs in the inverted plaits that begin at the points of the pockets. In the back, which is plain and flat, these plaits are stitched flat from shoulder to hem. The material of this frock is a modernized surah, dragged out of the oblivion of two decades by Bianchini and made richer and more supple than in bygone days. It also sounds one of the smart color notes of the season—a cross between brique and rust red.

The kind of front fullness shown in this frock is the more restrained type, while our second offering runs to the other extreme with three extra full shirred flounces forming the front of the skirt, while the black languishes in a straight line. This toilette is an ultra smart Riviera frock, seen on the Promenade des Anglais at Nice. It is an advanced word on the combining of large areas of opposing color. Many of the leading couturiers are doing this with their spring models for the openings. Black and white mousseline are effectively joined in the ever intriguing magpie harmony for this frock. Alternate black and white flounces make the skirt, and the straight blouse is trimmed with bands of white, while the sleeves are two-thirds flaring white cuffs.

That method of tying up the throat, as you see it on this model, is smart and effective. It gives new life to the jaded scarf collar. This model has so many fashionable virtues that it deserves to be canonized, and if you want to get yourself up a la mode you can do no better than to follow the rules that thihs frock lays down for afternoon. Clouds of chiffon float across the horizon of fashion, cute combinations such as this, and heaps of the most glorious printed varieties. They are en rigeur for anything from tea time to bed time.

Up to the tea hour you are ruled absolutely by the laws of the clothes they call sports. Sports in name only, many of them, but they are qualified to come under this head none the less. In our third and fourth offering you have both kinds—the real, honest-to-goodness sports costume in our third sketch, and the nominal in our fourth. Both have a place in the day of the smart woman.

The first of these is from Doret, and is made of kasha natural, which means that it is much the color of the sands that border the Mediterranean. There is a frankly severe, semi-fitted jumper bodice, that breaks the jumper slip-on rule and buttons up the back with brown stained ivory buttons, and there is the short plaited kasha skirt.

This skirt also buttons up the back with the same kind of buttons. The long line of the buttons is augmented by a band of brown kasha, and other bands of brown trim the sleeves and pockets. Where the seams do their task of fitting the blouse to the curve of the hips they are also accentuated by bands of brown kasha.

This model is the kind of sports uniform that smart women prefer of all others for morning wear on the Riviera, and I know an American marquise, now at Cannes, who recently wrote, asking me to select for her fifteen sports uniforms from the February openings. She wants 'em to be just as simple and severe as the mode will permit, which is going a long way on the stern path of the uncomplicated.

Naturally, there are other women who, while they wouldn't dare to omit the sports uniform, from their wardrobes, prefer something a bit less severe. Therefore, you can see many genuinely individual sports costumes also. These are the nominal kind, such as you see in our fourth offering, which was created by Sandra. White kasha is its material, and it forms the straight, collarless coat and long tunic. The tunic is worn over a straight and narrow slip of black satin. The real originality of this model comes in the odd cutting and in the bands of crochet that attach the panels of kasha. The sleeveless tunic is cut into long narrow panels, which are crocheted together with black, rose, green, and blue crochet bands, and triple bands of crochet trim the bottom. The coat has all seams united by this means, and patch pockets also have their borders of crochet. Notice that these pockets are placed at the front of the coat.

It is the sleeves of the coat that are the real novelty, and that lend so much distinction. Sandra has cut the upper sleeve from white kasha, while the lower is all cuff, extending to the elbow, chiefly black, with motifs of color crocheted into them. The ensemble is chic indeed, and has the merit of personality.

3218—Women's and misses' dress. Sizes 16 years and 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3½ yards of 36 inch material.

2341—Woman's dress. Sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, and 46 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅝ yards of 36 inch material. The hot iron transfer pattern, 718, comes in blue and yellow, and costs 15 cents extra.

How to Use the Patterns

IF one likes contrasts, the natural colored kasha made up with black satin would be pretty for a dress made by pattern No. 2341. The dress would be made of the kasha; the vest, underfacings of the slashed front, collar, and lining of the panels on the sides of the skirt, of black satin. O course, many women would prefer a darker kasha, and there are many other materials to choose from. That was just by way of a suggestion.

The front and back of the dress are each cut in one piece, and on the front of the dress, at a low waist line, two upright slashes are cut, through which a belt is slipped. This belt covers where the side panels are put on. In making these slashes the places should be marked with basting thread, then cut a small piece of the dress or trimming material, cutting it longer than the slash and about two inches wide, and lay it on the right side over the basting. From the wrong side stick pins through, showing exactly where the bastings come. Then from the right side take small banning stitchings with basting thread directly over the others. Stitch on the machine up and down each side of the basting stitches, keeping close to them, and stitch across both ends.

With sharp pointed scissors cut through both thicknesses of material, cutting between the stitching on the basting threads. Clip a tiny bit at each end of the slashes, making little diagonal clips just inside the stitching. This is to enable you to turn the piece of material through the slash to the wrong side and not have it pucker at top and bottom. Then overhand the slash together on the right side, and leave these bastings in until the final pressing is done. These pieces are catchstitched down on the wrong side, or hemmed so the stitches don't show through on the right side.

The pattern provides for long or short sleeves, but the long ones would seem more appropriate if the material suggested is used. If a crêpe or other silk were used, one might like to use the short sleeves. The embroidery design, 718, will add to the good looks of the dress—used as suggested in the picture.

Pattern No. 1942 is for one of those nice aprons that cover a dress effectively. It should be useful to slip on when preparing dinner, if one is dressed for the afternoon. There are shoulder and underarm seams, and the only fastening is at the waist line in the back, where it closes with one button. An apron of this kind can be made really pretty if one cares to take the necessary time. The edges everywhere would look well bound with a color contrasting to that of the apron, and the armholes and neck could have a narrow design in cross stitch outlining them. A pocket, finished in the same manner as the rest of the apron, would add to its appearance.

The one piece dress pattern No. 2218 would make up prettily in one of the striped flannels that are so popular—or a checked gingham trimmed with plain color would be attractive—tan with a brown or dark blue line marking off the check, or any other combination of colors. The contrasting color in this case would be the same as the line that forms the check.

Buttons make one of the best trimmings, and this dress, closing down the front as it does, could really be buttoned the entire length. The pattern provides for long or short sleeves, and it probably will depend on which length is more becoming—although one's choice of materials will undoubtedly govern. If the long sleeve is used, before basting the seam together lay it on a lapboard or table and bring the seam edges together. Then look at the outside fold and see if it lies perfectly smooth. If there is even the smallest kind of twist, shift the upper seam edge a little until the fold is smooth.

This putting together with more or less of a twist at the fold is responsible for many poor fitting sleeves. If in making the fold even the ends don't come out the same, one can be trimmed off so it will be the same length as the other. If a close fitting sleeve is desired, it will be necessary to leave it open a little way—say an inch or so—and smaller buttons, matching those on the front may be used, setting them close together up the outside of the sleeve, nearly to the elbow. The sleeve opening will be at the seam on the inside, and fastened with small snaps.

THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

serving improves the soup. A tip or two of the fresh cress may be used as a garnish.

Water Cress Soup with Rice Water.

The proportions for this soup may vary but, for the foundation, use for each rounding tablespoon of rice, one cup of water and one slice of onion. Cook these together for twenty or thirty minutes. Add to this cooked and chopped cress, and for each cup add four tablespoons of milk or part milk and part cream, and butter and salt to taste. It may be served strained or unstrained. The rice water has nutriment but is less expensive than milk, and for a considerable number this might be the recipe to use.

Note—Unless one knows how to cook greens well, that is, how to keep their brilliant green color, these soups might not be worth while. In French cooking the cresses are used in much the same way as the sorrel, and with similarly fine effects. An Englishman, writing of the French use, says: "The French regard the cresses as about top notch for cooking purposes. The French maigre soup of water cress is delectable. It is made with either potato or rice to give it body, with onion, parsley, egg, butter, and cream. Boiled cress as a supplement to omelet or poached eggs will be found admirable, or it can be served alone."

Maigre Cabbage Soup.

2 or 3 chopped onions.
1½ quarts water.
1 carrot.
1 ounce butter.
1 tablespoon flour.
2 potatoes.
A little celery and salt.

Shred the cabbage exceedingly fine. Put the butter in a frying pan and add onions and cabbage, stirring over the fire until the cabbage is well wilted. Stir in a tablespoon of flour, or a little more than that if you choose. Add water, bring to a boil, skim, and add potatoes cut fine, the carrot cut in julienne strips, the celery, if you have either fresh (cut fine) or some dried leaves, and cook for one hour. Add salt after this. A pint of canned tomato may be added to this soup, but it is better to find out first how good it is without it, and perhaps it will not be liked as well with it.

There is a great difference of opinion about the combination of cabbage and tomato. If instead of making this a truly lean soup two ounces of salt pork is fried for the fat—instead of the butter—the soup will have more body.

Cabbage Water Soups.

Allow for each cup of water in which cabbage is cooked one tablespoon of flour and one tablespoon of butter or other fat. Cook these until thick, stirring all the time. Add usual vegetables cut in nice fashions—onion, carrot, a little potato, and perhaps some turnip, green sweet pepper, and celery — and cook thoroughly. This may be strained before serving, but should then be reheated and served piping hot. Add seasonings after the straining. A little cream or butter at the last improves the soup.

Note—Cabbage water may be substituted for milk in a cream of corn soup, but a little cream is almost needed finally to perfect it—a tablespoon per serving will do.

Turnip Tapioca Soup.

1 cup mashed rutabaga.
1 teaspon granulated tapioca.
1 cup milk.
Seasonings.

Cook milk and tapioca together, gently stirring until the latter is dissolved. Add mashed or riced turnip with seasonings, and let stand a few minutes where it is hot. For luncheon serve in cups and garnish with a thin carpel of orange broken in half and a teaspoon of whipped cream.

Tapioca Foundation for Any Soup.

Allow one teaspoon of granulated tapioca to each cup of milk. Cook these together for fifteen minutes over a gentle fire with rather constant stirring. No matter what vegetable or vegetable mixture is added, some butter may be added at the last with the other seasonings and the soup will be better for the invalid than one in which the butter is cooked in.

Onion Tapioca Soup—Single Portion.

2 medium sized onions.
1 cup milk.
1 teaspoon (large) granulated tapioca.
1 tablespoon butter.
A little salt.

Put tapioca into milk, and allow to soak while onions are being prepared. Peel and slice onions, and put them to cook in cold water to cover. Bring to boil and cook for five minutes—they will be tender with gentle cooking in this time, while hard cooking stiffens them. Drain and chop them and simmer them in the butter without browning them. They can be smothered in the butter or in butter and a bit of water from the first. When they are so tender as to be almost melted, usually after five minutes in the butter, add the milk thickened with the tapioca. Cook for fifteen minutes, adding salt towards last and stirring most of the time. Serve without straining, but if extra thick sieve, heat again, and if necessary thin with hot milk or cream. When thick it may be served as an onion sauce or, when it is not sieved, as an onion stew.

Potato Tapioca.

Add mashed potato to tapioca foundation, and season to taste.

Beet Tapioca.

Add one freshly steamed and grated beet to each cup of foundation and butter to make agreeable.

Cream of Parsnip Soup I.

1 parsnip.
½ carrot.
1 cup hot milk.
Seasonings.

Wash, peel, slice carrot, and cook until tender enough to mash. Add the hot milk, the carrot which has been put raw through the food chopper, the seasonings, which may include a little butter, and cook a few minutes. Serve in cups with a little whipped cream.

Cream of Carrot Soup II.

1 pound parsnips.
Flour and butter.
1 quart boiling water.
Seasonings.

Scrape and pare parsnips, cut in slices, dust with flour, and sauté them until they are a light brown on both sides. Add the boiling water, and cook until parsnips are tender, then strain and heat up with salt and pepper, and finally a little butter with a cup of milk or more or some cream to finish, as well as to make the soup of the right consistency. Serve with a garnish of whipped cream, or with a little raw grated carrot over the top, or some finely chopped green.

Note—Though these soups have their characteristic flavor, they resemble a chestnut soup in appearance and somewhat in flavor and are much less work to make.

Peanut Soup.

1 cup shelled raw peanuts.
4 or 5 cups cold water.
Celery tops and other seasonings.
Milk to finish.

Pick over and wash peanuts. You may also blanch them. Add the cold water, put on stove, and let it be an hour coming to a boil, then let simmer until peanuts are tender. Mash and season and extend to taste with milk or cream. Since peanuts contain a great deal of oil, little or no butter will be required.

REVAMPING THE FACE

by Antoinette Donnelly

On Taking a Chance In the Grab Bag For Youth.

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—If you have a face, and father loves it, Bill loves it, and the kids love to hug and fondle it—you had better think twice before you bring it along to Paris with you. Otherwise it is in for so many insults—some self-inflicted, others professionally disbursed—that you'll begin to wonder whether you had better not return and throw yourself upon the mercy of the family court, pleading your cooking and your other homely virtues as your right to be tolerated.

It may be the thing that is supposed to be you on the passport that reduces you to this most groveling state of mind. You grovel. There's no doubt about that. You wonder how that face has kept you out of jail, much less earned you a husband and a few loyal friends.

Reduced to this plastic stage, you are ready to do anything to prevent being cast out of your own circle. And Paris is the prevention headquarters with an army of tense and eager soldiers, equipped with ammunition to attack lines, massed or single, on any part of your "map."

You can't be kept out of the war and be in Paris overnight. If the professional improvers don't get you, you get yourself. There is something in the air of this, the greatest beautifying center of the world that sets you to scrutinizing yourself as you have never "scruted" before, and reduces you to a frame of mind where whispers on rejuvenating methods become bugle calls for action on your part. Maybe it's only a muscle oil, and not a Voronoff gland, that is calling you. You answer it. And if luck is with you—there is a chance that father on your return may be buying roses over again to win the lovely femme you are.

Chances Are Good.

It has to be said in all fairness that your chances for improvement are good. Not, I believe, because the magic potions over here are any more magic than at home—but because you have taken toll of yourself and made up your mind to come to the aid of your face, before it is too late.

You have more leisure, for one thing, and your pocket is more lined with spending money. You hear of this and that place where sagging muscles are stopped on their downward journey. You try one, and if you fall into competent hands you buy the creams that are guaranteed to restore the charms of youth, and you yourself contribute much of the restoration by your nightly fidelity to their application. All of which could be done equally well at home but, generally speaking, isn't. So Paris at least must be credited with supplying the urge to conquer time and its devastating marks. On second thought, it isn't exactly an urge. It is an obsession. So much so that women are guilty of expecting the most impossible miracles. These failing in the beauty parlors, they, in final desperation, will turn their honest faces over to a cosmetic surgeon on simple hearsay as to his reputation and standing in his profession.

I don't discredit this facial surgery done by ethical men. But because it is easy money the profession abounds in get-rich-quick Wallingfords who see in the American femme in Paris an opportunity to fatten and grow rich. I have just heard of one woman whose face fell into the hands of an incompetent so-called surgeon, and fell out again so sorry a thing it may make an expatriate of the poor woman. She does not want to go back home. This man was recommended by a chance acquaintance made in one of the tourist hotels. Better to cling to the face on the passport than be that reckless with it. At least it got this one woman into Paris and would have got her out again, undoubtedly.

Youth with Every Dip.

There is something so ludicrous about this business of trying to look 16 when you are all of that, with pluses, that you are tempted to chorus Solomon's old bromide about all being vanity. But what with the procession being what it is, and being a party, willing or not, to the sex that makes the by-products of vanity the thriving industry over here that it unquestionably is, you plunge along with the crowd into one or other of the waters that guarantee youth with every dip.

In the Ritz one day a party of us was seated at a table directly facing one of the most celebrated lifted faces of the age, worn by a motion picture actress of international fame. Her age, I learn from an old schoolmate, is 53.

"Look at her!" we heard exclaimed all round. "She's 60 if she is a day. She looks 16."

Now where, we ask you, is the benefit of looking 16 if the kind world is going to advertise you as belonging in the next decade higher. Another celebrated owner of a lifted face belongs to a woman of the French stage, who is generously given the benefit of a dozen years she has not yet lived. You wonder who's fooling who, and what's the use!

The world says: "Look at her hands. Hear her voice. They're old." The woman inside must be in eternal conflict trying to live the life of the girl with the face of her. You philosophise about religion's being a more comfortable thing to face declining years with.

But, then—as I say—if you want to be in the parade, you have to do it to the jazz tune of the age.

Famous Doctor Explains.

Because I had heard a great deal about a doctor here and his uplift operation, because it was whispered about that this and that and the other great actress and professional beauty owes her second blooming to him, I wandered out to his house the other afternoon to put some questions to him on the vital subject of the moment. I found him rather young and enthusiastic about the profession. He has performed the uplift operation, "esthetique surgery" he calls it, on over twelve hundred women. Hundreds of these were from America, an equal number from South America, principally from the Argentine, many Russian women, too. In spite of their present poverty, he tells me, their coquetry is equal to the strain. They would go without food rather than forego a chance to improve.

The operation, he explained, is so simple it can be performed in an hour with only a local anesthetic. A woman may come in in the morning, go shopping in the afternoon, and if she has a date with her husband for luncheon she takes the gamble of not being recognized by him as the lady he expected to order caviar for. She comes back in five days, has the stitches removed, and her face is so smooth no one can tell where the incisions were made.

The physician confines his age removal work to the dragging wrinkles around the mouth and nose, and the billboard advertising wrinkles in the neck. A little slash behind the ears, a few judicious gatherings and tuckings and cross stitch embroidery on the epidermis, and your pearls hang upon a smooth undented column. Patients come from 25 to 70. The 25s are scolded and sent home to forget that tiny line near the mouth.

Over and Over Again.

But—this surgeon tells me the operation lasts eighteen months. There will come a time when a woman's engagement book will show an entry like the one she jots down to remind her she should see her dentist again. If she waits too long it will require just that many more stitches to revamp the countenance.

Men, he tells me, are entered less frequently as patients only because they have not the hair to hide the scar. When some one has discovered a real hair grafting success it is expected there is going to be one grand subway jam in the esthetique surgeon's anteroom.

This surgeon claims also to have discovered a method of improving woman's figure, giving it the slim, straight, young girl look without which no 16 year old face should be accompanied. Not by the less dangerous diet and exercise is it accomplished, but by an anesthetic administered before going under the knife for the removal of part of a too maternal bosom. He claims to be the only surgeon able to do this operation. Patients flock to him from all ranks of society, he declares.

Well, I will not give out his name. Any woman wishing to take this chance in the grab bag for youth does it without any persuasion on my part.

ANTOINETTE DONNELLY'S BEAUTY ANSWERS

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet or a set of exercises for what ails you, and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelop. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

BLONDIE: THE LEMON RINSE for hair is not harmful and is found by some to keep the hair light—to give it a golden tint. Others claim it is of no particular value for that purpose. The amount to be used depends upon the amount of hair you have. The bleaching effect is due to the citric acid in the lemon juice. Send a stamped, addressed envelope for my booklet on care of the hair.

ROSITA: WHITEHEADS ARE hard, cheesy deposits usualy found just under the surface of the horny skin. They are really a form of imprisoned blackhead, protected from the surface dirt. To remove them, apply hot cloths to soften the skin, then prick with a sterilized needle, and press out contents. Wipe the spot with peroxide, and massage gently with a good skin food. I have a formula for a good skin food which I shall be glad to send to you, if you will let me have a stamped, addressed envelop.

PAULINE: BRUSH THE TONGUE with tooth powder, just as you do the teeth. The tongue accumulates tartar and bacteria, especially near the root, and it is just as important to brush it as to brush the teeth. Limewater is a splendid mouth wash, and it is inexpensive. I'll be glad to send you my pamphlet giving instructions on how to make the lime mouth wash, if you will send along a stamped, addressed envelope.

PEARL M.: FOR THE LINES under the eyes, massage lightly at night with a good skin food. Pat lightly and work from the nose out, with a little upward trend at the outer edge of the eye. Do you get your proper quota of sleep? Eight hours is what is required, and when you do not get it your eyes tell the tale.

T. M. R.: YOU WISH TO REDUCE the waist line? Try the following exercise: Stand with knees straight, feet firmly on the ground; twist trunk to the right and at the same time extend the arms out wide; recover position and then twist to the left. Inhale on the twist and exhale on return to position. Do no turn the lower part of the body. You will feel a pull at the waist, which is a sure sign that you need this exercise. For additional exercises, send stamped, addressed envelope.

JULE: GOITER, OR ENLARGEMENT of the thyroid gland, is now being treated with X-ray, and with much success. The advantage of this form of treatment is that you may continue going to business while taking the treatments. If you will consult your physician he will tell you what is best to do, and whether or not an operation is advisable. If it is of long standing, treatment is necessary, at once. If not, the enlargement may disappear.

MYRA C.: YOU MAY BLEACH the hairs on your arms with a peroxide solution. Dilute it with water, half and half at first, and gradually increase the amount of peroxide. The peroxide will bleach the hairs so they will be less noticeable. Or you may use a depilatory. I have a formula for a good depilatory which I shall be glad to send you on receipt of a stamped, addressed envelope.

KATE V.: FALLING ARCHES will make the ankles weak, and send shooting pains up the legs. See to it that your shoes fit properly, as shoes must give support to the arch and plenty of room for the toes. I have some good exercises for weak ankles which I shall be glad to send to you on receipt of a stamped, addressed envelop.

Scientific Wrinkle Remover Easily Made

A few dermatologists have long held the secret that a certain product known to the drug trade as Saxolite had the property when used in solution of almost instantly reducing wrinkles and furrows. Any one can readily make this same solution by dissolving an ounce of powdered Saxolite in a half pint of witch hazel. Bathe the face in this and note the quick transformation! The skin tightens, becomes firmer—deepest wrinkles and crowsfeet at once begin to smooth out. This action will of course also reduce baggy cheeks or double chin.

When the hands show signs of aging, the skin becoming coarse, crepey, or flabby, bathe them in the solution. Since the first publication of this formula, men and women all over the country have taken advantage of the information, according to reports, with most satisfactory results.

THE ADVENTURES OF FUZZY WUZZY

HARD TIMES ON MISTY MOUNTAIN.

By Raymond Kelly

TIMES were hard on Misty Mountain. Everybody said so, even the bluejays who must have been wise or they couldn't have talked so much. The bluejays said they'd never seen such an awful season. There was a great deal of hunting, but little finding, for game was none too plentiful and very shy. Even the fishes in the creek found each other scarce and hard to catch. So of course, there was much worry on the mountain.

Mother Bear did more than a little of that worrying because, you see, she had the meals to get, and it's pretty hard for the best of cavekeepers to set a good table when there's no food.

"Father," said she, "the honey is all gone."

"Yes, my dear," answered Father Bear.

"The flour is all gone, too," Mother Bear went on to say.

"Yes, my dear. We'll have to have beans."

"But the beans are all gone also," said Mother Bear.

"That's good, my dear. I never did care a great deal for beans."

"But what shall we eat?" asked Mother Bear.

"Just what I've been wondering. What do you say to giving up our lease on the den and living at the zoo for a while?"

"And give up my beautiful den, and all my friends here on Misty Mountain," said Mother Bear, beginning to cry. "O, I just couldn't."

"Well," replied Father Bear, "I've worn my feet off at hunting, and my paws are sore from fishing, but I haven't been able to keep this family in food. I'm so thin, myself, that my bones keep me awake nights with their rattling. I guess I'll have to give up home life for a while and be a circus bear."

"But Father," put in Fuzzy Wuzzy, "circus bears are almost never home. We'd be so lonesome with you away working all the time and riding about on the railroad."

"True enough, my son," replied his father, "but a regular bear must support his family. The first thing in the morning I shall go down the mountain and call on Mr. Griggs, who has charge of the wild animals for the Greatest Show on Earth. I'm certain that he'll be glad to take me on for the season."

So Mother Bear made a nice supper out of almost nothing at all, which is a trick that all mothers know, and then they all went to bed in order that Father Bear might get an early start in the morning.

Fuzzy went along with him as far as the end of the pine tree path, and then stood looking after his father, as the old bear made his way along the road that led to the village. Father Bear was walking slowly, as though he were almost afraid to go into the town though, goodness knows, it wasn't a big enough place to scare any one; just a few stores, a sawmill, and the hotel where all the tourists came. Then, too, there was the big farm where the circus stayed during its off season.

But Father Bear wasn't walking slowly when he came home that night. No indeed, for he came swinging into the den with a whistling growl that showed he was as happy as a lark. He had reason to be happy, too, for he brought with him a great bag filled with every kind of good things to eat that you can imagine.

"Goodness me!" exclaimed Mother Bear, when she saw all that food. "You've enough there to feed a regiment, but how shall we ever pay for all of it?"

"All paid for," said Father Bear, "and you can have as much every day if you wish."

"Circuses must pay wonderfully," said Mother Bear. "If only you didn't have to leave home for weeks and weeks."

"I shall be home every evening, and I haven't been near the circus people," answered Father Bear. "I am an artist's model. I work for the photographer at the hotel. All I have to do is to lie on the ground with my eyes closed, while the tourists take turns at being photographed with one foot resting on my ribs. It's not hard work at all, and there's no danger, either, because the gun the photographer lends them isn't loaded."

So Fuzzy Wuzzy was very happy that evening, because his father had a fine job and hard times were over for them all.

Free to Any Woman
My youth and beauty helps
By Edna Wallace Hopper

For 40 years I have searched the world for the best beauty helps in existence. I spent nine years in France. And countless experts elsewhere have given me their best.

Those helps made me a famous beauty. They have retained my youth and beauty. The thousands who see me daily on the stage marvel at my bloom.

Now the best I found is placed at every woman's call. Toilet counters everywhere supply them. And I gladly send to all who ask a sample of any for test. I urge every girl and woman to try, at my cost, the matchless helps I found.

My rosy bloom

I found in France a liquid cleanser, used by famous beauties there. It contains no animal, no vegetable fat. It cannot assimilate in any way with the skin. It simply cleans to the depths, then departs. I call this product my Facial Youth. One use will give you a new conception of what a clean skin means.

I use a super-cream called my Youth Cream. It contains a dozen ingredients which experts have advised for me. These include products of both lemon and strawberry. Also the best that science knows to foster, feed and protect the skin. A test of Youth Cream will amaze and delight you.

White Youth Clay

Clay is the greatest help that women can employ. But not the crude and muddy clays so many have applied. I use a clay which is the final result of 20 years of scientific study. It is white, refined and dainty. And it combines many helps beside clay. I call it my White Youth Clay. It purges the skin of all that clogs and mars it, the causes of blackheads and blemishes. It combats all lines and wrinkles. It causes a rosy after-glow by bringing the blood to the skin. Many women seem to drop ten years in one application. No girl or woman can look her best without the use of clay.

My envied hair

My hair is thick, lustrous and luxuriant. The thousands who see me daily on the stage wonder at its glory. I have never had falling hair or dandruff, never a touch of gray. In fact, my hair is finer far than 40 years ago. This I owe to my Hair Youth. It combines many helps in one. I apply it directly to the scalp with an eye-dropper. There it combats all that stifles the hair roots. It stimulates and tones. I never met a woman who found anything to bring comparable results. I wish all women who love beautiful hair would learn what Hair Youth does.

All druggists and toilet counters now supply Edna Wallace Hopper's beauty aids exactly as I use them. Mail this coupon for a sample of any, stating which you want. My Beauty Book will come with it. If the sample delights you, get my products at your store. Clip coupon now.

I had asked Robert in to have some waffles and I was amazed at his capacity for them.

Finally I detected signs of his eating them with difficulty so I said: "Will you have another if I cook it?"

"Well," he said with a reluctant sigh, "I guess not. I fink I is on the outside of too many now." D. J.

Hearing a great commotion in the yard, I called my children to account. Billie said, "Some boys and I were having words, but they didn't get a chance to use theirs." L. F.

Last summer when mother and father were starting on a motor trip to Canada Billy was bidding them a fond good-by.

Billy—Say, dad, you intend to bring me something, don't you?

Dad—I sure do, Billy, and it will be something you will like, too.

Billy—Say, dad, do you think it will cost a dollar?

Dad—Yes, I believe it will, Billy.

Billy—Listen, dad, you and mother will be busy most of the time and to save you the trouble why don't you just give me the dollar now and then you won't be bothered thinking about it and trying to find something you think I would like? D. D.

Jack went with his mother to visit on a neighboring porch, where a small group was chatting.

During the visit Jack wandered too close to the edge, and to the horror of every one, fell headlong the full length of the steps. Of course everybody was frightened, thinking surely the child was injured, but before any one could reach him he was on his feet and, looking up with a foolish little smile on his frightened face, he gasped, "I'll bet you couldn't do that!" C. F. M.

The new neighbor had trouble telling the twins apart, and one day recently she was looking at them and pondering before calling them by name, when Ellen asked, "Which one of us is it you don't know?" E. L. R.

Ben and Jack had each built a snow fort in the back yard. Soon afterward I saw Jack pounding away at Ben's fort.

"What are you doing?" I asked.

"Knocking Ben's fort down; he busted mine."

"O, I thought you boys were friends."

"We are when I get this busted!" E. T.

ISN'T IT ODD?

By William Atherton Du Puy.

ISN'T it odd that the flea should be shaped like a hatchet with the sharp edge forward, while almost all of the insects are flat like the water bug!

There is, as always, a reason for this. The flea is a jungle dweller, lives always where there is a thick growth of underbrush about it. If it moves at all it must split that jungle. It could not get through the hair forest at all if it were flattened like a water bug. It could not even find a place big enough to sit down. It must have a sharpened prow like a ship to live where it does.

But this jungle in which it lives is so dense as to require other aids for its penetration. The flea might crowd itself deep into the underbrush and then, when it stopped pushing for a moment, its sides being slick, it would flip back to where it started.

What the flea wants to do is to get ahead in the world. When it has made a certain advance it does not want to slip back again. To guarantee against this, therefore, it has taken thought. It has grown some spines on an otherwise naked body. They lie down on the body, points backward. When the flea has wriggled past given objects in the jungle these spines take hold and keep it from slipping back.

All these elements of construction on the part of the flea are in accordance with the principles of good engineering. Most of the appliances of the flea can be used for more than one purpose. Take these spines, for instance. Upon occasion they become life savers. A man creature may catch a flea between his two fingers. The flat, hatchet-like body is pressed tight. The flea may lie still for a moment. The pressure of the fingers is likely to relax a bit. Then the flea begins to squirm. It works first one side and then the other forward a bit. The spines bite in, with each movement, and give a hold for another push. It slips gently from between the restraining fingers and is gone. Its spine arrangement has saved its life.

SWEATERS THAT BLOOM IN THE SPRING.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The outdoor world of sport is going to be, if possible, more colorful than ever this spring, from what I have seen of the knitted wear that is to decorate the men. Ever since the Fair isle sweater became popular over here, with its brilliant many toned coloring, men's sweaters have become gayer and gayer.

Now the Fair isle is not entirely lost and forgotten, but it is giving much of its popularity up to other sweaters just as bright, but no novel patterns. Even the popular checked front sweater, coat style, with plain sleeves, is taking a back seat this season, in deference to newer modes which have been brought out by an enterprising knitting concern which has proved that knitted wear does have to be imported to be good.

New designs in every color of the rainbow are offered to the sweater wearing public by this manufacturer of knitted wear. The display of samples in his show room is dizzying in its color.

I'll pass some of the color schemes on to you, and you'll see the possibilities of combining such sweaters with various colors of shirts and ties to make attractive sport costumes.

A pattern which is hard to describe, but which is used on a coat sweater, front and back, with plain sleeves, is made up in these color combinations: Blue, heather, sand, and brown; camel's hair, light blue, and brown; sand, yellow, light blue, yellow, and green; brown, light blue, sand, and white; light blue, light gray, and white; grass green, sand, blue and white; light gray, flame, and blue; lavender, white, and greenish blue.

Here are some more of the same pattern: Jade green, smoke blue, gray, and maize; burnt orange, light blue, lavender, and sand; lavender, bright orange, and gray; turquoise blue, old rose, and light gray; black, light gray, and white; lavender, sand, dark brown, and white.

But coat sweaters are not the only wear. Slipovers, also with fancy fronts, and often fancy backs, are just as popular. There was a slipover model of diamond pattern, in a variety of colorings, that I found attractive. Here are the color possibilities of this sweater: Some of one shade, self-patterned, in blue, green, or gray blue.

The two color sweaters were of tan and yellow, red and black, brown and sage green, two shades of pastel green, two shades of red, two shades of blue, light blue and lavender, bright blue and gray. Some of the same pattern and model, but with three colors used, were:

Dark brown, yellow and tan, black, gray and salmon; green, yellow and white; two shades of green and gray; brown, sand and white.

Solid color sweaters with no pattern, will also be seen on golf links and wherever sport clothes flourish. The necks of the slipovers are V neck or crew neck.

Often in the case of the patterned multicolored sweaters the sleeves are also fancy.

Although these sweaters are new, there is no law which says that sweaters which you bought before the new batch came in are not to be worn this season. In fact, I have in mind some extremely good looking sweaters I saw in a well known sport outfitter's around Christmas time which will not be ashamed to be seen on any one for fear of being called out fashioned. They were of checked design, too, back, front, and sleeves. Of India cashmere, they defy anything to be softer. The colorings were black and white, black and lavender, light blue, tan and brown, mauve burnt orange and sand, dark brown, tan, and cream.

At this same shop I saw slipovers that were popular in Palm Beach. They were of white background, with fancy patterns in border effects. They were something like Fair isle patterns but, unlike the Fair isle, they repeated in pattern, whereas the Fair isle have a different design at every new row.

Surprise for Two.

I was the first one in the office that morning, and, knowing the boss was playing golf that day and would not be in, decided to have some fun. I went into the boss' private office and, reclining in his chair with my feet on the table, I waited for some one to arrive.

It was not long until I heard the door open, and I rang the buzzer furiously. I imagined they would expect a good bawling out from the boss. Try to visualize my embarrassment when the boss entered to get a box of golf balls he left in his desk.

Ready to Oblige.

We lived in the upper part of a house and had only a back entrance. One evening while waiting for hubby to come home I went down to chat with the woman downstairs.

Soon I heard footsteps going up the stairs and I ran out and said, "Wait, darling, I'm coming, too."

You can imagine how I felt when the laundry man replied, "I'll do that little thing."

Too Sleepy for Words.

I was occupying a room in a private home with another girl. The landlady had a small daughter about 12 years old who volunteered to dust our room, sampling our perfume, toilet water, or candy while so doing. We were aware of this and annoyed.

My roommate, Edna, had just returned from a trip to New York and had brought back some candies made into fruits, vegetables, and meats. I returned late from the theater, sleepy, and while undressing noticed the box on the table and sampled it.

The next morning I hurried to work. That evening I found Edna angry. She confronted me with the box of candy which Virginia had completely ruined. I took one look at it and groaned inwardly. In my sleepy state I had taken a bite from every piece. Edna, knowing Virginia's habits in the past, had reported the incident to her mother, and downstairs I could hear Virginia wailing that she didn't do it.

I made my confession. I had to apologize to our landlady for Edna and buy Virginia a box of candy.

Getting Her Own.

I rushed home from work to get ready for my installation, and started to put on my white shoes. Mother informed me the white dress I had sent to the cleaner's had not come. I rushed to the cleaner's only to find the door locked and my dress in a glass case in the window, ready for delivery!

I tried the side door. It, too, was locked, but near it was a window, and with a little effort I opened it and was just crawling in when somebody seized my foot and pulled me back, calling for help as he did it.

People gathered and I couldn't make any one listen to my explanation. A policeman came and I told him the cress was mine and I wanted it and nothing else, so he had the proprietor of the store called up. He came, recognized me, and with many apologies for not delivering the dress, went in and got it out of the case for me, just as a patrol wagon came clanging down the street.

Hardly the Place.

I was attending a midweek evangelistic service in my home town. I am a high school student and an admirer of my English teacher for her ability as an instructor and for her talent in playing the cello and singing well. This particular meeting she played and sang a solo which completely enraptured me.

As she finished I expressed my appreciation by clapping my hands, much to the surprise of myself and the consternation of others at the service.

"PHILLIPS" MILK OF MAGNESIA

Ends Stubborn Coughs in a Hurry

For real effectiveness, this old home-made remedy has no equal. Easily and cheaply prepared.

You'll never know how quickly a bad cough can be conquered, until you try this famous home-made remedy. The prompt relief is almost magical. It is easily prepared, and there is nothing better for coughs.

Into a pint bottle, put 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. Or use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it saves about two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, and gives you a more positive, effective remedy. It keeps perfectly, and tastes pleasant—children like it.

You can feel this take hold instantly, soothing and healing the membranes in all the air passages. It promptly loosens a dry, tight cough, and soon you will notice the phlegm thin out and disappear. A day's use will usually break up an ordinary throat or chest cold, and it is also splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness, and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, the most reliable remedy for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Look for the Simmons Label!

Eliminate side-sway and sagging

Simmons patented stabilizers, acting like automobile shock absorbers, prevent side-sway and sag. An exclusive feature.

Spring-tied for luxurious comfort

The Simmons Ace

Why pay more? The Ace is the best open-box spring built at any price

Over at your furniture merchant's there is a double-deck bedspring you want to see. It is The Simmons Ace. Spare time to drop in and look it over. Compare its design and comfort with any other spring in the store, regardless of price.

Press down one of the 99 deep main spirals. Notice how sensitive and responsive it is! And the neighboring spirals—they aren't pulled out of place. Each carries its own load.

The reason is plain. The big main coils are joined both at centers and tops by 302 smaller, lively springs. Other makes are spring-tied at the top, but stiff unyielding wires bind the centers, hindering free action

Lift The Ace and sense the weight of its stout angle steel frame. Two exclusive Simmons stabilizers, patented, prevent side-sway or spreading. An extra-heavy top border wire makes sagging edges impossible.

Such restful luxury would be cheap at almost any price. But it costs no more than springs not so well made.

Ace value is typical of Simmons springs in all types for every purse—box, coil and fabric. Built by the world's largest bedding maker, each is the best produced at its price. Find the Simmons label before you buy. Write for "Restful Bedrooms" to The Simmons Company, 666 Lake Shore Drive, Chicago.

A FRIEND IN NEED

By Sally Joy Brown.

I want to be the medium through which the friend in deed and the friend in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give if it you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail, a stamped, addressed envelop should accompany the request. Please do not send articles to The Tribune but write for the address of the applicant and send direct

SUNSHINE FOR LITTLE ONES.

"Dear Sally Joy Brown: I wonder if you will help to bring some sunshine into the lives of little children, patients at the sanitarium here? I myself am a patient here, and as I am up and about I help the children in their play. They, of course, cannot play the games and do the things well children do. But the thing they love to do most is dress up and play they are great actresses. We have about twelve girls and four boys, 8 to 14 years of age.

"Do you think some kind person has stored away old clothes or old costumes to give to these children? I cannot tell you the joy it would give them. Also discarded story books would be a pleasure to them.

"M. S."

Think what a simple need this is, and how much good we can do, almost without an effort! Cheerfulness is half the battle when it comes to regaining health—and how can we give happiness more easily than by letting these little ones play "dress up" with garments that we have put aside?

And this is just one small sample of the good we can do by making such gifts. These children want to play "dress up," and we can put them a long way on the road to health by helping them do so. But there are scores and hundreds of other children we can help just as easily by giving dolls, books, games, and toys that our own children no longer want. Some of them are invalids; others simply never have learned what it is to play, because their parents are too poor to provide more than the bare necessities of life.

Think what your own children's lives would be if they never played, had no toys or games—think what it will mean to all these others to have such a wonderland of happiness opened to them—and let me know what you can give!

Book Is Out of Print.

"I have tried for several years to get a copy of a book called 'Strenuous Life Spiritual,' by Vander Naillen. It is out of print, and my quest in second hand bookstores has been unsuccessful. I should be happy to find a copy of the book, and wonder if by chance one of your many readers has it stuck away in some corner unused.

"J. W."

If you have a copy of this book, and just wish to lend it to J. W., we are sure she will be appreciative of your kindness.

Text Books to Give.

"I wish to offer some books to those who are interested. I have to give a beginner's music book, some high school text books, a text book of trigonometry, and some good fiction magazines. J. F."

Do you want to study music, high school subjects, or trigonometry, or do you prefer to read some good stories? We shall be glad to hear from you if your interests are awakened by this offer.

Hunting a Poem.

"I have been unable to find a copy of Wilbur D. Nesbit's poem, entitled 'I Used To Know Yer Ma.' and would greatly appreciate it if you could tell me where to find a copy, or if some one had a copy no longer needed.

"F. B."

Are you in possession of the desired information? The poem is to be used in an entertainment, and our correspondent is anxious to find it.

Ex-Soldier Asks Help.

"I wonder if you could obtain a typewriter for an ex-service man, who is still in the hospital. He has no one to help him fit himself for such work as he will be able to do when he leaves the hospital. F. K. C."

This appeal comes from a fine young American in the recent war.

Lost His Bicycle.

"There has been real trouble in one home during the last year, for the mother has been ill in a state institution and the family scattered. She is at home again, and Joe, her 16 year old son, has been working steadily and earned enough extra to purchase a bicycle. Some time ago it was stolen and Joe is heartbroken, for he found more pleasure in his wheel than anything else, and cannot afford to buy a new one. Can some one give him a bicycle? J. P. S."

I am sorry Joe's wheel was stolen; aren't you? And I am waiting and wishing for some kindhearted person to send word of another bicycle, no longer in use, that he may have.

For an Ex-Soldier.

"Some time ago I saw in your column an offer of an auto-knitting machine, and have thought perhaps you could use a similar offer. I have such a machine that I will give gladly to some ex-soldier. It is a fine one and in excellent condition. A. P."

This splendid offer is open to you only if you are an ex-soldier, but if you are and need the financial help that it will afford you we hope that you will not hesitate to write in to us.

Request for Clothing.

"I am a patient in a sanitarium, and am without funds. My clothes are worn and I look shabby. When the weather is a little better, I shall be permitted to go out on the grounds. I wonder if any of your readers have discarded clothing which they would care to pass on to me? I wear suit size 38, shirts, 15, collars, 15½, socks size 10, and shoes 7. I should appreciate the kindness. P. D."

I shall be glad to furnish the address of this man, if you are able to furnish some of the clothing he needs so badly.

Needs Sewing Machine.

"I wish to ask a sewing machine for a friend of mine who has been having a hard struggle to get along. Her 16 year old son is the only support, and there are three other children to keep. If the mother had a sewing machine she could sew and help to support the family without leaving her home and the younger children. I hope some one has a discarded machine, still usable, to pass on to her. "MRS. A."

Has some one a sewing machine to donate to this widow mother?

LINEN LUNCHEON SET.

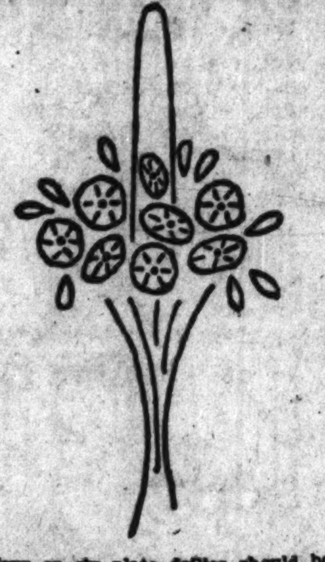
OFTEN one wishes to make a birthday gift or some other that will show thought and care. If made instead of being bought, the cost will not be great. The luncheon set shown today is given with that end in view. Then, too, it may be exactly what you may wish to make for yourself.

Choose one of the art linens, in the natural color or pure white, and in cutting allow for a 1¼ inch wide hem all around. Finished, the center piece measures 18x18 inches; and the doilies for the plates 10x18 inches in size. The hems measure the same as on the center piece. A black thread of mercerized cotton floss is drawn through the same way as in making handkerchiefs, after the pieces have been cut. For an inch and a quarter wide hem the thread would be drawn 2¾ inches in from the edge. This will allow for the first turning of the hem; and the hemming is done by hand.



Four or six plate doilies should be made, and all the pieces should have threads drawn to cut by.

The picture shows where the baskets of flowers should be placed—one set diagonally to each corner of the centerpiece, and one at each upper corner of the plate doilies. The baskets are worked in a fine over and over stitch—stitches taken as small as possible—and the centers are done in French knots. Naturally one can use any combination of colors desired; but the colors used in this particular set were, yellow for the French knots, green for the leaves, orchid, rose, blue, and yellow, for the flowers, black for the basket.

Answers to Sewing Queries.

Mrs. A. K. B.: The right hem for table linen is called a French hem. It is folded the same way as any other hem, and then the cloth is creased exactly where the bottom fold of the hem comes and turned back so it is even with the hem. Then the two folded edges are overhanded together, and care must be used to take in only the edge of the hem and one thread of the material. The between needles—No. 9 or 10—and correspondingly fine thread are best. The hem flattens out perfectly and the sewing is invisible after one or two launderings.

Gentlemen:

In reply to your inquiry of recent date I wish to state that before deciding on Universal Gas Ranges for the exclusive apartments being now completed at 3520 and 3530 Sheridan Road, we thoroughly canvassed the stove field.

I find that the beauty and utility of your range leaves nothing to be desired by the tenants who have seen same, and their favorable expressions as to the attractive appearance of the stove, its effectiveness and cleanliness have convinced me that we have made no mistake in placing the order for your stove.

I also wish to comment on the service you have rendered us as being most satisfactory.

Very truly yours,

FRENCH WOMEN CHARM 'EM by Doris Blake

Perhaps the Keynote of Their Success Is that They're More Interested in Pleasing Men Than in Having the Latter Please Them.

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—The charm of French women is proverbial the world over. Any French woman, we are led to believe, is capable of charming the crustiness out of the crustiest of old bachelors.

The art of winning a man is known to perfection in France, perhaps because the economic independence of the woman to date has not made marriage a secondary interest with her. Marriage is still the most popular vocation for women here. And to attain it, the business of winning a man is strictly the young woman's business, whether marriage is arranged by practical parents or by the less practical but more romantic D. Cupid.

Said a Frenchman to me, a much traveled and observant man of letters: "French women are not the most beautiful women in the world. American and English women generally have far better complexions, better hair, and are better built. But the French woman knows how to please a man. No other woman can do it half so well."

As an afterthought he added: "She is much more interested in pleasing a man than in having him please her. Your American girl is out to be pleased first, last, and eternally. The French girl knows men."

Content to Be Women.

What is it the French woman knows? What are these charms her countryman believes so superior? Why in Paris, this beautiful capital of the world, is it the feminine grace of the city that is so eulogized?

One of the reasons why French women are so successful in society is that they are content to be women. They glory in it. They are not ashamed to admit that their chief interest in life is in pleasing men. English and American women, on the contrary, seem to feel an interest in men is something to hide.

Ralph Nevill, an English writer, says in one of his books that the fascinating personality of the Parisienne is absolutely unique, and goes on to contrast her system of life with that of the English and American women he has met.

"A peculiar and characteristic feature of Paris is the smile generally seen on the faces of the women," he says. "The Parisienne is sure of herself, and if she is looking nice she is at peace with the world.

"The Englishwoman, on the contrary, in spite of her boasted independence, is always afraid she may be doing the wrong thing. Consequently, if an admiring male happens to look in her direction, his gaze is usually met by a defiant scowl.

"The Parisienne regards male admiration as a just tribute to her charms, and frankly admits she likes it. She does not see the fun of dressing up to please men, and then getting annoyed when her object has been attained. She is not shackled by the rusty chains of middle class prejudices and ideas which so unconsciously impair her English sister's attractions."

Rules with Silken Rein.

Frenchwomen, he goes on to say, may lack sincerity, a commendable attribute of English and American women, but they make up for it in charm, which seems to be more powerful.

"The charming self-possession of the Parisienne is one of the causes of her power in Paris, where alone among the great cities of the world woman really rules," Mr. Nevill says.

Her self-possession seems to come, I have observed, from the satisfaction she takes in being a woman. And what is her idea of being a woman, a true helpmate for the man? Is it to be a clinging vine? Not at all. Your French woman does not in the least sacrifice her own ideas. She makes her ideas respected.

"French girls are not so bossy as American ones," said a young American friend of mine who lives here in Paris, and who has fallen in love with an attractive French girl. "Jeanne, you know, is brilliant. She has an awfully good mind, and I don't mind telling you I would consult her before I took any step of a serious nature in connection with my business. She understands. But do you think she would ever order me to do anything? No. She is too charming and too polite. She knows she can get anything she wants from me, but she plays the game. She doesn't take advantage of my weakness for her. American girls, before and after they are married, take delight in ordering their men about, publicly, just to show what they can do with them. The man gets tired of it."

Unafraid to Face Facts.

Frenchwomen, as some one has observed, are realists. They know life as their American and English sisters do not. And they have developed a philosophy which makes it easier for them to forgive little lapses which occur in married life. The recipe given me by a happily married woman, here in Paris, neatly sums up this philosophy:

"We women have learned that in order to be happily married there's no use wasting time trying to understand 'him.' It is better to keep your eyes shut and your arms open to 'him.'"

French women are emotional, romantic, and affectionate, qualities which a man desires if they are balanced by feminine intuition, which teaches the right moment for bringing them into play.

They are shrewd, too—clever at the game which seems to them the most important in the world, and which they are not ashamed to play openly. The eternal conflict between the sexes possesses eternal interest and amusement for them, and because they can take it with humor, they suffer less in the battle than do their more serious sisters.

The American Way.

Two married people of my acquaintance in America recently had a quarrel that precipitated several other quarrels until they just about decided incompatibility was their married lot ahead—all over a frivolous, but exquisite bit of negligee—an absurd, but at the time, tragic story which never would have happened in a French family.

It seemed that Bill had a passionate longing to see his ultra-practical wife in a frilly, pink silk, lacey negligee. All women liked such things, he thought, so he saved his money and bought a dream of a dressing gown for her Christmas present. It was a lovely thing. With great pride the poor fellow presented it to his wife. She looked it over, asked him how much he had spent on it, and proceeded to lay him out properly for his extravagance when she needed more practical things. She did not wear it. Instead, she returned it a few days later, bought a corduroy velvet robe of practical cut and hue, and was sore when he did not eulogize her for her thrift and her hard headed sense. He did not like the heavy corduroy robe, and told her so. The arguments arose, and more were added thereupon.

And the French Way.

Your French wife would have resented the extravagance, too, perhaps been secretly horrified at the waste of money, but she would have been too politic to say so at the time. She would have accepted the present joyfully, put it on, primped prettily before the mirror, and delighted her Bill with the pleasures he had given her. Later she would have tactfully pointed out to him that they really could not afford such delightful luxuries as lacey pink breakfast robes. And she would have thriftily made up the difference in some way.

Perhaps it is her tact and sympathy that make the French woman so attractive to men. Perhaps it is kindness of heart and the real desire to please their men. You see the charm worked by quite plain women, so it cannot be a matter of pulchritude. Certainly they have some qualities worth studying by those who are ready to admit their desire to have a man, and to hold him.

ANSWERS TO LOVE PROBLEMS

Have you a perplexing love affair on which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Tribune, Chicago. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped, addressed envelop.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

Wants Her Own Way.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young girl, 17, and go with a fellow of the same age. I have known him ever since I was 10 years old. Lately he does not act the same. Will you please tell me how I can regain his affection, as I love this fellow very much? And I know he loves me. Can it be that I want my way most of the time?

"KID."

It is a selfish trait to want your own way all the time, don't you think? Of course, he will grow tired of giving in to you, and if you wish to make friends and hold them you must learn to give and take, dear. He will find some one else who shows more consideration for him, and then you will lose him for a friend, and you will have no one to blame but yourself. Try to overcome this fault or you will soon find yourself without any friends.

Flattery Sure to Help.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl 19, and am in love with a fellow about seven years my senior. This young man has never paid any particular attention to me, but has taken me home in his car several times. He has never asked me out with him, but I feel as though he thinks a whole lot of me. We often hold long conversations. What am I to do to show him how much I care for him? MAC."

I shouldn't make a special effort to impress him, dear. Continue to be friendly and conduct yourself just as you have been in the habit of doing. It is for your natural, friendly manner that he likes you and enjoys conversing with you, Mac. Of course, a few dashes of flattery mixed into the conversation will do much to make him think highly of you. It is one of the surest ways in which to impress a man.

Really Not a Flirt.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a good looking young girl, full of fun and bubbling over with the joy of living. But because I am so jolly the boys of our crowd misunderstand me. They say I am just a little flirt. This hurts me, although I do not let them see it. Do you think it is wrong of me to accept the invitations of more than one young man? There are two young men in our crowd who seem to care for me. One is good looking, but is afraid to fight for his own rights and lets the boys say almost anything to him, which makes me angry. The other is just the opposite, but he is not quite as good looking. I can't keep going with both of them or I will begin to believe I am just a little flirt.

"BLUE EYED BUDDIE."

You should try to avoid giving the impression that you are a flirt, dear. We all like the girl who is jolly and full of fun, but there are times when we expect her to show there is a more serious side to her nature as well. Good looks could hardly make up for lack of character in a young man, dear. I think the one who can stand up for his own rights would be much preferable for a friend. Your going out with two boys at the same time would not classify you as a flirt.

SUDDENLY MY HEEL CAUGHT IN THE SIDEWALK AND I STUMBLED HEADLONG INTO ONE OF THE TWO YOUNG MEN WHO WERE APPROACHING—

FEELING MORE SILLY AS HE HELPED ME GAIN MY BALANCE, I GIGGLED AND BLURTED OUT—"SAY, I ALMOST FELL FOR YOU, DIDN'T I?"

WITH PERFECT FAITH.

BEFORE the morrow, when you will claim me as your own, I feel I must write again, and for the last time as your sweetheart.

I never dreamed of such happiness and contentment as I have found since that golden night, when in the haven of your arms I promised to trust my future life to you. It is almost too wonderful to put into words, but even now, thinking of it, I can feel your heart beat as you held me to you, and the gentle pressure of your lips as you drew my soul unto you.

Life seems so beautiful now, dear, and I know that the beauty of it will grow as will our love, if we forget ourselves for each other. It will be with perfect faith that I go to you. And now I can write no more. After tonight I can call you by the one word that will make you all mine.

Good night, dear. Always know that I love you. MARGARET.

WOMEN THE WORLD OVER

The vision of the average woman is considered to be keener than that of the average man.

Designs that come to her in dreams are worked out in fretwork by Miss Lettice Apperly of London.

For every four women in New York state one is engaged in work for which she receives wages.

Many smart women in London have banned cosmetics and now wear tinted pearls to match their complexion.

Members of the Federation of Women's clubs in Whitewater, Wis., now issue a weekly newspaper devoted to their interests.

Delaware is the only state in the Union that has not passed legislation granting women the privilege to apply for admission to the bar.

Both branches of the United States congress has passed a resolution authorizing the acceptance from Mrs. Elizabeth S. Coolidge of Pittsfield, Mass., of a gift of $50,000 for the construction in the Congressional library of an auditorium for chamber music.

Civic organizations and women's clubs in San Francisco have started a campaign against the activities of young women designated as "vamps."

Though she is only 14 years of age, Miss Lucille De Long of San Diego, Cal., holds the women's golf course record at Springfield, Ill., with a score of 83.

At the age of 16 or 17 years the Eskimo girl has reached maturity and prepares for herself her first long hooded coat, a sign to her affianced sweetheart that she is ready for marriage.

In recognition of her untiring efforts in maintaining Dutch traditions and spirit among Dutch colonists in Albany, N. Y., Mrs. William G. Price of that city has been decorated with the Cross of the Order of Orange-Nassau by the queen of Netherlands.

Thirty girl students have graduated from a "school of banking" established in Peking, China, two years ago, and will be appointed to posts as clerks in the Peking Woman's Commercial and Savings bank.

The appointment of Mrs. Marie W. Goodwin of Lake Providence, La., as cotton statistician for the United States census bureau, gives her the honor of being the first woman in the country to be assigned to such a position.

Miss Mary Anderson, chief of the woman's bureau of the department of labor, has a staff of thirty assistants who aid her in looking out for the interests of some 8,000,000 working women.

Miss Katherine Lenroot, daughter of Senator Lenroot of Wisconsin, recently attended the child welfare conference held in Buenos Aires as a representative of the United States government.

Miss Dorothy Mondell, daughter of former Congressman Mondell of Wyoming, has taken up a journalistic career, having recently become society editor of one of the leading daily newspapers in the capital.

NEW ENGLAND IN CHARACTER.

It has been said that a man's home is an indication of his character. How true this is can be seen in the development of the style of architecture shown in the New England homesteads. As the old Puritan settlers were plain and honest, with simple tastes in all things, so their homes were of simple, sturdy construction, radiating, withal, a true feeling of hearty welcome to friend and stranger alike.

To the women, however, should go the greater credit for softening these somewhat plain houses, giving to them the spirit of home that has qualified this type of house to stand the test of time, making it as popular today as it was a century ago.

Architect Carl Tillman of Auburn, N. Y., has modernized the design of one of these old homesteads, without detracting a single element from its host of good features. The exterior walls are of cement stucco, gray white, with a slight buff cast. In contrast, the shutters, front door, and gable louvers are painted dark green, with the balance of the woodwork of a lighter shade of gray-green. Variegated green shingles are specified for the roof. The foundation is, of course, of modern concrete construction, but to carry out the appearance of the old brick foundations a facing of common red bricks is used above ground. The chimney is also capped with a row of this same material.

Entering through the green front door, with its decorative old brass knocker, one finds a narrow hall, with a long, easy stairway to the second floor. A handy closet for wraps is located at the foot of the stairs in the space between the entry and the outer wall. To the right is an opening into the living room, while a single door in the back shuts off the kitchen and the rear entrance.

Plenty of windows for sunshine and air lend a cheerful atmosphere to the large living room. There is a real, old fashioned fireplace, built for logs or coal, to carry out the spirit of the homestead. Open bookshelves have been built in on either side of the entrance to this room.

Located directly behind the living room is the dining room. Four large windows extend across its entire width, making it one of the lightest and most cheerful rooms in the house. To the right of the dining room is the room which in the old days was the spare bedroom, the pride of every good housewife. Since the modern woman has dictated that all sleeping quarters be placed upstairs, the architect has converted this room into an enclosed porch or sun room. Being connected to both the living and dining rooms by French doors, it may be utilized as a breakfast room, a delightful place to serve afternoon tea, or a pleasant spot in which to relax in the evenings.

The second floor is divided into three large bedrooms and a bathroom, all of which open off the stair hall. Each bedroom is provided with good closet space, while another closet for linens is found in the hall. A second flight of stairs leads from this hall to the attic. As it is floored, and lighted by windows at each end, it makes an ideal place for children to play during the winter.

The architect has specified that the basement be excavated under the entire house. By this arrangement there is plenty of room for heating plant and coal bins, and ample space for a laundry and fruit room. While it is practical for a house of this size to be heated with warm air in mild climates, it is advised that hot water or steam be used if the house be built in colder regions, and that the heater room walls be plastered on metal lath, as a precaution against fire.

This house has been designed for a lot at least forty feet wide, and should be placed about twenty-five feet from the front line.

The addition of climbing roses over the front entrance, bright colored flowers in the flower boxes, and a well kept hedge along the front completes this charming home.

VARIED ACTIVITIES OF WOMEN

Miss Sybil Overton, known as the prettiest woman physician in England, is the first woman to be appointed medical inspector of factories.

Miss Jessie Beach, scientific aid in the division of paleontology of the United States National museum in Washington, is probably the only woman skilled in the infinitely difficult and exact process of preserving fossilized remains of the life of bygone epochs as they are found in rocks taken from deeply bedded strata.

A Russian noblewoman, who once had as many as forty servants employed in her household, is now earning $12 a week as a seamstress in Paris.

Philadelphia's first woman magistrate, Mrs. Violet E. Fahenstock, is married, having one daughter. She is also one of the most active members of the W. C. T. U. and radically opposed to liquor.

In Hungary when a girl is unmarried at the age of 23 she automatically becomes an "old maid" to her friends and to the community at large. The usual marrying age for girls in that country is 16.

The credit for discovering the lost city of Mallia, in Crete, which flourished some 4,000 years ago, is given to Mlle. Marthe Oulie, a 23 year old French girl, who made her investigations alone.

Miss Phoebe J. Fairgrave of St. Paul, who already holds the woman's parachute jumping record, will attempt to break her record of 11,500 feet some time during the spring.

During the fifteen years she has been in service at the Royal Free hospital in London, Dr. Ann Gillette has administered anesthetics in from 25,000 to 30,000 cases, which is probably a world's record.

Miss Gertrude Fitz, dietitian of the school for attending nurses of the Household Nursing Association of New York, has started a cooking course designed especially for engaged girls and young brides.

The membership of the newly formed Soroptimist club for professional and business women of England is made up of one representative from each profession followed by women. The present membership numbers more than 150.

Two California girls, Florence and Martha Stanka, are the directing heads of a $200,000 candy concern which has been built up by them from a total capital of $101, which they had when they started in business. Today the trade of the concern extends from coast to coast.

Indian Mohammedan women have an earnest champion in Mme. Soogra Umajon Humayon-Mirza, who is the foremost leader of the movement for the freedom of her sex.

About one-third of the seventy-five women who have been ordained as ministers in the Congregational church of the United States are in sole charge of the churches.

More than one-third of the 500,000 employés of federal, state, and local governments are women. In Washington alone they fill half of the 70,000 federal jobs.

Dr. Mary M. Patrick, after having been a teacher in Constantinople for fifty-three years, has resigned and returned to this country to spend her remaining days.

Bad Breath

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets Get at the Cause and Remove It

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, act gently on the bowels and positively do the work.

People afflicted with bad breath find quick relief through Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The pleasant, sugar-coated tablets are taken for bad breath by all who know them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act gently but firmly on the bowels and liver, stimulating them to natural action, clearing the blood and gently purifying the entire system. They do that which dangerous calomel does without any of the bad after effects.

All the benefits of nasty, sickening, griping cathartics are derived from Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets without griping, pain or any disagreeable effects.

Dr. F. M. Edwards discovered the formula after seventeen years of practice among patients afflicted with bowel and liver complaint, with the attendant bad breath.

Olive Tablets are purely a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color. Take one or two every night for a week and note the effect. 15c and 30c.

Sinclair Lewis' "Arrowsmith"

By H. L. Mencken.

I.

"MR. ALMUS PICKERBAUGH was forty-eight. He was a graduate of Mugford college and the Wassau Medical college. He looked somewhat like President Roosevelt, with the same squareness and the same bristly mustache, and he cultivated the resemblance. He was a man who never merely talked; he either bubbled or made orations."

SINCLAIR LEWIS

In this modest manner there enters upon page 194 of "Arrowsmith," the man who, if not its hero, is certainly destined to be its most popular and eminent character. Why do the other American novelists always wait for Lewis to show them the way? Main street lay before them for years, its outlines as plain as those of the capitol at Washington, and yet they all passed it over to snout in obscure byways, and left it to him. At one stroke he fixed it upon his canvas, and now its name is as familiar as that of New England, and the connotations of that name are as universally understood. So with Babbitt. A million Babbitts swarmed in our cities. No American, however aloof and reserved, could avoid encountering them every day. They dominated the American scene. Their puerile blather was the national philosophy. And yet it remained for Lewis to haul George F. out of the herd, and elevate him to the bench of immortals, along with Don Quixote and Sherlock Holmes.

Has he done the trick again with Pickerbaugh? I suspect he has. If the name of Pickerbaugh fails to go into the common speech, then it will be only because the people of the nation are not yet sufficiently aware of the man himself. But soon or late they must apprehend him and take him to their bosoms, for he is alive and growing, and there will be no getting rid of him. He is, in brief, the high hero of the latest and damnedest of the uplifts, the paladin of good health. He is the health officer who flings himself upon service with a whoop and a song—half Kiwanian and half Y. M. C. A. secretary. He is the noble fellow who Saves Babies, operates Tuberculosis Drives, goes about discovering Fire Traps, sweats and struggles for Pure Milk, performs prodigies against measles, chicken pox, typhoid, and whooping cough—and all the while feathers a soft nest for himself. He is Medicine Doctor turned uplifter, forward looker, right thinker, jobholder. He is the archetype of the kept idealist, his eyes upon the stars, his hooves in the public trough.

Lewis presents a loving and beautiful portrait of him, warts and all—Pickerbaugh haranguing Rotary, managing health week, stirring up the pasoors, bombarding the booboisie with hygienic poetry, filling the newspapers with black headlines, running for congress, turning a wet and longing eye upon the cabinet. Will he end in that austere and illustrious company, along with Kellogg, Weeks, J. J. Davis of the Moose, and the shade of Feather Duster Hughes, free to speak to Dr.

THE GREAT DIVIDE.
THE LADY.
THE WIFE OF THE CENTAUR.
MISS BLUEBEARD.
CHARLEY'S AUNT.
SACRIFICE.

IDLE TONGUES.

By Mae Tinee.

GOOD MORNING!

February was short but proved reasonably sweet in the matter of furnishing enjoyable film entertainment—don't you think?

"SO THIS IS MARRIAGE" was a rather unusual screen essay on married life. It held up the every-first-of-the-month Battle of Bills as the high and most disturbing hurdle in most matrimonial ventures, and said its little say and pointed its little moral in a cheery, interesting, and whimsical fashion. Its he-vamp sauntered harmlessly through the production, stirring up a little dust in his wake; but when the dust had cleared away the Marsh household was still intact and you felt that it would remain so—though reasonably sure that each month's Battle of Bills would be—a battle. One, however, that the contestants would come safely through to discuss and forget amicably until the next time. Miss Boardman, Conrad Nagel—and Lew Cody as the Bachelor Menace all did good work.

ELEANOR BOARDMAN
In the leading feminine role of "So This Is Marriage."

"MISS BLUEBEARD," adapted from the play, featured Bebe Daniels. That inimitable little comedian, Raymond Griffith, however, ran away with the piece. Charles Chaplin never made his optiences any happier than does this dapper chap who has the greatest sense of comedy I have ever seen.

"BARRIERS BURNED AWAY" was made from the old time novel of E. P. Roe and was of especial interest to Chicagoans because of its thrillingly graphic presentation of the Chicago fire and the events that led up to it. History and fiction were interestingly woven together, and under intelligent direction the picture unrolled into quite a fascinating film product.

"CHARLEY'S AUNT" made 'em howl. The old stage farce by Brandon Thomas formed the basis of the photoplay and with Syd Chaplin as that rowdy and reprehensible old lady—who wasn't any lady in any sense of the word, it kept 'em shouting and sent them away chuckling.

"COMING THROUGH" was Thomas Meighan's new picture. It was interesting, clean, and nicely staged, and Mr. Meighan proved once again that a fellow doesn't have to be a sheik to bring the shekels into the box office.

"SACRIFICE" was a pageant of the Crusades—a Ger-

Good Season for the Tune Bearers

By Edward Moore.

FINDING an occasional hiatus in the succession of concerts and recitals lately, this department was tempted to hear some music of another classification, and yielded. It was a surprise and a pleasure to find that just at present light opera is staging considerable of a comeback.

SERGEI RACHMANINOFF.
Only recital this afternoon at the Auditorium.
[(C.) Kubey-Rembrandt Photo.]

Light operas or musical comedies—the demarking line is faint—they are all making an earnest plea that music should be joyous, inspiriting entertainment, that it should never be dreary, and that its most doleful function, that of self-conscious, improving uplift, should not be a public one. Five, all definitely outside the revue persuasion, are saying it with melody at the present time—"Rose-Marie," "The Student Prince," "The Dream Girl," "Blossom Time," which is the oldest, and "No, No, Nanette," which in some respects is the best.

"Blossom Time," as thousands know by this time, is constructed on what purports to be some of the cheery tunes that Schubert turned out by the hundred during his short life. I once heard it in its original form, when it was played in German and called "Dreimaederlhaus," and I have always thought it was a better show then, at least in its music, for then it was what it purported to be, and its authors had not been concerned with manhandling poor Schubert's music to make a sentimental waltz holiday. Still, there is quite a bit of the original left, and it seems to be quite reasonably popular without rewriting.

Something to Remember

It has been so many years since operetta was an important factor hereabouts that the problem of finding the right singers would seem to be somewhat difficult. Apparently a new crowd will have to be trained, voices and personalities selected, and taught stage wisdom. It can be done, and the most successful example of its doing is the male chorus of "The Student Prince." Here is the largest band of its kind I ever saw in a light opera, about forty, and while an acquaintance grew wrathfully eloquent the other night over the difference between their demeanor and that of the real Heidelberg students they were trying to portray, they can certainly sing. What they do with "Gaudeamus Igitur" is something to remember. It is enough to make any male chorus, at least any in this neighborhood, watch its step. As for American college glee clubs, they are left simply nowhere.

This would seem to be the appointed time for those with good tunes under their hats to give them public expression. I have heard more good waltzes recently than had appeared in the ten years before. It was, of course, the desire to construct a waltz which caused the greatest maltreatment of Schubert's music in "Blossom Time," for real waltzes began to develop after his time. The other shows have them in quantities.

Strangely enough, there is not much of an apparent

MISS HOYT'S JUDITH IS CHASTE AND COLD

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Julia Hoyt, the handsome society amateur who wrote a piece for Liberty magazine a few weeks back, in which she gave sage advice and innumerable tips to young folks about acting and the stage, discovered last week it is a lot easier to write about acting than it is to do it.

Miss Hoyt, co-featured with McKay Morris in a play called "The Virgin of Bethulia," was helpful to the play as a picture. But whenever she tried to do anything convincing with the exacting rôle of the heroine, she frightened the drama right out of the theater.

JULIA HOYT,
[Underwood & Underwood Photo.]

This "Virgin of Bethulia" originally was Henri Bernstein's "Judith." Gladys Unger has made the adaptation and it was tried, I believe, in Indianapolis last summer, and with some success.

It is a showy thing. Judith, chaste and cold, hears the news of Holofernes' advance with his army of barbarians, and seeks some way to save her village and her people. Though she has been of a frigid and retiring disposition at home, offering no competition in the marriage mart, and having no difficulty at all in holding off her suitors, largely because there were but few, Judith carries the common feminine beliefs that once she is content to forget her more sacred beliefs, she can stand the world of men upside down.

Her supreme sacrifice, then, shall be to go personally and unprotected to the camp of this Holofernes, and if the worst come to the worst, as she suspects it may, remain there indefinitely as the price of Bethulia's salvation.

Thus Is Bethulia Saved.

And so it happens. Holofernes, dark brown and handsome, as Morris plays him, is not immediately intrigued by the pleading Judith, but she at least represents a new type. And in time he is greatly in love with her. Than live without her in fact, he had rather give his fevered body, and thereupon offers her the sword with which to accomplish the decapitation.

It is the sight of Holofernes, so despairing and so helpless in her cold hands, that arouses Judith and thereafter she is, as you might say, a different woman. Twenty-four hours later, however, she succeeds in summoning the courage and strength to strike, and Bethulia is saved. Which is a little like taking advantage of a gentleman's hospitality. Still, that's the way things happen in history and the drama.

Miss Hoyt, being totally inadequate to the demands of Judith—save in suggesting her natural frigidity—makes me doubt the chances of "The Virgin of Bethulia." It has been staged with a fine eye to color, and the supporting cast includes Ann Davis and Effingham Pinto. Effingham plays the general's masseur, anointing his employer's shanks with perfumed oils, on occasion.

Ibsen's "The Wild Duck" has never been played much, either here or abroad, partly because it has always been

This Thing and That Thing of the Theater

By Frederick Donaghey.

FROM Miss Caroline B. Dentzer comes an earnest little note wherein, after asking that I believe her when she says that she is a layman and not interested in the theater save as a seat-buying devotée, she importunes me to add words to what I have printed in the last fortnight about "The Student-Prince." It seems that on her visit thereto she saw unused seats in the Great Northern, and didn't think that was right. . . .

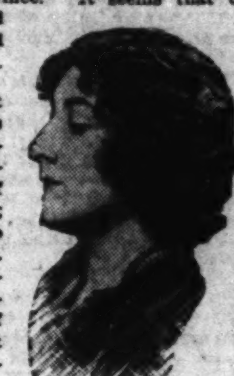
I'm in agreement with her that it wasn't right; and I'm at a loss what to do about it. "The Student-Prince" is my idea of a first-class operetta. It has high merits of "book" and high merits of music; and these have been met in the casting and the mise-en-scène. Casting operetta is the most difficult of nowaday chores in the theater. When the form went out of fashion in the 'Nineties, we quit raising the breed of light singing-actors required. When, a decade later, American casts were needed for "The Merry Widow," "The Waltz-Dream," and "The Chocolate Soldier," we didn't have one. I remember that for a revival of "The Mikado" in 1910, in New-York, the cast of celebrities included Miss Fritzi Scheff, Sam Bernard, and Andrew Mack! Mr. Bernard, after a rehearsal or two, had the sense to discern that Ko-Ko was not for him, and went about his business, although his pay was to have been a thousand dollars a week. The two others, with less acumen, stuck, and were laughed at by the paying populace. . . .



MISS DAGMAR VOLA

However, the theme is "The Student-Prince" and attendance thereon; and I tell you again that it is among the choice entertainments of the era, and urge you to go to it. Gossips who have seen both tell me that, person by person, the Chicago cast is at least as good as the one in New-York, where the operetta is a nightly sell-out in a theater far larger than the Great Northern. . . . And my interest in "The Student-Prince" is even less selfish than Miss Dentzer's; for I don't buy the seats I use.

There's Rage in Keokuk.

Mr. E. Carroll Taber is a literate and indignant writer-in from Keokuk, and intimates in his full-veined letter that he is off me for life—for his life and for mine. His theme is my high laudation of Charlot's Revue as diversion for intelligent persons; and he says, in part:

> "You said that at the opening in Chicago a drunken man who sat behind you pounded you on the head. You merely got in advance what was coming to you; because you afterward reported the show as good. . . . I noticed a recent press-dispatch from a small town in Iowa, the home of the Cherry Sisters, stating that they were about to return to the stage. They must have seen Charlot's Revue, and realized how much better their stuff was!"

And Mr. Taber thoughtfully sends the playbill of the Grand Theater in Keokuk for last Tuesday night, when he was one of a thousand who bought tickets for what was announced

EVERY MODEL IN THE SALE IS A NEW ARRIVAL

An Unusual Opportunity to Purchase at Exceptional Savings Early in the New Season

ANNUAL ADVANCE SPRING SALE

ENSEMBLE SUITS
$35 & $55
Others $65 to $200

Spring has come! And with it, it has brought to Greene's hosts of exquisite new fashions . . . modes that will delight the vanity of every smartly dressed woman . . . and the prices during this advance sale will inspire every clever shopper to select here tomorrow.

For instance, this group of ensemble suits will attract an unusual response. Models that are as charming as they are practical . . . smart coats of Kasha, Twill or Silk, with frocks of the same fabric as the linings, and trimmed with borderings of the coat material. These models represent savings of from $10 to $25. You must see them.

Spring COATS
$25 & $45
Others $50 to $195

It was through some very clever dealings that our coat buyer secured them. Just another example of Greene's aggressiveness in offering exceptional values at a time when women want them. Coats of every conceivable description . . . all the new fabrics . . . some with furs, others without them . . . some with embroidery, others without embroidery. The collection is too vast for description. They must be seen to appreciate their actual worth.

Many are reproductions of higher type importations that sell from $150 to $300

New FROCKS
$15 & $25
Others $29.50 to $150

It is many springs back since we have seen frocks of such delightful elegance. Delicate crepes, chiffons and silks in the intriguing new pastel shades. As you view them you'll find that each model has a distinctive and youthful charm. It is practically an impossibility to duplicate these models anywhere, at anywhere near these prices.

Odds-and-Ends of Stage-News

"The Two Orphans" and "The Charity-Ball" are tentatively mentioned as under consideration for revival in New-York. . . . The last notable revival of the former piece,—an excellent piece in kind it is!—had Miss Grace George, Miss Margaret Illington, Miss Clara Morris, Kyrle Bellew, James O'Neill, and Jameson Lee Finney among its actors. . . . As to "The Charity-Ball," nothing has been done with it in the first-class theaters since its original vogue, thirty-five years ago, when Miss Georgia Cayvan, Herbert Kelcey, Miss Effie Shannon, Fritz Williams, and Nelson Wheatcroft were in it. The play was fashioned by Mr Belasco and Henry C. De Mille, father of the two De Milles who are eminent as directors in the movies.

George S. Kaufman, who made with Miss Edna Ferber the clever dramatization of her "Old Man Minick" current in the Playhouse, has written "The Butter-and-Egg Man." . . . His collaborator on "Beggar on Horseback" and other plays, Marc Connelly, recently announced that he, too, had written a piece without help, "The Wisdom-Tooth."

"'The Green Hat' will go to the Selwyn Theater in Chicago next month: New-York, seemingly, must wait."—Mr. Kaufman in today's New-York Times. . . . Well, Chicago had to wait ever so long for "Expressing Willie"; and just see what happened!

This, too, by Mr. Kaufman in today's New-York Times: "The more indignant the producer, as a rule, the greater the chance that a given statement is correct." . . . Yea Bo! The truth drives the average producer into convulsions.

Henry Miller, so far from carrying out the report from New-York that he quit the stage after the failure there of "The Man in Evening-Clothes," has been trying out a piece named "After Love?" and is now putting together a company for all-Summer activity in California. He is to have Miss Margalo Gillmore with him; and among the plays in which she and he will act together is "The Swan," she having the name-part and he the rôle of the priest, acted so well in Chicago by Halliwell Hobbes. . . . Also, Mr. Miller will try out a comedy of Molnar's, "The High-C," which his son Gilbert has taken for this country.

Miss Peggy Wood, last in Chicago in "The Clinging Vine," is going into the two-a-day, and taking Harold Levey, the composer, along to play piano for her.

John Barrymore is said to have arranged matters so that he will have nine weeks of "Hamlet" in London instead of six. . . . If he be acting there to a profit, or even to enough to meet his overhead, he has something to boast of: London hasn't much money to spend on the theater, and isn't of a mind to spend it on American players.

Maurice V. Samuels has fashioned a play from the Book of Esther.

Report from Baltimore, where "In the South Seas" was made known last week, is that the piece is something like "White Cargo," something like "A Bird of Paradise," and something like "Rain."

Walter Hampden held on for fifty-one performances of "Othello" in New-York, and then called it a record. So far as I know, it is for this great tragedy. . . . Hampden, himself, didn't get much out of the revival; for nobody went to it, after the first week, while the critics steamed up about Baliol Holloway as Iago, and served to Mr. Hampden the old applesauce about being earnest and intelligent. Mr. Halloway was the good Duke de Guise in Hampden's Chicago performances of "Cyrano de Bergerac." . . . And Hampden is on his way to Italy, where, he says, he will get atmosphere for a play he is planning on a basis of Browning's "The Ring and the Book."

"Old Golden Brown" is the name of a piece to be acted by Negroes, headed by the author, Alex Rogers, who used to help write the vehicles for Williams and Walker.

A bulletin from New-York says that Miss Peggy Joyce may return to what she terms acting as the star of a piece named "The Married Mistress," by Samuel Shipman.

In the matter of titles, the New-York authorities are being urged by the procensor phalanx to require the management of a piece named "Hell's Bells" to call it something else. . . . And the district-attorney of that town has been told that, if there's any cleaning-up of plays to be done, he has the coöperation not only of the actor's union, but also of the Drama League and of Channing Pollock, author of "The Fool." Now that he has horned in, the clean-plays crusade is all right—or, maybe all wrong: 'tis hard to say.

Miss Nancy Welford, daughter of Dallas Welford, is to be 'way up in the California cast of "No! No, Nanette!" . . . And Miss Beatrice Bickel, daughter of George Bickel, is now in the New-York cast of "Rose-Marie." . . . And a daughter of David Montgomery, the late partner of Fred Stone, also has a daughter on the stage. . . . And so-on.

"Jonesy," by John Peter Toohey and Miss Anne Morrison from some tales by the former, is in the list of new plays. . . . Tom Patricola and Miss Winnie Lightner are named by George White as retained for the 1925 issue of Scandals; but he says nothing of Lester Allen, who has been in the series since the second issue.

F. D.

HELPS A LOT

GRAHAM VELSEY

He's in "The Show-Off," and makes a definite contribution to the good ensemble in that good comedy by his acting as Frank Hyland, the Fishers' practical son-in-law. . . . Mr. Velsey's Chicago visiting goes back to the far-off day when Louis Mann was performing in a piece named "The White Hen."

To the People of Chicago:

If from the country wide publicity, you expect "VANITIES" to be LEWD, LASCIVIOUS, INDECENT or OBSCENE, you will be disappointed. Reports in connection with my arrest and acquittal in New York may have led to this impression, and I hereby caution those who plan to see "VANITIES" with this expectation, that they are wasting their time. I am bringing "VANITIES" to the SELWYN THEATRE for a limited engagement beginning tomorrow night, with matinees Thursday and Saturday. It is the original production intact from five months in the Earl Carroll Theatres, New York. It is the largest production of its kind ever conceived. It has 108 girls of unusual beauty, 40 impressive scenes and 20 of America's fastest comedians, headed by Joe Cook, who is the funniest entertainer on the stage.

I am confident that this second edition of "VANITIES" will please all those who witnessed last year's production.

BUT if you hope to see something suggestive instead of the innocent beauty of LOVELY GIRLS—PLEASE STAY AWAY.

as Charlot's Revue. He confesses that he had read here that the principals were returning to London at the end of the Chicago engagement, a week ago, and that he took a chance. What he saw, according to the playbill, was part of the program given in the Garrick, and performed in Keokuk by Fred Leslie and the choristers: Mr. Leslie, here and in New-York, was one of the utility-actors. Even Miss Jessie Matthews, the clever youngster who had made good alternately as substitute for Miss Gertrude Lawrence and Miss Beatrice Lillie, was not in Keokuk.

Mr. Charlot's suave and witty travesties and skits had been pretty well shot by the time they were brought to Chicago; but what we had here was just what I said it was—the best of the revues since Mr. Cohan's. . . . So, as Mr. Taber reads THE TRIBUNE, I acquit myself of any blame for the trimming of himself and his 999 townsmen by the Messrs. Selwyn last Tuesday. Charlot's Revue, as known to THE TRIBUNE, ceased to exist as entertainment at 11:00 p. m. of the 28th ultimo.

About a Famous Play.

SIR: Your chatty paragraphs in THE TRIBUNE of today [March 6] concerning the younger Dumas' "Le Demi-Monde" were of uncommon interest to me, and must have been likewise to those of your many readers who remember what you describe as having been the "freak vogue" of the play in this country. Doubtless, your choice of a phrase is correct; but the American performances of the play were stimulating, and had, I think, a livening effect on theatergoers, on criticism of drama in general, and on the course of the art in America. . . . I wonder if you and your readers would be interested in some aspects of "Le Demi-Monde" in this country, now that, as you tell, it is to be brought out again under the title of "Spindrift"?

I ran across the play abroad in 1891, and on my return took it to the only theatrical manager I knew, the famous John Stetson. I was an enthusiastic layman [a bit stage-struck, I now realize!], and eager to get into the business in some way. I was crestfallen when Stetson told me that he had already had arranged to have the play done here by Mrs. Potter and the late Kyrle Bellew. He changed his plans, however, and put it on with other players, casting an excellent actress, Carrie Turner, and a popular leading-man, Joseph Haworth, in the principal parts. Elita Proctor Otis, whose repute until then was as an editor and writer, played the second woman's part—the one, I fancy, which Elizabeth Risdon will have in "Spindrift."

The play was a success as "The Crust of Society." Rival managers, quickly learning that the work was not copyrighted in the United States, rushed versions into performance, and had no trouble to get good actors for the good array of rôles. Indeed, I doubt if there was then a male star or a leading man on the American stage who wouldn't have made a sacrifice for the chance of biting his teeth into the rich, cynical, sophisticated speeches Dumas had written for the character of Olivier, the raisonneur of the comedy. (And in this connection, Sir, I recall that some time ago you pointed out that the part of Cayley Drummle in "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray" was really copied from the character of Olivier in "Le Demi-Monde."

One of the best of the actors I saw in the part was Edgar Davenport. Henry Lee, of whom big things were expected by the critics in those days, acted the rôle in Chicago, in a version called "The Fringe of Society," with Jeffreys Lewis. The last I saw of the famous Lydia Thompson was in the play, acting a minor part.

As you say, dramatists since Dumas have helped themselves to the play, its ideas, and its situations, and have written many a paraphrase of his notable speech, given to Olivier, about the basket of peaches. . . . Did you see John Drew in "The Liars"? Wasn't that Olivier in "Le Demi-Monde" all over again? And even again in "His House in Order"? And there was—but I'm overdoing it: pardon me, please!

ADRIAN G. HOUSTON.

Pardon you, Mr. Houston? Thank you!

New Things in Manhattan.

These are the novelties bulletined for the week in the New-York theaters:

"Puppets," by Miss Frances Lightner, with C. Henry Gordon, Dwight Frye, Miss Miriam Hopkins, and Miss Michelette Burani. . . . This is the play hitherto known as "The Marionet-Man."

"The Handy-Man," by Fred Wall and Ralph Murphy, with Tim Murphy, Miss Margaret Cusack, Charles Abbé, Miss Grace Reals, Eugene Lockhart, and Robert Middlemass. . . . The play has been on tour under the name of "Odd Jobs."

"The Fall Guy," by James Gleason and George Abbott, with Ernest Truex, Miss Beatrice Noyes, and Ralph Sipperly. . . . The play was first acted last Summer in Milwaukee by Mr. Gleason and a weekly-change company he directed there, with Frank Craven in the part to be acted in New-York by Mr. Truex. Mr. Sipperly will have the rôle originated by Mr. Gleason himself. . . . Both authors are actors: Mr. Gleason is in the New-York cast of "Is Zat So?" (of which he is part-author); and Mr. Abbott is in "Processional" there.

"In the Near Future?" by Abraham Goldknopf, a surgeon: the play is said to have what is called "a medical background." The actors are not named in the bulletin furnished to THE TRIBUNE.

Tuesday, Mr. Ziegfeld will offer a revision of the Follies current there—the eighteenth in the series. Matter from J. P. McEvoy's "The Comic Supplement," a costly failure, will be inserted, with W. C. Fields, who was the star for its brief fortnight, as one of the players. Miss Ray Dooley also will be put back by Mr. Ziegfeld; while Miss Ann Pennington, Will Rogers, and Tom Lewis, who have been in the Follies since it was staged last June, are retained. . . . Passing from it is Lupino Lane, a comic tumbler from England who didn't wholly make good, though he cost a lot per week.

"Two by Two," "The Virgin of Bethulia," and "Tangletoes," new plays of a fortnight ago in New-York, were tossed into the alley last night. . . . Miss Jane Cowl says she has a new play to act in: the name is "White Collie."

William Collier has changed the name of his new play from "The Frame-Up," which suggests crook-melodrama, to "Re: Ward," which suggests nothing save a bum title. . . . He is eager to get into New-York with the piece; and there is a chance that he may come into the Cort after "White Cargo," early next month.

A third cast is being formed to give "The Student-Prince" in Philadelphia. . . . Three casts are now engaged in this country in performing "Rose-Marie."

"Patience" was revived in little-theater fashion some weeks ago in New-York, and promptly discovered by the play-critics to be rather good, although the size of the stage whereon it was performed necessitated that Gilbert's twenty lovesick maidens be cut to eleven or twelve. . . . Now there is talk of reviving "Princess Ida; or, Castle Adamant," and a hint that De Wolf Hopper may be rescued from the tank-towns to perform in it—probably, in the rôle of the misshapen king. One of the New-York writers says that, if the revival be put on, theater-goers there will have their first look at the piece. This isn't so: "Princess Ida" was brought out in this country when it was new [it was written just before "The Mikado"], although it was not successful here. Indeed, it was not much of a success in London, although it is kept in the répertoire there to this day: I saw a revival of it in London as recently as 1920. . . . Gilbert undertook a burlesque in verse of Tennyson's "The Princess," didn't make good theater of it, and utilized the idea as libretto of "Princess Ida." What he turned out was a variant of Aristophanes' "Lysistrata," with flings at the vote for women which were topical enough in the 'Eighties. Sullivan's music for the piece is pleasant but commonplace.

COMIC FELLOWS IN THE NEW SHOWS

JOHN CUMBERLAND

JOE COOK

MR. CUMBERLAND is of repute as a specialist in the characters of girl-shy men; and his denotement of comic timidities in scenes of sex has been observed in numerous farces of the last ten years. Chicago theater-goers recall him especially for his behavior in the one named "Parlor, Bedroom, and Bath," wherein he was associated with Miss Florence Moore, Lowell Sherman, and Miss Helen Menken. . . He returned last night in "The Lounge-Lizard," of which, it appears, he is a sort of a co-author after the fact.

Mr. Cook came to Chicago's notice some seasons back in the two-a-day theaters, whence he was taken into the first issue of Earl Carroll's Vanities, shown last Spring in the Colonial. He was then found to be not only amusing, but also about all there was to laugh at in that revue. . . . He will be back tomorrow night in the second issue.

COMING ALONG

MISS JEAN FORD

She is the daughter of Hugh Ford, one of the foremost American stage-directors: he put on "The Garden of Allah," "Merton of the Movies," and countless other well-remembered plays that depended on direction for success. Miss Ford is as yet unknown in Chicago; but she is said to have been successful as the Montague Girl in "Merton of the Movies" after the play was taken from this city. . . . She is to be here in "Ma Pettengill."

New Playbills

What Is Due in the Chicago Theaters as Far Ahead as the Managers Know or Care to Tell About.

OPENED LAST NIGHT:

"The Lounge-Lizard" in the Princess.—An English farce, originally named "Collusion," by J. E. Harold Terry, revised for the American stage by John Cumberland. (This opening was bulletined a week ago for tonight.) . . . Mr. Cumberland, Miss Estelle Winwood, Alan Brooks, Arnold Lucy, Corliss Giles, and Miss Lucy Beaumont are of the cast.

OPENING TOMORROW NIGHT:

Earl Carroll's Vanities [1924] in the Selwyn.—Second issue of this annual: The first was shown last Spring in the Colonial. . . . Joe Cook is again the most important performer.

NEXT SUNDAY NIGHT:

"Hell Bent fer Heaven" in the Playhouse.—A play by Hatcher Hughes that had a New-York run last season, when he was named as the winner of the Pulitzer prize annually given for the "best native drama."

"Moonlight" in the Apollo. — William Le Baron's comedy of "I Love You!" as made into a piece with music; it was shown for a fortnight last season in the La Salle. . . . Miss Julia Sanderson is to head the cast for this engagement.

"Ma Pettengill" in the Blackstone.—A comedy by Owen Davis based on those tales of Red Gap by Harry Leon Wilson that especially concerned the doughty ranchwoman. (This opening was formerly billed for the 23d.) . . . Miss Edna May Oliver is to have the title-part; and with her will be Burr McIntosh, Miss Jean Ford, Edward M. Favor, Miss Emelie Polini, and Elmer Grandin.

William Hodge in "For All of Us" in the Studebaker.—Return of the author-actor in the piece wherein he had a long Chicago run, 1922-'23, in the La Salle and, later, in this house. . . . Frank Losee, Miss Marion Abbott, Frank Burbeck, and J. Warren Lyons are of the company.

APRIL 5:

"The Green Hat" in the Selwyn.—The play made by Michael Arlen on a basis of his novel of like name. . . . Miss Katherine Cornell is expected to head the cast.

IN A SUCCESS

MISS MAUDE CARROLL

She has one of the incidental rôles, Grace Hobart, in the Chicago cast of "Is Zat So?" . . . And that seems to be all that The Tribune knows about the career of Miss Maude Carroll.

numbered with the old Norseman's mystery plays, and partly because it is not an easy play to cast. As far back as 1907 the late Wright Lorimer had a try at it in the west, and four or five years ago Arthur Hopkins, helping along an Ibsen season with Alla Nazimova and Lionel Atwill, revived it in New York.

Therefore, the play came practically as a new work to the Actors' theater subscribers in last week's revival. And surprised as well as delighted many of them. Theatergoers find a curious satisfaction in Ibsen when they find him understandable; a sort of modest self-glorification that convinces them they stand with the mentally alert.

The actors have done fine work in this revival. First of all, they have cast a young girl in the pathetically appealing rôle of Hedwig, the part Nazimova tried to play when she was much too mature for it. And they have taken great pains to clarify, in so far as that is possible, a text that has puzzled the best and most confident of the Ibsen commentators.

"After 'An Enemy of the People,'" Bernard Shaw wrote a long time ago, "Ibsen left the vulgar ideals for dead and set about the exposure of those of the choicer spirits, beginning with the incorrigible idealists who had idealized his very self and were becoming known as Ibsenites. His first move in this direction was such a tragi-comic slaughtering of sham Ibsenism that his astonished victims plaintively declared 'The Wild Duck,' as the play was called, was a satire on his former works."

Evidently the Shaw conclusion has impressed the directors of the play in the present revival. Tom Powers, playing Gregers Werle, the young crusader for "the claim of the ideal," looks as much like a young Ibsen as possible, and his whole performance is a subtle satire upon the intellectual meddler who goes about wrecking the lives of people by destroying their illusions in the name of a greater freedom and a clearer understanding.

Blanche Yurka is the Gina, Warburton Gamble the Hjalmar, Helen Chandler the splendid Hedwig mentioned, Moffat Johnson the elder Werle, and Cecil Yapp the flighty old hunter of the Attic forest. Dudley Digges and Clare Eames did the directing.

Interesting that the Actors' theater should score its two successes this season with "Candida" and "The Wild Duck." Interesting, too, that they get the Ibsen piece sans royalty, the copyright having lapsed. Shaw and Ibsen may not represent exactly the authors you would expect an American actors' enterprise to fall back upon when native plays fail them, but they have been well advised in these instances. Already they have a new standing with the pseudo-intellectuals of the community who do most of the word of mouth advertising in theater circles.

"Skyhigh" from London.

Recent additions to the Broadway drama have not proved especially important. Willie of the team of Howards, who have been featured in many of the recent Winter Garden revues, started the season as a single star in a musical piece from London called "Skyhigh." It did not go so well.

And yet those features familiar to the Howard crowd were approved. When, for example, young Howard had another comedian, Florenz Ames, strapped to a barber's chair and was ramming a lather brush down his throat, the audience was as heartily pleased as is the Canter audience when Eddie is bing treated roughly by an osteopath. And when Willie suggested that women talk so much he thinks they must be vaccinated with phonograph needles they laughed twice.

"Skyhigh" is English at heart and rather sluggish. It was once called "Whirled Into Success," or something like that, and has to do with the romance of a handsome barber who pretends to be a lord, and thus wins the duet privilege with the heroine. Joyce Barbour, a good English actor, who came over with the "Havoc" troupe earlier in the season, is a singing heroine in this piece and does very well. Vanessi is the principal dancer and there is a splendidly trained and elaborately dressed chorus.

Shady Lady Dramas Grow.

Again we study the story of the girl with a troublesome and immoral present. She is the heroine of a play called "The Night Hawk," which has trailed into town in the wake of all the other shady lady dramas that have been worrying the censors.

I'm afraid it will turn out to be a propaganda drama financed by these optimistic Austrian scientists who claim that rejuvenation is not only possible but a proved fact, and that in another ten years there will be no quiet, happy, satisfied, and respectably sedentary middle aged folk anywhere.

Or, at least, that none who has the price of the operation necessary to the recapturing of youth will consider doing without it. And think of what that may do to an already restless and more or less Godless world!

Think of all your second and third cousins and all your great aunts and most of your great uncles taking the rejuvenation cure and suddenly deciding to visit you again. Which they are most likely to do. And think of what it will mean to us in New York if they all come down here and start remaking history along Broadway!

"The Night Hawk" is not much of a play, but it is more serious than sensational and well played by Mary Newcomb and Byron Beasley, she the unfortunate and he the doctor. Miss Newcomb is one of the newer and surer emotionalists. She did excellent work in "The Woman on the Jury."

LOOKS IT AND SINGS IT

MISS JOSEPHINE ADAIR

SHE is in the good cast of "The Student-Prince" in the Great Northern; and she belongs in it. Her part is that of the Princess Margaret; and she takes about everything to it that it asks for and needs, including both the knowledge of how to sing the music and the gift of being able to look like a princess. You could not in reason ask for better casting than in the case of Miss Adair in her part placed in dramatic contrast with Miss Olga Cook as Kathie, the inn-girl of the lovely tale we used to know as "Old Heidelberg." . . . A high spot in these performances is when Miss Adair sings with Mr. Goldsworthy the lovely duet called "Just We Two."

man product with the scenes laid in Jerusalem during the third crusade. Not light entertainment but "a highly intelligent cinema accomplishment of intricate weave" to be viewed with respect. I thought it might be too heavy to be a money maker, but its promoters have told me differently.

"THE GREAT DIVIDE" was recommended especially to romantic ladies. Conway Tearle did the caveman loving and carrying away of the fair, reluctant Alice Terry, and their exciting affair was thrown against a background of marvelous mountain scenery. I was pretty keen about that picture—being a woman.

"FORTY WINKS"—Raymond Griffith again, scampering away with the honors. Viola Dana, Theodore Roberts, Anna May Wong, et cetera, did considerable toward making the film what it was, exciting, funny and absurd. It was well put on.

"THE LADY"—Norma Talmadge giving a great impersonation. As a music hall dancer, common—but nice; a desperate woman deprived of her infant son; a drab, almost imbecile creature of later years and finally a tragic but resigned elderly woman, she did some of the best acting of her career. A picture that catered frankly to melodrama but with considerable heart appeal. Well directed.

"IDLE TONGUES"—Percy Marmont having a sad, sad time! Suffering for the sins of others; bravely enduring contumely and offering his other cheek to be slapped; exonerated and happy at last—he gives a telling performance. The acting in the picture was all good and it had suspense and action enough to keep anybody from going to sleep.

* *

"THE WIFE OF THE CENTAUR" was a fillum from which I got considerable kick. I thought the three principals were so awfully good. Do you remember Miss Boardman's nice girl, Miss Pringle's naughty one, and John Gilbert's harried hero torn between love of right and desire to do wrong? Weren't they splendid characterizations? A picture that held your interest, certainly!

Well—guess that's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Famous Long Ago.

Dear Mae Tinée: I am strong for Forrest Robinson as Old Lightnin' Bill, and am quite certain he can deliver the goods in a manner that none can surpass and few can equal.

Some one wrote to you that he is not so well known as Frank Keenan or Claude Gillingwater. My God, he was famous before either of those gents burst upon the scene! For more than twenty years he was one of the best known leading men on the legitimate stage.

Exactly forty years ago he played the lead in David Belasco's "May Blossom," which was a great hit of those days and believe me, he was a splendid actor and a fine looking fellow. The ladies of 1885 fell for him exactly as the dames of 1925 fall for Ronald Colman. Robinson had a glorious speaking voice, a stunning mustache, an' everything that a popular male favorite needed in those days, except height. He surely hit them hard in "May Blossom" and I hope he sees this. He has done fine work in pictures, and I long to see him as Old Bill. W. M.

That "Homely" Valentino.

Dear Miss Tinée: Some time ago I wrote an article regarding Rudolph Valentino, who I consider one of the homeliest men on the screen. It never was published and although you strongly favor him, I do not understand why my letter was ignored, as you always seem admirably broadminded.

Valentino is a passable actor and shows in his every gesture just what a bad case of "ego" he has.

All of Griffiths' productions show human emotions, human problems more beautifully and clearly than any produced by others who spend scads for costumes and makeup to take the place of real people—real emotions.

That's that. Now let me say that your movie criticisms are the only ones I have ever enjoyed reading.

Strong for Us.

Dear Miss Tinée: One of the letters in Kick Korner gives me a big laugh. It was signed R. H. K., and supposed to drag you down to the lowest depths. I do not know who this person is, and what is more, I do not care, but I have been reading your column since ever I can remember, and never have I seen criticisms that cannot be depended on. There is a chumminess about your column that makes a person feel Mae Tinée is made of the right stuff, and knows her book from A to Z.

I have come to depend on your write-ups, and when a show is mentioned and we are in doubt as to what to see, some one will mention "What did Mae Tinée say about it?" and so it goes.

If you print this, Mae, just remind R. H. K. that glancing over your column won't do any good, but that it has to be read with intelligence to be appreciated. It might be that you are too deep for this would-be critic, and I would suggest that you hold R. H. K.'s head above the water until he or she comes to.

Three cheers for you, Mae. Lang may yer lum reek. I dinna ken if ye can read this bit o' Scotch, but it means "Long may you reign."

Read These Excerpts from an Editorial in the Chicago Tribune, March 6

"The new picture of 'Quo Vadis' has reached Chicago and is at the Roosevelt Theatre. The old picture was here about thirteen years ago, one of the early attempts at production of tremendous action with the life of a nation in the background, followed by 'Cabiria' and 'The Birth of a Nation.' Perhaps the new 'Quo Vadis' is the greatest of all. * * * One reason the picture is great is Emil Jannings. We think he is the greatest moving picture actor of the day. He is Nero in 'Quo Vadis:' * * * He is not Jannings at all. That is his genius. His Nero is a human being, not a tiger."

Platoon Schools a Fire and Panic Hazard to Your Child!

Must Chicago Have an Iroquois Disaster in the Schools to Make Them Safe for Our Children?

March 4, 1925.

Hon. William E. Dever, Mayor, City of Chicago.
Hon. Joseph F. Connery, Fire Commissioner.
Hon. Frank Doherty, Building Commissioner.
Hon. Charles M. Moderwell, Pres. Board of Education.
Hon. Wm. McAndrew, Superintendent of Schools.

Gentlemen:

You are respectfully notified that the platooning of the Ryerson Public School, 646 N. Lawndale Avenue, on February 24, 1925, has created a dangerous fire and panic hazard to more than 1,400 school children from 5 to 14 years old.

These children are deprived of the protection of the City Fire Ordinance which requires the principal "to establish and maintain, under the approval of the Chief of Fire Prevention and Public Safety, a good and efficient fire drill which shall be practiced at least twice each month." (Section 1325 of the Municipal Code of 1922.) The Superintendent's official printed directions for conducting fire drills in compliance with this ordinance cannot be enforced in the Ryerson School since it was platooned nor in any platoon school.

These directions, issued by the Superintendent to all principals on October 20, 1924, contain the following:

> "194 These directions issue after conference with principals and superintendents and with officers of the Chicago Bureau of Fire Prevention."
>
> "210 CONTROL. Every fire drill should be, for principal and teacher, an exercise in school management. Complete control of a class so that a teacher may form its ranks quickly and silently, may halt it, turn it, direct it, as she wishes, is the chief purpose of the drill. From start to finish the class should be under the teacher's direction . . . . . The use of two or three pupil assistants is recommended. But the teacher's personal presence and responsibility for direction of the class is imperative."
> "199 VARIETY. Drills should be given . . . . (d) When classes are passing."

Since the Ryerson School was platooned on February 24, fire drills cannot be given "under the teacher's personal presence" and "control" "when classes are passing," because teachers do not, and cannot, accompany the children. In that school, 450 children six times a day, and 900 children twice a day, all between the ages of 9 and 14 years, pass through the corridors, up and down stairways, carrying their street wraps, overshoes, and suitcases containing books, papers, pencils, etc., unaccompanied by teachers.

Since February 24, there have been assembled in that school each day, at all times, an excess of about 200 children over the number of seats in classrooms. These extra 200 children have been "parked" in the auditorium and the gymnasium and "dumped" on the playground in pleasant weather, or in the basement in inclement weather, and all the children in the platoon have been kept rotating from "parking place" to classroom, classroom to classroom, teacher to teacher, in order that the same 200 children should not be kept waiting longer than 30 minutes at one time in a "parking place." This is why 450 children pass through the corridors every 30 minutes, and 900 twice a day to classes; teachers have from 90 to 450 children a day; children have six teachers a day and as many as ten a week.

Since the school was platooned, these instructions have been given to the teachers to pass on orally to the children:

"No matter where the children are when the fire gong strikes, they are to

1. Stop
2. Turn to the exit
3. Wait for next signal
4. Pass out as soon as possible

The responsibility placed upon the teachers in the Superintendent's Bulletin of October 20, 1924, Paragraph 210, quoted above, has been shifted to the children in that school by these oral instructions.

Paragraph 228 of the Superintendent's directions for fire drills issued last October reads:

> "228 One child killed or maimed in a fire drill would bring a sorrow and remorse to avoid which the most strict detailed regulations governing this serious school exercise are worth all the trouble they entail."

The main building of the Ryerson School was built 34 years ago, and the addition 10 years ago. There are three school-room floors above the basement. The only stairway in the north end of the main building is an old wooden one with worn steps and old wainscoting bannister. When the signal is given for a fire drill indicating that the east exit is closed, this is the only stairway that can be used by the children in the old building and all must leave the building through the exits from that stairway.

All platoon schools are organized on the plan of the Ryerson. Every half hour one-half the children, and twice a day all the children in the platoon rotate from "parking" place to classroom, passing through the corridors and up and down the stairs unaccompanied by teachers. They are NOT "under the teacher's direction" and "complete control." They are subject to the hazard of fire and panic.

Since July 9, 1924, the Superintendent has had authority from the Board of Education to platoon any school and as many schools as he sees fit.

Should a serious fire and panic occur in a platoon school, the parents and public generally might well criticize teachers on the ground that they knew, or ought to have known, of the increased fire danger from the platoon system and failed to make such knowledge public. There were those who knew of the deplorable conditions in the Iroquois Theatre before that fire. They failed to make their knowledge public and 112 helpless children were killed.

Respectfully submitted, THE CHICAGO TEACHERS' FEDERATION,
By Margaret A. Haley, Business Representative.

The Issue: "Shortage of School Revenue"

The Board of Education says—"Platoon the Schools"
The Teachers say—"Stop Tax-Fixing and Tax-Dodging"

Good Season for the Tune Bearers

By Edward Moore.

desire to develop jazz. What little exists is mostly in "No, No, Nanette," and here it is in its deftest, most light handed and light hearted manner. The comments of the orchestra in this piece are as witty as a Paul Whiteman program.

Perhaps the next best bit of music collected out of these incidental meanderings happens to be another male chorus. It is the march sung in the first act of "Rose-Marie," a piece that is stirring enough and vigorous enough to belong outdoors instead of in a theater. However, there are some five numbers in the second act of "The Dream Girl" that would take a high rating anywhere.

One learns about grand opera by going to light opera. Probably a leading reason why so many violent deaths occur in grand opera is that author and composer desire to avoid the final lineup just before the last curtain. Finding it necessary to get rid of some of their characters, they kill them off, the most direct and, in some respects, not the least satisfactory method.

But in manner of presentation, in desire to appeal to its patrons, grand opera could come to its tuneful sister and learn a few valuable lessons. For some reason there has been a curiously baffling theory that somehow it is bad art to give an encore in grand opera; that it is better to be bored than pleased. A patron comes to a grand opera performance, endures with what patience he may until he meets a section he would like to hear again—and then it is forbidden. In light opera they are considerably wiser. They are ready for encores and they prepare for them.

In fact, the level of entertainment runs to a perceptibly high average in light opera generally. There is no reason to be condescending about it. It is an exceedingly pleasant form of art. I have searched in vain on this trip for the dull stretches that encumber nearly every grand opera in the repertoire. I have also searched in vain for anything as weak kneed and feeble minded as some of the favored moments of some grand operas—"Die Provenza" in "Traviata," for one.

As long as grand opera continues to be given in a foreign and not understood tongue its dramatic values must be heavily discounted, if they exist at all without understandable language. It must stand and fall on its high musical moments and the golden voices that project them. Its effort is to be weighty and impressive; that of light opera is to sparkle. Who, when he tells the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, does not prefer the sparkle?

The Pianists Are Coming.

The pianists are among us, singly, doubly, and trebly. It is no trouble at all to count up half a dozen or more within the next few days. Sergei Rachmaninoff will give his only recital of the season at the Auditorium this afternoon; Alberto Sciaretti will make his first appearance at the Studebaker today; Rae Bernstein, winner in the piano class of the Society of American Artists' recent contest, will be the soloist at the Chicago Symphony orchestra's popular concert on Thursday night; George Liebling will give a recital on the following night.

In the Chicago Symphony orchestra's regular programs on Friday afternoon, no less than three pianists will take part. They are Guy Maier, Lee Pattison, and Arthur Shattuck. Messrs. Maier and Pattison are the ones who have made a persuasive and attractive art out of two-piano playing, and they will appear twice thereat, in an old concerto by Mozart, and a new one by Arthur Bliss. Finally, they will join keyboards with Mr. Shattuck and play a Bach concerto for three pianos. Their section of the program will be a large one, leaving Mr. Stock opportunity to conduct Schumann's First Symphony and Richard Strauss' "Don Juan."

Music Here and There.

Beginning next week and extending over seven Tuesday nights at Kimball hall, Clara Clemens plans to give a learned series of historical programs. She is the daughter of Mark Twain and the wife of Ossip Gabrilowitsch, and she has sung here before, though not for three years. The series is divided into folk song, classical song, romantic song, Scandinavian and Finnish songs and Brahms; French and Russian songs, modern Italian, English, and Russian songs, and modern French and German songs. Isaac Van Grove will be the accompanist.

Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis and Lieutenant Commander John Philip Sousa recently conferred in Havana, with the result that Mr. Sousa has agreed to write a new march to be used at all ceremonials upon American baseball fields. He also sends word that he will write a tune to be called "Pop Bottle Blues." This is to be played by bands attached to clubs visiting St. Louis, though the reason for this invidious distinction is not made clear.

Sophie Braslau's ungiven song recital of last Sunday has been postponed, not canceled. It will be sung on the afternoon of April 5.

One item in the final recital of the Gordon String quartet at Orchestra hall foyer on next Wednesday afternoon will be a Scherzo by Frederick Stock, which is possibly a movement from the quartet that the Kneisels played here some years ago. The other numbers will be Glasounow's Prelude and Fugue and Mozart's Quartet in F major.

Three of the four parts in Frank Patterson's new opera, "The Echo," have been placed for the premiere to be given before the National Federation of Music Clubs' convention at Portland, Ore., in June. Forrest Lamont will sing the part of Theudas, Marie Rappold that of Acantha, and Lawrence Tibbett that of Cunnan. The soprano rôle of Yfel is still in search of a singer. It is described by the federation's publicity squad as "a sort of vamp part, but requiring great versatility."

Further word about the work is to the effect that it was "no doubt inspired by reading the poems of Shelley and other neo-classics, and it embraces the medieval idea of the morality play. Thus the costuming will be fantastic, of everywhere and nowhere, and as the chorus represents the dream figments of the imaginings and desires of Theudas, they will not represent any uniform characteristics (except that of joy), but will be universal, as man's imaginings are likely to be." Walter Henry Rothwell will conduct and the Portland Symphony orchestra will play.

In case you are interested in quarter tone music, there will be a chance to hear some this afternoon at the Gordon club. Carefully sandwiched in between Mozart for a top crust and Schumann for a bottom, the Chicago String quartet will play a movement from Alois Haba's Quartet in Quarter Tones, the first time, to the belief of this department, that it has been played in Chicago. Whether it will sound as fearsome as it looks remains to be told. At any rate, the composer says:

"For years I have interested myself in the system of quarter tone composition. Musical ideas, which I could not express within the scope of the half-tone system, urged me on the various experiments with instruments and composition and this work is the result of long and painstaking research in a relatively new language. I have concerned myself more with permeating the half tone system with softer effects and finer nuances than with creating harsher sounds or disturbing an established régime. I seemed to feel that the quarter tone system was rather a higher development of the old art than a distinctly new language."

Claudia Muzio is sailing this week for Europe on what may be considered a partial vacation. Upon her arrival in Paris she will sing three performances on "Aida" in ten days. In June she will set sail for Buenos Aires for a season at the Colon theater there, returning to this country in time to go to San Francisco and sing in that city's brief opera season, then back to Chicago and the twelve weeks of opera here.

There is word of the approach of Ronny Johhansson, a Swedish dancer. Apparently her program will be of a kind that one can invite one's elderly relatives to see, for it is announced that her style is suited to American audiences, avoiding the sensational, the scanty clothing, and the "conventionalities of the regulation classical dances." It is said that she makes a particular specialty of comedy, "something rare to find in dance programs." This last ought to be of peculiar interest to Pavlowa and Adolph Bolm and Ruth St. Denis and some of the others who dance in public.

The Academy of St. Cecelia at Rome plans a new summer music course, open to all qualified foreigners but particularly to American students. It comes at the instance of the Italian ministry of education, and Premier Mussolini is said to be taking a personal interest in it. The course, beginning July 15, and nine weeks long, will take place at the Villa d'Este, between Rome and Tivoli. Ottorino Respighi will head the composition class; Ernesto Console the piano; Mario Corti the violin; and Delia Valeri will go over immediately after her summer classes in Chicago to take charge of the singers.

They will be joint soloists at the Chicago Symphony orchestra concerts this week; finally joining with Arthur Shattuck, they will make it a threesome. Mozart and Arthur Bliss will be the composers of their performance; the triple exposition will be by Bach. They are excellent soloists and expert in team play, consequently their appearance is something of an event.

CHICAGOAN

MILDRED ORNE.

She belongs to this city, she is a soprano, and she will give a song recital this afternoon. Ancient and modern songs of several lands will be on her program. Edgar Nelson will be her accompanist, and the Playhouse will be the place.

Sinclair Lewis' 'Arrowsmith'--By H. L. Mencken

Coolidge without being spoken to? The curtain comes down, alas, before we learn positively. But while it is up he unquestionably runs away with the play.

So gaudily does he hold the stage, indeed, that for long reaches the hero, Arrowsmith, is completely blanketed. I call Arrowsmith the hero because of the lack of a more accurate word; he is, in fact, not even the protagonist, for he wobbles far oftener than he holds the faith. That faith, if I understand it, is in the high dignity and honor of science—in the joy and virtue of pursuing knowledge for its own sake. Arrowsmith comes out of his medical school full of it, and he seems to be full of it again at the end, but in the interval he loses it more than once, sometimes despairingly, sometimes almost willingly. The conflict in the story is between the pure scientist and the mountebank—between the man whose passion it is to know and the man with a yearning to get somewhere. Arrowsmith is mainly the first, but now and then he is the second. He is thus unsatisfactory as a hero. But he is enormously interesting as a man.

And as a type no less. For this struggle that wracks and almost wrecks him also wracks all other Americans of his kind. We educate men for science elaborately and expensively, and then we throw them into a society that does not understand them and is more apt than not to be contemptuous of them. What it demands of them is practical results—a new, safe, and cheap cure for colds in the head, a motor fuel better than gasoline, a razor that never grows dull. If they fail to produce such things in a steady stream they are set down as moony visionaries and laughed at. For the man who does the really fundamental work, upon which all practical results depend, there is no public honor and little public respect.

Process of Decay.

This disdainful and often suspicious attitude, perhaps not unnatural in a capitalistic democracy, only too often reacts upon scientists themselves, gradually reducing them into cheap and easy successes. Isolation is uncomfortable to them, as it would be to the rest of us, so they climb down from their ivory towers and begin to work marvels for the readers of the Sunday magazine sections. Lewis, in "Arrowsmith," shows them at all steps along the way—some just beginning to toy with the temptation; others, like Pickerbaugh, in the full regalia of the mountebank.

"The austere, unfortunately, are not altogether immune; even when they do not yield they are sorely tempted. For public opinion is extraordinarily potent under democracy, and few men have enough resolution to hold out against it year after year. Nor are scientists the only victims of it. They are also to be found, and maybe even more abundantly, among scholars and statesmen. I believe it is quite impossible for any man to reach high public office in America without compromising deliberately with what he knows to be buncombe and worse—that is, without yielding something of his integrity. I believe it is equally impossible, without the same compromise, for a man to reach the highest academic dignities—say those of a university president. The beaches of learning in the republic are strewn with the carcasses of such ex-idealists. They begin as scholars and gentlemen, and they end as clowns at public dinners, sitting between Judge Gary and John D. Rockefeller Jr."

The whole process of their decay is set forth by Lewis in his book, and with all his usual meticulous exactness. He had the help of Dr. Paul H. De Kruif, formerly of the Rockefeller institute, in the writing of it—help ever visible, and of immense value. No layman, however shrewd, could have amassed the facts that De Kruif's professional experience brought to him. He not only gave a brilliant realism to the chronicle; he also, I suspect, contributed some of its most amusing characters, including Pickerbaugh. If Pickerbaugh is his, then let him have three huzzahs. For Pickerbaugh is the sweetest, loveliest, juciest fraud in modern American fiction—a noble rascal, indeed—the very model and pattern of an "ethical" quack.

Handled with Skill.

"Arrowsmith" presented serious technical difficulties to the author. The problem before him was to enlist the sympathy of the reader for a man who, in real life, would normally have only the reader's disdain—in other words, to turn Pantaloon into Galahad. It seems to me that he has carried off the business with great skill—that he has done as well with it as it was humanly possible to do. There is never any appeal to mere rhetoric. Arrowsmith is present quietly, subtly, almost stealthily. He is kept free from priggishness; he never postures; he wobbles quite as often as he stands fat. Will he conquer the fat female fan of fiction, reading his story on a lazy afternoon, snug in her greasy kimono? Will he interest the gal in the finishing school? Will he reach the heart of the literary suburban pastor? These questions are not for critics to answer. The reports of the best seller statisticians will tell.

As a piece of writing qua writing, it seems to me that "Arrowsmith" is better done than "Main Street," but not quite so good as "Babbitt." The latter has never been sufficiently praised by the learned; its vast popular success made them shy at it. I believe it is one of the best novels ever written in America—solid and beautiful in design, and superb in detail. "Arrowsmith," like "Main Street," is looser and less dramatic. It covers a long space of years; it is crowded with figures; in locale it ranges from the wilds of the Dakotas to the West Indies. This prodigal material refuses to be organized tightly; it bulges and overflows in all directions. But I think, for all that, Lewis has kept a firm hand on it—that his book hangs together. More, it moves in one direction, steadily and surely. Now for vox Dei!

Valentino, True to Form, Takes to Desert Sand Again

By Rosalind Shaffer.

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—Valentino, dean of sheiks, is taking a real sheik vacation out on the desert sands at Palm Springs, Cal., in his own tent ah his own cook. The lowly bean and bacon strip, time honored camping fare, will nourish the heart quickening Rudy.

Mrs. Valentino will share his sandy retreat for a week and then return to the bazaars of Hollywood, while her husband will remain two more weeks in solitude, communing with the stars of the desert sky by night and the burning sands by day and sustaining himself with doughty mealtime attacks on the tin cans. There is more than one kind of a weapon the brave sheik can wield—and they do say he wields a mean can opener.

Hard Luck for Pola.

Mention police dogs to Pola Negri and she's likely to gnash her teeth. A week ago Pola furnished her press agents with a real story, running a bold, bad burglar out of her Beverly Hills home about two jumps ahead of her spurting revolver.

Evidently it made Pola a little nervous, because the following day she brought home a large, toothy, and long pedigreed police purp to protect her maiden seclusion in the hills. With a sigh of relief she wiped off the nightly cold cream and crawled between the solid silk sheets, feeling at last there was adequate protection from second story men.

But a sad dawn broke. The tearable pup had demolished everything that could be torn, from satin mules to imported tapestries, draperies, and priceless rugs. Of all the products of Samarkand, Canton, Paris, and Madeira nothing remained but wet chewed up fragments. A naked sofa spring divested of its covering of horse hair and velour sat sadly in the middle of the floor, the only object to defy the slashing teeth of Mr. Pup.

"Now bring on your burglars!" says Pola.

Betty Compson, basking in the sunshine reflected from her radiant new blond wig, was chatting in her dressing room over a Lasky, where she is working on "Eve's Secret." She described with great enthusiasm her garden at Flintbridge, where she and her husband, James Cruze, spend their little leisure these days.

The only flaw in the idyllic setting of yellow rose beds, newly set out chrysanthemum plants—which Betty tends herself—and the pert jonquils, is a recalcitrant bullfrog. His burly bellowings were wont to delight the countryside from his place among the lily-pads in Betty's fish pool—but lately he refuses to do is stuff—nary a bellow, not even a grunt. Now Betty is worried because his appetite has failed and he sits pining among the tastiest of edibles. "We've tried raw chicken and strips of liver," Cruze volunteered, "only to be turned down, even when they were offered by Betty's own lily white hand. Armand sure has us worried." And the spring garden goes on, lacking its sturdy vocalist until Armand chirks up again.

"Wizard of Oz" Night.

Wednesday night saw "Wizard of Oz" night at the Montmartre, with Larry Semon as master of ceremonies. Scarecrow dolls ornamented the tables, and many film folk danced and dined. Constance Bennett in a powder blue chiffon evening gown, which brought out the blonde of her hair, was noted dancing. Thelma Morgan Converse, Margaret Landis, Charles Kenyon, and Syd Chaplin were on hand.

Charles Chaplin is giving Hollywood a new thrill since his recent discovery that he has an attractive wife, and appeared with her and her mother, Mrs. Lillian Spicer, at the opening of "The Iron Horse" and at the Montmartre afterward. Lita looked serene and lovely in a simple black velvet dress, with her only ornament the diamond and platinum lavalliere watch that was her Christmas gift from Charlie.

Chicago, Ill., 11/2/24

A year ago I was almost bald. I now have a nice growth of hair due to constant use of Van Ess. After trying everything else, without success, I purchased a bottle of Van Ess at Buck & Rayner's.

It gives me great pleasure to inform my friends that Van Ess has been the cause of restoring my hair. I believe that anyone who uses Van Ess as religiously as I have will be benefited.

People with scalp trouble should make Van Ess a daily habit because it keeps the scalp clean, removes dandruff and makes the head feel glad.

Try this remarkable test yourself

Every EISENSTADT INCOMPARABLE PEN gives complete compression from back to front, fully expelling the air. It allows the sack to fill to its maximum capacity. Drop contents in glass and note the far greater capacity of the Eisenstadt Pen.

These pens are sold on a WORD CAPACITY BASIS

The construction is correct—The Quality is the best money can buy—The guarantee is absolute

The construction is the result of a lifetime of experiment—years of study and a process of elimination of faults—and a patent principle of filling which no other pen has. This was all accomplished by the staff of a manufacturer of the finest jewelry in the country. Imagine what a marvelous product such an organization of artisans would turn out.

It is a foregone conclusion what quality they would put in the product also, as the product bears their name—Eisenstadt. The raw products used in its manufacture come from the four corners of the globe.

The points of superiority in the Eisenstadt Pens

The Eisenstadt Incomparable Pen has a greater ink capacity than any other pen on the market today. It holds more ink, and that is why you buy it on a word capacity basis. You can ask for it in a 30,000 word size, a 20,000 word size, a 15,000, 10,000 8,000 or a 5,000 word size and get it. It is the only pen that dares to sell itself on that basis. Think of it! 30,000 words without refilling! And it is no larger to carry, no heavier in the hand than pens that cannot write half that many words.

The Eisenstadt Incomparable Pen is beautiful to look at, beautiful to use, beautiful in performance, and as beautiful in all of these points of superiority when you are 60 years old as when you are 20. For mechanical perfection and wear it is guaranteed absolutely and in every respect. Don't be without the Eisenstadt Incomparable Pen. It is the mark of prosperity, progressiveness, independence and freedom from the slavery of the old shoulder-dislocating, floor-spotting, irritating, non-responsive experimental models of former years.

Sold from $2.50 to $100

Ask your dealer for a demonstration

Guarantee: We guarantee the Eisenstadt Incomparable Pen to be the finest for the price and perfect in each detail, and that it will write more words from one filling than any other sack pen of the same size.

RADIO ENGINEER ADVOCATES 15 SUPER STATIONS

Plan Would Eliminate Interference.

New York, March 7.—[Special.]—A new plan of wave length allocation and station classification was suggested and outlined by S. M. Kintner, manager of the research department of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company, in an address before the Association of Iron and Steel Electrical Engineers at Birmingham, Ala. Mr. Kintner claims that his plan will eliminate 95 per cent of the present objectionable interference. He advocated the establishing of four station classifications, the most important of which to be known as super de luxe stations, confined within the wave length range of 300-416 meters, with power varying from 5,000 to 50,000 watts and limited in number to fifteen. This class would be for a limited number of stations that could classify for a de luxe service, Mr. Kitner said.

Heard Everywhere.

"Each of these stations would be assigned an exclusive wave channel of 20 kilocycles' breadth and permitted to use high power, from five to fifty kilowatts. It is expected that general interest would exist in what each of these stations had to offer and it would be desirable to protect them from interference to as great a degree as possible. Under favorable conditions it should be possible to listen to any one of these class I. stations from any place in this country, with, of course, suitable receivers.

"Class II. stations would be those of less national importance, and yet whose facilities entitle them to be ranked above and given superior opportunities than the stations in the lower classes. These stations should be required to fulfill certain specified conditions to entitle them to qualify for this service.

Many Local Stations.

"Class III. would contain that large number of small stations whose influence is local. It is highly desirable that a number of such stations exist, as local color is needed in certain of the programs. This class of stations would be limited in power to 100 watts, in order to minimize its interference with other stations on the same wave channel.

"Class IV. would be the waiting list. Into this class all newcomers must go and await an opening to a higher class as a vacancy arises. Admission to this class requires compliance with the conditions for one or the other of the preceding classes."

RADIO DEALERS VOTE 196 TO 83 AGAINST TAX

New York, March 7.—[Special.]—The proposal of a 2 pe cent tax on radio sales to pay for broadcasting does not meet with unanimous indorsement of the trade, according to a questionnaire sent out by the Radio Dealer.

One hundred and ninety-six voted against such a tax, while only 83 favored it. Federal control of stations received 5 votes; a tax on tubes, 3 votes, and a tax on parts, 1 vote.

Phonograph dealers, radio retailers, manufacturers, jobbers, and broadcasting stations answered the question touching on many important phases of the problem. The question was based on the theory that broadcasting continuance was promised the public by the sale of receiving sets, with the further idea that better broadcasting programs would mean increased sales for radio merchandise.

A number of suggestions were made by correspondents representing the foremost concerns in the industry. The principal idea expressed was that the industry should not be taxed to support broadcasting. In every instance the correspondents believed that the broadcasting stations were receiving ampe returns in the form of publicity to justify their existence.

PASSENGERS ON U. S. BOAT HEAR RADIO CONCERTS

Radio receiving sets may be installed on all of the United States liners for the entertainment of the passengers as the result of successful experiments made aboard the George Washington during its last voyage.

Capt. Harold Cunningham had a neutrodyne receiver installed in his cabin to study the possibilities of radio entertainment at sea. He was able to pick up Miami Beach, Kansas City, Davenport, Ia., and all of the big eastern stations. From Europe, London, Paris, Berlin, and Madrid were picked up.

Many travelers aboard expressed a preference for European broadcasting, favoring the absence of jazz in the programs. The best musicians of Spain entertained them from Madrid, with the classics.

ELECTRIC CLUB'S RADIO SECTION MEETS TUESDAY

The next regular meeting of the radio section of the Electric club of Chicago will be held in the clubroom, 30 North Dearborn street, Tuesday at 7 p. m.

John H. Miller will continue his talks on the fundamentals of radio, and Harry J. Marx will speak on "Audio Frequency Amplification." He will set up a broadcasting station and a receiving set to demonstrate transformer, resistance coupling, and push-pull amplification. By the use of tuning forks and the microphone and the receiving set and loud speakers different forms of audio amplification will be thoroughly demonstrated.

Talks on Burbank Are on Schedule of WLS

"How Luther Burbank Works" will be told over the radio March 17 from WLS by his official biographer, Dr. B. C. Bean. His second topic on March 24 will be, "What Luther Burbank Has Done for Humanity."

DADDY OF CONDENSERS

GERMANY OPENS ELEVENTH RADIO SENDING STATION

BERLIN, March 7.—Germany's eleventh broadcasting station was recently opened at Cassel, Hessen-Nassau, according to United States consular reports. Like the others, this station was constructed by the federal telegraph authorities with the coöperation of the local postoffice.

The Cassel station will be managed by the Sud-West Deutsche Rundfunkdienst A. G., which also runs the Frankfort station. The two will be connected by wire, so that the Frankfort program can be heard in Cassel with simple receiver sets using no batteries. For the present the Cassel station will transmit the Frankfort program with the exception of one or two evenings a week when it will broadcast independently (wave length, 288 meters). This keeps down the costs of operating and at the same time creates business in very cheap receiver sets, accessories, and radio parts for amateur construction, the only articles for which there is a market in Germany at present.

WHT WILL TEST VOICES OF ITS ENTERTAINERS

A voice testing "laboratory" for determining the personality and tone quality of voices for radio entertainment will be installed as part of the main studio equipment of WHT, soon to open in the Wrigley building here, according to George E. Carlson, general manager.

Every vocalist who goes before the microphone of the station will be first given voice tests under the supervision of Herbert Mintz, program director, and Franklin C. E. Lundquist, musical director.

"We are constructing a miniature sound proof studio in which the vocal artist will speak and sing into a regulation microphone attached to a sound amplifier," Carlson said. "The musical director, stationed in an adjoining room, will hear the voice through head phones in exactly the same way that the radio audience will hear it when it is broadcast, and defects will be corrected.

RADIO CHIEFS STUDY PUBLIC'S BUYING POWER

At a recent conference of economists in New York the discussion turned to figures relating to the public consumption of radio products and an attempt was made to estimate what was called the "hesitant buying power."

What is this "hesitant buying power?" A definition was requested of Edward H. Jewett, one of the major capitalistic figures in the radio commercial structure. He defined it thus:

"The 'hesitant buying power' represents the sum of money ready to be spent by a portion of the public as soon as they are convinced that their expenditure will bring them stable value.

"Many commercial fields have this 'hesitant buying power' to deal with, though I doubt if in any of them it represents such a large amount of capital as it does in radio.

"In radio we have a situation, due to frequent improvements and an uncertain merchandising condition caused by the industry's mushroom-like growth, that makes a large portion of the public hesitate to buy radio apparatus.

"This portion of the public wants to buy; is sold on the desirability of having radio in their homes, but hesitates because of two things. In the first place, they are afraid that six months after they make their purchase something better will be on the market. In the second place, they are afraid that two or three or four weeks after they buy the same equipment will be offered for sale at a much lower cost.

"As to the first fear, I believe it to be one which is greatly exaggerated. Of course, new models of apparatus will continue to be made—the tremendous investment of all manufacturers in research laboratories insures this—but that does not mean each new refinement sends today's product into the discard. Most of the reputable radio products now being sold will give continuous satisfactin and have as long a life as the buyer first expected.

"As to the price situation, that is another story and one which has worried manufacturers as much as it has the public. There is a multiplicity of apparatus offered; it is so difficult to separate the sheep from the goats; the claims of superiority are so universal that the public is simply bewildered."

RADIO TO BRING DAY OF SINGLE TONGUE TO MEN

Universal Language Is Needed.

New York, March 7.—Successful reception of American broadcasts in foreign countries will hasten the necessity of an international language and the universal tongue is likely to be English, according to William H. Easton of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing company, who addressed the New York chapter of the Daughters of the Revolution recently.

"In the early days of broadcasting it was the ambition of every major station to reach Europe," said Mr. Easton, "I recall a map record that was kept by one station with jealous care. Every point from which reception was reported was indicated with a pin. Of special interest was the region of the Atlantic ocean, from which ships sent reports. Nearer and nearer to the shores of Europe crept the pins as transmission improved, until finally the goal was reached—a cable from England announced that some one there had caught the station's call letters. That was a red letter day!

Use of Phone Lines.

"As a matter of fact, however, the practical working range of the most powerful of modern broadcasting stations is not much over a few hundred miles. They can, of course, be heard at much greater distances, but their voices become too weak to be heard with easy comprehension. Many endeavored to hear Europe during the trans-Atlantic radio tests last fall. Most of those who listened for Europe will testify to the fact that it was an ear splitting and nerve wracking experience. The receiver has to be tuned to such a high pitch of sensitivity that all extraneous noises are magnified a thousand fold. The result is a perfect pandemonium of shrieks, howls, rattles, and crashes.

"The problem of long distance transmission has, however, been solved in this country by connecting two or more stations by telephone lines. Though this system is ideal for use in the United States it is not practical for transoceanic purposes for telephonic messages cannot be sent through submarine cables. There is, however, a third method of broadcasting which has no such limitations.

Short Wave Demonstrations.

"This method," said Mr. Easton, "is known as the 'short wave' or 'inaudible wave' system. It is based on the fact that radio waves that are much shorter than those ordinarily used for broadcasting seem to possess unusual penetrating power. A short wave station, operated in conjunction with the Pittsburg station, KDKA, has been heard in Europe, South America, South Africa, and Australia. It is entirely practical to catch these waves by means of special receiving apparatus, magnify them, transmit them to a local broadcasting station, and rebroadcast them for the benefit of the local audience. This system has been utilized for over a year by a group of stations in the United States, but a much more interesting application of it is being made in Great Britain."

ALL-AMERICAN TRANSFORMER

The Choice of Noted Music Critics

A Step Beyond the Neutralizing Principle in Radio Reception

Feedback of Stray Energy Absolutely Prevented, Not Merely Neutralized

Overtones Perfectly Reproduced

PFANSTIEHL has accomplished, by the simplest means, what radio engineers have battled in vain to do with the most elaborate complications. He has permanently and completely PREVENTED ALL FEEDBACK OF STRAY ENERGY from one circuit to another.

This he has done without employing potentiometers or extra condensers to choke down or neutralize the stray oscillations—a makeshift method and an open confession of error in the circuit itself. If the circuit had been properly designed in the first place, there would be no need for correcting devices; and they very imperfectly correct.

What Pfanstiehl Did

What Pfanstiehl has done is to design a SYSTEM which has no errors to start with. There is no chance for stray energy to escape. Feedback is impossible. How he has done this makes a scientific story of interest to the radio technician.

The important point for the radio user to get is this: it does not matter how completely the stray energy is choked down or neutralized AFTER IT ESCAPES, nor how effectively the internal noises are thus obliterated in the set, the escaping energy obstructs the forward streaming energy and in doing so robs it of its delicate overtone vibrations. That is something no absorbing devices can prevent.

The Effect of It

Now, what effect has this upon tone quality? It makes all the difference between impoverished tone and the full, rich timbre of instrumental music or the human voice. Without overtones the fundamental tone is mere pitch. It may be correct, but it is not music. Pitch has no individuality whatever. Middle C is middle C on any instrument; always 256 vibrations per second. But what a difference in tone color between middle C on the piano and on the cello—and in quality from a fine instrument and from a poor one—from the lips of a great singer and from the lips of the mediocre.

The fewer overtones lost or distorted by radio amplification, the truer and more beautiful is the music.

Let someone demonstrate the Pfanstiehl to you. It will be a revelation in the tone possibilities of radio.

An Appeal to Radio Users

Every owner of a fine radio receiver should agitate for the suppression of regenerative interference in the air and undesirable radio transmission. They spoil the enjoyable possibilities of pure tone reception. Do not be a radio nuisance yourself by using a set which radiates or transmits noises to your neighbor.

A Unique "Station Finder"

Takes the Guesswork out of Tuning

A unique feature of the Pfanstiehl Overtone Receiver is a "Station Finder," which takes the guesswork out of tuning and enables even the inexperienced to tune this receiving set quickly and without difficulty.

From the radio program in the daily newspaper or radio magazine, ascertain the "wave-length" of the station you want to hear and also the time at which it is scheduled to broadcast.

1. Find this "wave-length" or number on the lower scale.
2. Read the number directly above it on the upper scale, and set each of the three large dials to this reading.
3. Tuning may now be sharpened by adjusting the large dials slightly, one at a time, with the small vernier knobs below. Adjustment of the large dials to a fraction of a degree, enables you to secure the sharper tuning needed for maximum results from distant stations.

B-T Condenser

Has Less Resistance than Laboratory Standard

Report in part from Prof. J. M. Wilcox of Armour Institute of Technology:

Chicago, Ill., Feb. 27, 1925.
Bremer-Tully Mfg. Co.,
Chicago Ill.
Gentlemen:—
When the Bremer-Tully condensers were in the test circuit the current was from 1% to 2% greater than that obtained with the Laboratory Standard. It was necessary to introduce about .1 ohm in the circuit to bring the current to the same value as that obtained with the Standard. The equivalent resistance of the Bremer-Tully condensers is therefore less than that of the Standard by approximately .1 ohm.
Yours very truly,
(signed) J. M. WILCOX,

"MIKES" CARRY CAL'S VOICE TO 25 MILLION YANKS

Inaugural Broadcast by 24 Stations.

New York, March 7.—[Special.]—microphones hanging from a framework over the coat of arms of the United States picked up the inugural ceremonies and forwarded every sound over land wires to twenty-four broadcasting stations scattered from coast to coast, from where the waves were sent into the ether so that millions of Americans heard every word of the proceedings. It is estimated that 25,000,000 were listening in.

WEAF, New York, and twenty other broadcasters were connected with two of the microphones; the transmitters WJZ, WRC, WGY and WBZ were connected with two others, while the remaining two pick up devices forwarded the sound to the public address system of horns distributed around the capitol and among the crowd.

Three Mikes for Emergency.

In each case one microphone was for emergency, only being used by each group for actual broadcasting of the President's address. Graham McNamee, one of WEAF'S announcers, told the story to the audience of the Broadcasting station and twenty other stations located from Boston to San Francisco. E. Brokenshire, one of WJZ's announcers, did the broadcasting for the Aeolian hall station and the trio of stations linked with it.

WEAF'S announcer was located in a booth built for the occasion at the left of the President as he faced the audience. The booth was about fifty feet away from the micprophones. Brokenshire was on the opposite side of the capitol steps, but was in the open, as no booth was used.

Johnstone Helps McNamee.

C. Johnstone assisted McNamee in the booth by acting as a central operator. He wore a head set and had a telephone transmitter which kept him in communication with the control room located underneath the steps of the capitol, and with the Washington office of the Bell system, from which point all the land wires radiated to the different sections of the country. Johnstone was also in constant communication with the announcer and with an operator located about fifty feet away near the band stand. It was the duty of the sentinel near the musicians to signal over an order wire to the announcer's booth that the band was about to play, and he also flashed the name of the selection. Then Johnstone notified McNamee, who announced it over the air. The order wire leading from the booth to the control room was then used to tell the operators to shift the circuit from the microphone in the booth to a microphone at the band stand.

Helen Bolton Will Be on WOR Program

New York, March 7.—A feature of the WOR afternoon program next Tuesday will be the presentation of Helen Bolton, star of many Broadway musical comedy successes, who is now featured player in Lyle D. Andrews' production of "My Girl" at the Vanderbilt theater. Miss Bolton will present a fifteen minute period of songs and stories. In "My Girl" she sings the popular "Desert Isle," which will be included in her radio program.

HOW MILLIONS HEARD COOLIDGE

This peculiar looking instrument is the quintuple microphone which started President Coolidge's voice through the ether to the earphones and loud speakers of many million listeners throughout the country last Wednesday when he took the oath of office and made his inaugural address in Washington. The arrangement of the "mikes" made it possible to pick up every syllable of the inaugural proceedings, which were carried not only to the broadcasting stations, but to amplifiers placed at advantageous places in the neighborhood so that the huge crowd could also hear the President. # NEW DEVICE TO TEST EFFICIENCY OF RADIO SETS

Meters to Replace Ears of Makers.

New York, March 7.—[Special.]—A device for accurately measuring the efficiency of the completed receiving set has been developed in Philadelphia, and, after having been in use for a number of months, has been pronounced thoroughly satisfactory.

Every set manufactured in the plant is now subjected to a test with the new device. Its use supplants the former method of testing solely by ear—a method which lacked scientific precision and which was dependent for its efficacy on the skill of the tester.

Use Series of Meters.

The new tests are made with a series of meters which register the filament current, the plate current, the "B" battery voltage, and the output from the set equivalent to its signal strength.

Thirty men are employed as testers. Each one works at a stand equipped with a standard set—with which the newly completed receivers are compared—and two oscillators. These oscillators—one with a high, the other with a low wave length—correspond to broadcasting stations. For testing purposes, however, the oscillators are considered superior to actual broadcasts, since they never vary and are not affected by atmospheric conditions. Defects which might not appear in receiving actual broadcasts are easily detected when tuning in the oscillators.

Test for Loose Wires.

In testing the set is first examined carefully for loose wires and stray bits of solder. When the tester has made certain there are no visible defects both rheostats are turned toward the maximum position, a tube is inserted, and the switch turned on. If the tube lights properly the remaining tubes are inserted and the set is put through a series of tests. The accuracy of the set is measured on both the high and low wave oscillators.

Java Has the Most Powerful Transmitter

Probably the most powerful transmitter in operation today is the station in the Malabar mountains of Java, the Paulsen arcs of which draw 2,400 kilowatts. Such power is sufficient to light 50,000 ordinary electric lamps.

EVEN GERMANY GETS EARFUL ON LINE NIGHT

Friend of "R. H. L." Tells It to Him in Letter.

Part of the program of "Line Night" at W-G-N the evening of Jan. 23 was heard in Nordheim, near Nordhausen, am Harz, Germany, by an acquaintance of C. B. Schauffler, a friend of Richard Henry Little, who broadcast with a number of his Line contributers from the studio in the Drake hotel that night.

Mr. Little received a letter from his friend yesterday containing this announcement: "You will be pleased to know that your cheerful voice was heard at 1:30 a. m. Friday, Jan. 23, by a friend of mine in Nordheim, a town about sixty kilometers from here. He heard only your announcement, and though the enunciation was clear it was not loud enough to be heard on the loud speaker, but was discernible with the ear phones. The time sounds funny, but when you figure out the difference in time between there and here you will understand."

It is recalled that the night of Jan. 23 was not especially remarkable for good radio transmission, the conditions being of the average prevalent here.

Can't Tote Receivers in France Without Permission

PARIS, March 7.—The joys of "vacation radio" fans in France all depend. To take a receiver on a trip it is necessary to register the set at the office of the governmental radio authorities, stating the location at which you expect to use it, how long, and other pertinent facts.

Hints for Amateurs

If you know any radio hints or tips which you think would be interesting or helpful to other amateur set builders, send them in to the Radio Hint Editor. Hints should be kept as short as possible.

Here is an idea which will save set builders many a tube. After the set is wired, test for short circuits in the filament circuit by hooking your A battery to the plus B and minus B posts on the set. If the tubes light your wiring is wrong somewhere and must be corrected or the more powerful voltage of the B batteries would burn them out.

A little piece of sandpaper is the most convenient tool for removing enamel or fine silk or cotton insulation from wire.

Holes in a bakelite panel can be filled with black sealing wax. If the holes are filled a little more than flush and the entire panel then sandpapered until it has a dull finish, the patch will be scarcely perceptible.

A loosened joint in the soldered connections of a receiver will cause fluctuating signals, or perhaps be the only cause for no signals being heard.

To prolong the life of vacuum tubes they should be burned as dimly as possible at all times. Excessive filament current and plate voltage has the property of destroying the coating of thorium on the filament.

The condition of the alkaline battery is tested by a voltmeter and not by a hydrometer. When fully charged each cell has a potential of 1.4 volts and drops during its use to 1.2 volts.

The wires used to make connections from the storage battery to the receiving set should not be insulated with a cotton covering, as the acid in the battery is likely to attack the insulation and cause a short circuit of the battery. Heavy rubber covered wire with a tarred canvas outside covering is best suited for this purpose.

The scientists now tell us how to eliminate static. It's easy! All you have to do is to construct two antennas ten miles long.

ANNOUNCERS IN EAST TESTED BY NEW STANDARD

Highest Mark Any One Gets Is 66.

New York, March 7.—The Radio Voice Technique committee, the organization which recently created the "Ideal Radio Announcer," held its second meeting recently in the studios of station WJZ, New York City. Seven points of vital importance to the art of radio announcing were discussed by the committee, and a comparison of several representative announcers from the eastern part of the United States was made.

The following is the report of the second meeting.

"At this meeting an endeavor was made to rate representative announcers of the east according to the standards set at the previous meeting," the report of the second meeting states. "Preliminary to the rating of announcers the following questions were discussed: 'Plugging the Air,' 'Extempore vs. Written Announcements,' 'Rhetoric of the Radio Announcement,' 'A Specialized Radio Vocabulary,' 'Trademarking the Announcement,' 'Audience Salutation,' and 'Radio Humor.'"

Must Avoid Gaps.

In regard to plugging the air, the committee decided that all so-called plugging is commendable; that there should be no prolonged gaps in the program allowed by any station. It was added, however, that the cause of such delay should be frankly stated by the announcer, no attempt being made to fool the audience in the belief that the delay was intentional and not unavoidable.

Written announcements were decided upon as much better than those made extemporaneously, the announcement to be made in short, simple sentences, not long, complex ones.

The committee found no objection to "trade-marking" an announcement; that is, the use of identifying station mannerisms, but suggested a ban on such words as "folks," "friends," "people," or other familiarities.

The announcer who attempts to be a humorist as well as an announcer was branded as a "pest."

Personality Not Considered.

"In the rating of a small number of representative announcers of eastern stations," the report says, "the committee was careful to keep in mind the fact that personality was not considered, and that judgment was made entirely upon the closeness of conformity of each announcer to the standards previously set by the committee. The total number of credits possible for each announcer was 100. The rating for the leading twelve announcers follows:

| Announcer. | Station. | Rating. |
|---|---|---|
| Glover | WJZ | 66 |
| McNamee | WEAF | 62 |
| Barnet | WOR | 58 |
| Brokenshire | WJZ | 56 |
| Haupt | WEAF | 54 |
| Page | WEAF | 52 |
| "Roxy" | | 50 |
| C. W. | WIP | 48 |
| Cross | WJZ | 48 |
| Reid | WJZ | 44 |
| Neff | WAHG | 42 |
| Breck | WOR | 38 |
| "N. T. G." | WHN | 30 |

"It is significant that even the highest announcer on this list failed to approach by a wide margin the committee's "ideal radio announcer." The committee hopes to apply the standard tests to western announcers also.

Austria Universities Inaugurate Radio Course

VIENNA, March 7.—The wiener technishes hochule, corresponding scholarship to the American technical universities, have inaugurated a course in radio engineering, soon to be followed by other Austrian schools. The Austrian Broadcasting company is facing the same trouble as the British. It is estimated that thousands own unlicensed sets, and efforts are now being made to find a method to force payment.

W-G-N NOTES

A series of "radio interviews" will be started at W-G-N on Thursday evening, March 19. In these interviews with public officials and famous personages, the announcer will represent the public in asking questions. Both the person being interviewed and the announcer will sit before one microphone in the studio.

Mayor William E. Dever will be "radio interviewed" on March 19 on the question of Chicago traction. All W-G-N listeners are invited to submit to the station the questions they would like to have answered, and as many as posible will be put to the mayor during the interview, so that the public may hear their answers from the mayor himself.

Every Saturday W-G-N is staging Syncopated Matinées, between 3 and 4, a lively hour of snappy music to enliven the half holiday. Charlie Cook's fourteen piece orchestra from Harmon's Dreamland ballroom is now playing every Saturday afternoon.

Up to the minute reports on the butter and egg market for farmers and dealers may be had daily from W-G-N at 11:05 o'clock in the morning. The Chicago mercantile exchange furnishes the station with bulletins on the total receipts of both commodities; the number of cars sold; high, low, and settlement prices, and reports of the "spot market." These are broadcast immediately following the 11 o'clock Board of Trade bulletins.

Next Thursday evening J. L. Jenkins, automobile editor of THE TRIBUNE, will talk from W-G-N on his interesting experiences in mapping auto trails and will describe some of the new highways for 1925 touring.

Firms in Sweden Organize New Radio Association

STOCKHOLM, March 6.—Several of the most important firms here interested in the importation, sale, and production of radio products have formed an association known as Svenska Radio Intressentförbundet (the Swedish Radio association), according to United States Trade Commissioner T. O. Klath. The object of the association is to protect the interests of the Swedish radio industry, to exchange market information, and to promote interest in radio on the part of the public.

CLASSIC GIVES WAY TO FROTHY AND LIGHT MUSIC

New York, March 7.—It is announced that the sixth Victor hour, to be broadcast through a chain of eleven stations Thursday evening, March 12, will be in a much lighter vein than previous concerts. Frothy, popular stuff will replace the classic for a change, and Bill Murray, comedian; Henry Burr, tenor; Rudy Wiedoft, saxophonist, the Peerless Male quartet, and the International Novelty orchestra will provide an hour of syncopated song and music.

PERU TO OPEN HER DOORS TO RADIO PROGRAMS

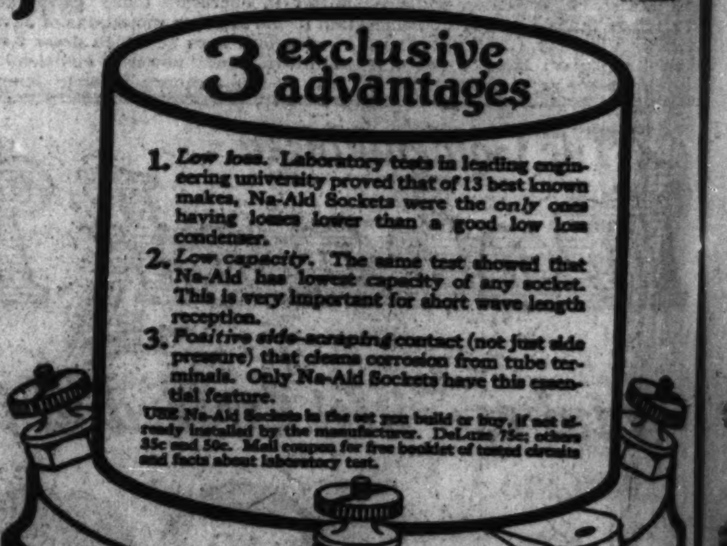
for clearest reception your radio socket must have these



3 exclusive advantages

1. Low loss. Laboratory tests in leading engineering university proved that of 13 best known makes, Na-Ald Sockets were the only ones having losses lower than a good low loss condenser.
2. Low capacity. The same test showed that Na-Ald has lowest capacity of any socket. This is very important for short wave length reception.
3. Positive side-scraping contact (not just side pressure) that cleans corrosion from tube terminals. Only Na-Ald Sockets have this essential feature.

USE Na-Ald Sockets in the set you build or buy, if not already installed by the manufacturer. DeLuxe 75c; others 35c and 50c. Mail coupon for free booklet of tested circuits and facts about laboratory test.

Selectivity Hinge

KILOCYCLES, NOT METERS, SHOULD GOVERN RADIO

Selectivity Hinges on the Former.

Selectivity is the ability of the tuning unit of a radio receiver to separate signals of different stations operating through similar wave channels. It is very often stated that some certain receiver will separate stations operating so many meters apart. This expression has been widely used, but not only does it misrepresent the facts but it is also very misleading to the radio public, according to William J. [illegible], head of the development department of the Reichmann company.

While it is true that with a properly designed receiver it is possible to separate signals as little as two meters apart, this condition does not and cannot apply throughout the operating wave length range of any receivers designed for broadcast reception, no matter how perfect the design. This may seem to be a strong statement, but the following will demonstrate its truth.

Wave Lengths Vary.

When a number of radio telephone stations are broadcasting simultaneously a certain definite difference in wave length between any two stations of adjacent wave length is imperative. This difference in wave length, or frequency, is necessary to permit the carrier wave to be properly modulated by the voice frequencies superimposed upon it. These voice frequencies are both added to and subtracted from the carrier frequency, producing side bands which extend to both sides of the carrier frequency.

It is customary to allow a band of five kilocycles on each side of the carrier frequency for the voice modulation, as this will accommodate musical pitches as high as 5,000 vibrations a second. The actual band of frequencies required by each broadcasting station is, therefore, five kilocycles above and five kilocycles below the carrier frequency, or a band ten kilocycles in width.

The broadcast wave length band, expressed in meters, is from 200 to 550. With a receiver said to be capable of separating stations two meters apart, one would naturally expect to be able to separate two stations operating on wave lengths of 200 and 202 meters, respectively, provided, of course, that they were of the same intensity, and also to separate just as effectively two stations of 548 meters and 550 meters wave length.

Tune Out Low Waves.

In the first case it is possible to successfully separate two stations as little as two meters apart in the neighborhood of 200 meters, provided good design exists. The second case, involving stations in the neighborhood of 550 meters, is entirely impossible, regardless of the design of the receiver, for the following reason:

The frequency of a signal whose wave length is 200 meters is 1,500 kilocycles. The frequency of a signal whose wave length is 202 meters is 1,485 kilocycles, or a difference of fifteen kilocycles. However, this is where the rub comes. A 550 meter wave length is equal to a frequency of 545 kilocycles. Then 548 meters is equal to a frequency of 547 kilocycles, or a difference in frequency of about two kilocycles. It can readily be seen that a receiver which separated signals two meters apart at 200 meters could not separate signals two meters apart at 550 meters, as the difference in meters does not represent the same relation as the difference in frequency in kilocycles. The higher the frequency in kilocycles the smaller the wave length in meters, and vice versa, but the frequency does not vary directly in proportion to the wave length, as the above example demonstrates.

The conclusion is that it is incorrect to claim that a receiver is capable of separating signals a given number of meters apart, as this does not hold true of the entire wave length band. It would be much more correct to state that a receiver is capable of separating signals having a certain difference in frequency. This figure would actually describe the selectiveness of the receiver, not only on any given portion of the wave band but also over its entire operating band.

France to Have World's Most Powerful Station

GENEVA, March 7.—[By Associated Press.]—Wireless apparatus so powerful that it will enable communication with ships crossing both the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, and be in touch with all parts of the globe, will be erected on Mount Saleve together with the world's largest observatory which the French government proposes to build there. Four years will be required to build the observatory and wireless station. It is expected that when completed it will become the seat of the international meteorological office.

FIRE CHIEF HAS RECEIVING SET IN HIS ROADSTER

The roadster used by the superintendent of police and fire signals of Dallas, Tex., is equipped with a radio receiver, so that the driver can pick up alarms while driving about the city. The fire chief in this way is able to keep in constant touch with the central fire station.

An incident which proved the value of the innovation developed recently when Supt. Garrett was speeding across a concrete viaduct on his way to a fire in the western outskirts of the city; an alarm was turned in from the extreme eastern edge of the city, eleven miles distant. Supt. Garrett quickly visited the first fire and informed his chief that a blaze had developed in another section, thereby permitting him to properly divide various fire fighting companies.

Radio Aids in Cure of Tuberculosis

Minneapolis, Minn., March 7.—Dr. Walter K. Foley of the Veterans' hospital here says a radio set will do more to cure tuberculosis than any other apparatus yet devised. "The greatest obstacle to a cure in most cases," he says, "is a worried and harassed state of mind on the part of the patient. A radio set gives him something to think about and take his mind off his troubles. Natures does the rest."

KING GEORGE TO INSTALL RADIO ON ROYAL YACHT

To "Listen In" on Cruise in Mediterranean.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, March 7.—The finest available radio set, equipped with a loud speaker, will be installed on the royal yacht Victoria and Albert for the entertainment of the king and queen on their Mediterranean cruise. Both are keenly interested in radio, listening in as often as possible when in London. The queen especially enjoys talks and lectures, while both are fond of concerts by the Savoy band, specializers in American syncopated song hits.

The royal pair anticipate spending their idle hours aboard the yacht listening in to broadcast programs because the burden of their duties and engagements ashore prevent their devoting extended time to broadcasting. The yacht will always be in constant touch with London, but this is the first time specific arrangements have been made to receive radio programs. The yacht should pick up Madrid excellently, although with a large portion of the British fleet in the Mediterranean there is likely to be naval interference.

Collect $1,250,000 in Licenses.

Radio has proved to be a good source of revenue for the British postoffice. In 1924 the postoffice collected $1,250,000 for wireless license fees. About two-thirds goes to the British Broadcasting company, which runs British radioland.

Tetrazzini, the famous soprano, will make her radio debut in England on March 10, heading an all star concert under the auspices of the London Evening Standard. Tetrazzini, who is an arden radio fan, with one of the finest receiving sets in Italy, will make a flying trip to London solely to sing over the radio. The concert will be transmitted from all the British stations, including Chelmsford high powered station, call 5-XX, wavelength 1,600 meters. The concerts will probably be heard all over the continent.

Radio in Czecho-Slovakia.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PRAGUE, Mar. 7.—Radio amateurs within hearing distance of the Prague broadcasting station soon will be able to tune in on all important programs from the Czech national theater, Concerthaus, as well as speeches in the national parliament. Plans are being made to connect these institutions with the local broadcasting stations in order to make interest in wireless nation wide.

Expect Boom in Bulgaria.

SOFIA, March 7.—The number of radio sets in Bulgaria is expected to increase as high as 500,000 per cent next year. Because of the present stringent prohibitory law there are only four receiving sets in the entire country. Any on possessing a set is liable to suffer confiscation of the apparatus and a jail sentence and fine. The government now is planning to modify these strict measures by a system of control. The concession for national broadcasting will be awarded the first company able to meet the government qualifications, but it must be purely a Bulgarian enterprise. It is specified for a while that only news features and agricultural lectures will be permitted to be broadcasted, but the radio fans hope later to secure permissions for concerts and programs like other countries.

Radio Fans!
What's wrong with this picture?

An appeal to the chivalry and courtesy of radio-lovers everywhere

Editorial Note

Real genius does not work for money alone. The hunger for appreciation has always been the main incentive with the true artist.

Better radio programs will come when more radio fans adopt the gracious custom of sending a few words of praise and "applause" to radio artists entitled to the compliment.

WHEN you've done a good job, there's no sweeter thrill than to have someone slap you on the back, in honest admiration—and say "ATTA BOY!"

Likewise, there's no deeper ache than to have your heartful effort greeted by a chilling silence.

"Applause" has always been the richest reward for worthy endeavor—to business man and mechanic, to you and to me—as well as to actor and grand opera star.

But what of the radio artist?

Because he sends his effort out into the black night—to the unknown home and the unknown listener—he is none the less eager, none the less hungry, for a sincere and cheering "ATTA BOY!" from those he is trying to please.

The radio entertainer is, after all, a human being. Can you reasonably expect him to continue to perform with ever-increasing ardor and skill, if you deny him all of the plaudits and recognition so humanly necessary to the rest of us?

Radio programs will grow better when radio fans grow freer and more frequent in the habit of saying "ATTA BOY!" to those radio favorites who deserve congratulatory appreciation.

Well, suppose you invited your favorite Radio entertainer to come to your home, in person, and "do his stuff" in your living room.

Would you and your guests turn your backs on him at the completion of his program—with nary a handclap or a compliment?

Certainly not.

Then is it fair to take his entertainment "out of the air" night after night, without sending him a single "Thank-you" for it?

The average Radio entertainer donates his time and talent, as a labor of love. You pay him nothing in money, for the mirth, melody or wisdom he brings to your fireside. Isn't it little enough to pay him with an occasional graceful compliment by sending an APPLAUSE CARD?

A year and a half ago, to encourage the sending of merited "Thank-yous" to Radio performers, the makers of the famous DICTOGRAND Loudspeakers created a unique little postal called "THE APPLAUSE CARD."

Here was a handy vehicle for sending a cheery "ATTA BOY" to deserving Radio favorites, requiring only a few strokes of the pen and a one cent stamp to speed it on its genial mission.

So popular did these APPLAUSE CARDS become that in a few months more than five million of them were sought and mailed by radio-lovers.

So to keep this little messenger of Good Wishes and Good Will on its merry way, in larger quantities than ever, we are publishing this announcement in all the leading newspapers throughout America, after having arranged with Radio dealers everywhere to distribute a supply of APPLAUSE CARDS, with our compliments, to all Radio-lovers who will call and ask for them.

If better Radio programs are to come, YOU must have a hand in them, dear listener-in. Do not pass the buck entirely to the broadcaster. You have your tastes and viewpoints. Use the APPLAUSE CARD not only to send deserved compliments, but constructive suggestions as well.

Yes, there's a selfish postscript to this advertisement

We do not deny that we're hoping this announcement will make you better acquainted with the DICTOGRAND Loud speakers. But that's not all selfish. It's in your interest as well as ours.

Among radio fans who get their radio information from hearsay, there may be several impressions as to which is the best Loudspeaker. But opinions do not differ among recognized radio engineers.

The DICTOGRAND is the only speaker made by an organization of Acoustic engineers with twenty years' experience in the making of acute sound transmitting and reproducing instruments.

It is the only Loudspeaker which "builds-up" sound without lowering the pitch—without "megaphoning" treble into contralto or baritone into bass. It is the one Loudspeaker which betters the set—and brings the best in reproduction from the best in reception.

So when you call for your APPLAUSE CARDS, please make this test:—hear the DICTOGRAND in comparison with any number of other speakers—and thus settle your mind, for all time, on the question of Loudspeaker supremacy and superior service.

COUNTY SCHOOLS ADD RADIO TO WEEKLY CLASSES

One School Broadcasts, Others Listen.

BY FRANK HINMAN.

The ancient country school custom of using the last hour of the school session on Friday afternoon for the speaking of pieces, etc., has been revived in the county schools of Cook county, with this difference. Instead of each one of the 175 different schools holding its own program, one school puts on the program and it is broadcast by radio to the remainder.

Three weeks ago, through an arrangement with WLS, Edward J. Tobin, county superintendent of schools, inaugurated the use of radio as a means of instruction in the county schools and for the past two weeks pupils have been putting on the programs. These have proved so successful and have raised such a spirit of rivalry among the students of the different districts and schools that Mr. Tobin has announced that they are to become a regular part of the weekly work and it is compulsory for the pupils to attend the radio classes.

Bartlett Students Broadcast.

The radio programs are put on under the supervision of the country life director of the district, the teacher of the particular school which has been chosen to do the broadcasting being in charge. The programs consist of "One Minute Dairy Talks," by various pupils, boys and girls taking equal part in the work.

Last Friday's program was given by the pupils of Bartlett school, district No. 49, under the direction of Miss Madeline K. Mascha, teacher, and the supervision of Otto F. Aken, country life director. An idea of the variety of subjects touched by the students in the hour they are on the air can be gathered from the following program of Friday's activities:

|---|---|
| Music | Pupils |
| Introduction | Grace Krumfus |
| Music | Pupils |
| The Cow, the Foster Mother of Man | Roger Moffett |
| The Brown Swiss Cattle | John Fens |
| The Ayrshire Cattle | Albert Winkleman |
| The Guernsey Cattle | Arthur Haase |
| The Holstein-Friesian Cattle | Ray Norton Jr. |
| The Jersey Cattle | Edward Kennecke |

| Butter | Dorothy Sodman |
| Fable About Cheese | Gladys Johnson |
| Cheese | Myrtle Winkleman |
| Miscellaneous | Pupils |
| Conclusion | Grace Krumfus |

Parents Like Idea.

"The idea of having different schools broadcast," said Mr. Tobin, "met with instant approval, not only from the pupils themselves but from their parents, and now it is a common sight to see many of the older folks in the classrooms when the pupils go on the air.

"I believe that the Cook county schools were the first to adopt radio as a means of instruction on such a large scale, but I have little doubt that it will be only a short time before all the large school systems in the country will be using it."

SHORT WAVES IN DAYLIGHT GO ACROSS OCEAN

South Manchester, Conn., March 7.—In broad daylight at 10 a. m. eastern standard time, when radio waves generally reach out with only a small percentage of their normal strength on account of the deadening effect of the sun's rays, John L. Reinartz, inventor and radio amateur of this place, succeeded in sending signals from his code transmitter across the Atlantic ocean. He used a wave length of twenty-one meters, further proving his theory that the very short waves can be as effective in daylight as the longer waves are at night.

"This feat is the culmination of many months of experimenting, during which Reinartz has been coöperating with the navy department and amateur members of the American Radio Relay League. His success in being heard across the Atlantic in daylight was confirmed by the A. R. R. L. following receipt of a radiogram from a British operator. His signals were picked up with great reliability by F. A. Mayer, radio amateur of Wickford, Essex, England.

WLS Adds Church to Sunday Evening Features

"The Little Brown Church in the Vale," described as a laymen's community church, is being broadcast every Sunday evening between 7 and 8 from WLS. The new church services are conducted by the staff of the Agricultural foundation. Two trial services were held, one on Feb. 22 and the other March 1, without previous announcement, and the response has been so definite that the station decided to make its community church a regular Sunday evening feature.

HERE IS WHAT HAPPENS FROM 'MIKE' TO PHONES

Expert Explains Duties of Various Waves.

What happens in a broadcasting station, and how the waves travel from the speaker in front of the microphone to your loud speaker is an interesting and appealing subject for every one who is interested in radio, according to E. N. Rauland, Chicago radio expert.

"When no sound is being made in front of the microphone, the electromagnet energy being sent out over the broadcasting aerial takes the form of a pure sine wave," Mr. Rauland said. "This generated energy cannot be heard if passed through a telephone receiver and can only be heard by a receiver that is oscillating. It then takes the form of the familiar carrier wave whistle.

The "Carrier Wave."

"When the announcer begins to speak, the sound waves of his voice are carried over the telephone wires to the radio transmitting station, where they are impressed on the radio frequency or 'carrier wave' as it is generated. The contour of the wave form no longer remains uniform, but is broken up into variations and molded into the shape of the waves from the speaker's voice.

"This 'modulated' current is then forced into the antenna, sending out electro-magnetic waves which have impressed on them 'audio-frequency' vibrations of the speaker. These waves travel in all directions until they strike the receiving antenna system. The amount of energy that is received is very much smaller than what is sent out over the broadcasting aerial, but it retains exactly the same wave form as sent out.

Sound Is Amplified.

"The received current when passed through a radio frequency amplifier still retains its form but becomes much stronger. The current then goes through the detector unit, after which it has approximately the form shown as "detected." The original oscillations have disappeared, and we have instead a current flowing in one direction only, but varying in strength, or pulsating according to the shape of the sound waves. Without this change in the shape of the wave it would be impossible to actuate the telephone diaphragms.

"The current as it comes from the detector is generally not of sufficient strength to operate a loud speaker, so it is passed through an audio frequency amplifier. It now becomes strong enough to energize the magnets of the loud speaker, causing the diaphragm to vibrate and send out waves in the air which reproduce, more or less faithfully, those originally created in the studio.

"Thus is completed the process which has, within a few months, transformed us into a nation of radio enthusiasts."

RADIO HELP TO STENOGRAPHERS FOR SPEED TESTS

The radio is of peculiar value to shorthand writers, inasmuch as it offers them the opportunity to become proficient. Speeches are broadcast daily which, if taken down, help the writer to gain speed. As a means of increasing general knowledge it is hard to excel. Many business schools throughout the country have had receiving sets installed in the classrooms and have found them very effective. Frequently a New York station, coöperating with a local business school, broadcasts a radio shorthand contest. The last contest attracted much attention among shorthand writers. Writers who desire to become more efficient have only to get out their notebooks and tune in.

BROADCASTING STATION WITH WHEELS ON IT

Can Be Heard 400 Miles Away.

A broadcasting station on wheels, the invention of a Chicago radio firm, is the latest stunt in the radio field. The station is to be a 250 watt one, operating on continuous wave and phone. Such a station is generally heard within a radius of 400 to 500 miles, favorable atmospheric conditions often increasing its radius to nearly 1,000 miles.

"In building this station we have only one object," said an official of the concern making it, "and that is to give the radio fans in small towns where there are no stations, an opportunity to broadcast their own programs. There is plenty of local talent in every fair sized town, and I am sure that it would add immensely to their enjoyment of the radio if they could themselves 'appear over the radio' from time to time."

The entire transmitting apparatus will be mounted on a large moto truck especially built for this purpose. It is estimated that the cost of constructing the "station on wheels" will be approximately $30,000. Sleeping accommodations and quarters for the crew which will operate it are also included. The car will start from Chicago on a tour of the east late next month and later make a western trip.

THE NEW MORRISON HOTEL
Largest—and Most Reasonably Priced—in the World

VALUABLE store subleases have long made it possible for the Morrison to rent rooms for $3 to $5 that would cost $5 to $8 in any other leading hotel. A recently obtained "sky-lease" will, however, enable the hotel to maintain this policy on a far larger scale. The new Clark St. addition will contain 850 rooms—400 in the tower—practically without ground rent.

The present capacity (1,054 outside rooms, each with bath) will eventually be 3,400, making the Morrison the largest hotel on earth.

The Morrison is the home of the Terrace Garden, the internationally famous "dance and dine" rendezvous. The specialties to be presented throughout the week beginning Monday, March 9, will be as follows:

FRED TRAVERS AND HIS ORCHESTRA
Interpreting America's Finest Dance Music
BEN BLUE
The Ace of Pantomimic Comedians
VERNA FONTAINE
Favorite Musical Comedy Soprano
ANETA GAY

MRS. WILLIAM P. REND.
[Raymor Photo.]

Chicago society's young women are called upon on so many occasions to appear in amateur charity benefits and tableaux and pantomimes, that their experience enables them to perform to good advantage in the Actors' Fund benefit, an annual potpourri staged by professional actors and actresses to aid their unfortunate fellows, and including one "society girl" act.

Miss Rosemary Gallery and Miss Marjorie Allen, two of the season's buds, and Mrs. William P. Rend (Katherine Prest) are among the group in this year's benefit, to take place on Friday afternoon, March 20, at the Auditorium theater.

The sketch to be produced by the amateurs, and which is being arranged by Miss Sarane Otis, will have as its kenyote modern sports. Tennis, polo, swimming, and golf will be represented appropriately.

Miss Gallery, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Gallery of 79 East Elm street, was a member of the debutante chorus of the Service club's musical comedy, "Cynthia," and also took part in the Billboard Ball tableaux.

Miss Allen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin C. Allen of 1448 State parkway, has just returned from a winter sojourn of several weeks in the east. She also has appeared in various performances with debutantes.

Mrs. Rend wears the laurels of a season or more of dancing and acting in Junior league and Service club plays.

Longworths' Baby Might Have Been but Isn't Theodora

By Mme. X.

WHAT the Windsor family, root and branch, is to the English, so, perhaps to a lesser degree, the Roosevelt family is to the American people. When Princess Alice Longworth had a little daughter born to her in Chicago recently, from one end of the country to the other admirers of her famous father wrote urging her to name the child Theodora, which is a beautiful, appropriate, and unusual name.

Being a "chip of the old block," the avalanche of letters put her entirely off the idea; the one name that seemed utterly impossible was Theodora; her child was not to be handicapped by a celebrated ancestor; she should have a chance to grow up and be herself; she should have a name quite unknown up to now in the Roosevelt family; she should be named for the great apostle, St. Paul, Paul the disciple and teacher, Paul the poet and revivalist, Paul the one of all the little band that followed Christ whom Mrs. Longworth most admired; so Paulina she is to be henceforth, and, mind you, it is not Pauleena; it is Paul-i-na, with a long i.

She ought to be a remarkable and interesting young person when she grows up, considering her ancestry on both sides. Her maternal grandfather was known the world over. Her paternal grandfather is perhaps not so widely renowned, though he was in his day a distinct personality. He is remembered by people down along the Ohio river as having been the man who introduced grape culture into Ohio, to be used in making the native wine. He was the object of what was in its time a famous repartee. When the poet, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, was introduced to Mr. Longworth the latter remarked upon the similarity of their names and said that they ought to be in some way related.

Said the genial New England poet: "I'm afraid not; it's worth makes the man, the want of it the fellow."

Bad News to Greet Them.

All who know them—and they have many friends here in Chicago—will be sorry to hear of the disaster which befell the Malcolm Moncrieffes just as they landed in this country ten days ago. They had been spending the winter with Mr. Moncrieffe's English and Scotch relatives, visiting at all sorts of great and famous estates, including Longleith castle, one of the most splendid of English country houses, and were on their way back to their ranch in Wyoming when they got news of the complete destruction by fire of their house in Big Horn county. It contained not only all their household belongings, clothes, books, and general equipment, but also much of the beautiful old family silver which had been in the Moncrieffe family for generations, as well as some of the old treasures of the Walker family. Also all of Mr. Moncrieffe's saddles were in the house and went up in smoke. He is a great rider and has played polo for years, and most of the saddles were of best English make, hard to replace and a great loss to their owner.

The Moncrieffes were in Philadelphia when they got word of the catastrophe, and immediately started back to their ranch, stopping in Chicago merely overnight last Sunday with Mrs. Moncrieffe's niece, Mrs. Paul Welling. They are going to set up what is left of their household possessions in a little four room cabin on the ranch and are planning to rebuild as soon as possible. But building out in the Big Horn valley is not so easy as it is in Chicago. Workmen and materials have to be hauled from Sheridan, many miles away.

Mrs. Moncrieffe's brother-in-law and sister, the Oliver Henry Wallops, have a ranch next to that of the Moncrieffes and the two families have been raising horses, cattle, sheep, and cereals for nearly three decades in that lovely, rockbound valley at the foot of the Big Horn range of mountains. When they first went there they had no neighbors and owned nearly all of the land in sight. Mr. Moncrieffe's brother, William Moncrieffe, was with him at that time. They supplied the British troops with remounts during the Boer war, and did a similar business during the world war.

Evolution of a Wilderness.

Today that country, like so much other land that has been used for grazing, is undergoing the inevitable transition from pasturage to agricultural pursuits, and settlers of all kinds are coming in. It is not so many years ago that the mountain streams in that region were thickly stocked with brook trout; innumerable beavers built their villages in every water course, creating miniature lakes in which there were all sorts of delicious fish. The meadows where sheep and horses browsed were at certain seasons of the year carpeted with delicious mushrooms. In spring and autumn huge flocks of wild ducks flew overhead and nested along the waterways. Up in the nearby mountains deer were in abundance. The woods and little bushy valleys were alive with prairie chicken, partridges, and other game birds. Adventurous hunters, exploring the mountains, sometimes came across bears, brown, black, or even grizzly. In short, it was an ideal place in the eyes of the sport loving band of young Englishmen who came out to this country in the '80s and '90s of the last century to make their living and get elbow room.

Time has wrought great changes there, as was to be expected. Western ranch life was bound to be but a fleeting phase of the opening of this big continent. Shepherds and cowboys have had to change into farmers. Wild duck still fly overhead in the Big Horn country, but not in such flocks. The partridges still drum in the woods there, thanks to the game protecting laws which the English settlers made such a point of getting passed, but not in such numerous coveys. A few shy deer still furtively glide from shade to shade, but they are getting scarcer. I don't know whether the mushrooms still flourish, but it's a safe guess that the trout are not so plentiful as they were twenty or thirty years ago. But one can ride from Sheridan, the fifteen mile distant banking, gossiping, market town, to Big Horn in a motor in a quarter the time it used to take to make the distance in buckboard or buggy.

It was a racial characteristic which sent the young Moncrieffes, "Noll" Wallop and his cousin, "Mike" Evans, out to that primitive, unsettled country in their youth after being brought up in what at that time was the most luxurious and splendid country life in the world. It is the same spirit that caused Englishmen to open up all the remote corners of the globe. It has made the British empire. It is not merely the desire to make a living, but is the expression of a passion for high adventure, which sends these young men overseas and across continents and into wildernesses.

Long of Chicago.

Mrs. Moncrieffe and Mrs. Wallop are daughters of a well known Chicago family, their father having been Samuel J. Walker, one of the first and most enterprising of the city's dealers in real estate. The Walkers came from Kentucky at about the close of the civil war and joined the already well known colony from their state—the Honorés, Kerfoots, Harrisons, and others, on the west side in the neighborhood of Ashland and Washington boulevards, which was at that time out in the fields.

A little after the Chicago fire the Walkers moved to the north side, on the corner of North Clark and Diversey avenue, where they occupied a large house set in a good sized garden. There were in the family six children—three sons and three daughters. Of these none now live in Chicago, though of the third generation there are here several young and promising families: Mrs. William A. Field, Mrs. Paul Welling, Charles M. Walker, all children of the late Judge Charles M.

Lenten Sundays Exempt.

Even in old times, when the proper observance of Lent was much more literally interpreted than it is today, Sundays were exempt from the forty day fast and were always made the occasion of cheerful gatherings. Today, in what is left of our gay and enterprising society, there are several entertainments on the calendar. Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick is giving a large buffet luncheon, to which most of those still to be found on these bleak and frosty shores will hie themselves at 1 o'clock. Mrs. McCormick entertains with more stateliness, more form, more of old time elegance than any one else in Chicago. Her house is spacious; she has many footmen in livery always in attendance, besides several butlers. Her gold plate is famous for its beauty, its historic association and its splendor. Mrs. McCormick is as stately and dignified as her establishment, besides which she has one of the best chefs in town, so her parties are real functions and are so considered by her large circle of friends and acquaintances.

Another luncheon which will help pass the day of leisure for a group of well known people is Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman's luncheon for Cyril Maude, which will bring a company of people to her charming Rush street house. Mrs. Coleman is one of the most popular hostesses in town, and, although it is many years since she and her family came from Philadelphia, she still has the Philadelphia tradition for hospitality. Every one who knows anything, knows that the inhabitants of the City of Brotherly Love have been celebrated since long before the war of the revolution for their extra delicious cooking.

Mrs. Coleman always gives her guests some dishes they can't get anywhere else. She calls them "Specialité de la maison" (specialties of the house), and they certainly are mouth watering and wonderful. She has, for instance, a special recipé for baked beans that would make Bostonians turn a livid green with envy.

Cortot at the Piano.

A genuine musical treat is in store in the near future for Chicago's beau monde. Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Bennett are giving a musical next Sunday evening at the Casino with Alfred Cortot, the French composer and pianist, at the piano. Of all the many forms of entertainment, there is none more chic, and—to use an old fashioned word—elegant than a musical. It is esthetic and is a form of entertaining only possible to people of means and cultivated tastes. A well dressed company in the leisurely atmosphere of a musical, in attractive surroundings is a high expression of civilization and its pastimes.

Music is the one art in which we of today excel all who have gone before us. In painting, in sculpture, in architecture, in poetry, in writing of all kinds we have not touched the high water mark of other ages, but in music we are far ahead of any preceding time. And in the forefront of this mode of expression today are the Russians. It has been a great treat recently to hear with the Symphony orchestra first one week Stravinsky, the composer, and the following week Brailowsky, the pianist. We have emerged from the infantile era when we considered that a musician was only interesting if he had a shaggy mane of hair. Paderewski's hirsute aureole is not so captivating nowadays as it was twenty or more years ago.

Brailowsky has no such adventitious aids to make his playing interesting. He is tall, good looking, with a serious, almost sad, expression on his young, smooth shaven face. His playing is thrilling even to the unmusical, like the writer. The notes seem to trickle off his finger tips like rain drops at night after a summer storm and when the moon has come out from behind the clouds. Or else they resound like trumpets calling soldiers to a charge.

Dress Report from Paris.

To leap from crag to crag: a recent letter written by a well known young Chicago belle that has come the way of this p. p. p. says that in Paris "Dresses are all short, up to the knees. They either have long sleeves or none at all, and are trimmed with a great deal of embroidery. Summer afternoon dresses are of chiffon, and sleeveless. Tailored dresses have box plaits in front and are plain in the back. Beige is a good color, and black very good. I have seen several velvet and velveteen coats, gray and green, with a good deal of fur, which are smart. Kasha cloth is used mostly for sports, in all colors. Two piece dresses are the usual thing—a long, tight-fitting blouse and skirt with box plaits in front or straight. The one piece dress has box plaits in front or one on each side to flare out. Hats are small, mostly felt, some turned up in the back and down in front, others turned up at both ends. All small hats have rhinestone pins, mostly like animals, more or less on the side. Shoes have straps, mostly, but are more pointed, and the majority are made of alligator skin. They are still wearing light stockings of an orangy shade."

There! That is the latest word from Paris, composed of observations made by a keen-eyed young Chicago girl who has had opportunities to see whatever is to be seen. I am sorry for the alligators and crocodiles, and promise not to wear any shoes made from their hides. Besides, I have seen alligator skin shoes, and they are not pretty. Frocks plaited in front, orange-hued hose, hats turned up fore and aft, alligator skin shoes—well, the prospect isn't pleasing, but we have to get used to each new fashion as it appears, and generally manage to do so. So I suppose that in time many of us will turn up on the avenue with high-prowed hats, frocks on hind side before, stockings to make an orange envious, and pockmarked shoes, and no one will pay particular attention to the getup. O, Eve, little did you know what you started when you pinned those leaves together to make an apron for yourself!

Annual Actors' Benefit.

Shades of Joseph Jefferson, Lawrence Barrett, Lester Wallack, Edwin Booth, Henry E. Abbey, Daniel Frohman, P. T. Barnum, A. M. Palmer, J. H. Haverly, David Henderson, W. J. Florence, and their far-famed contemporaries will stand about behind the chairs of those getting up the annual actors' fund benefit which will be presented on Friday afternoon, March 20, at the Auditorium. Among the stage celebrities who will be here at that time and will take part in the entertainment are Blanche Ring, Charles Winninger, Cyril Maude and members of his company, Fred Stone, his exquisite daughter, Dorothy, and O. P. Heggie. In short, practically every one who will be on Chicago boards that day will contribute his or her services to help to raise money to defray the expenses of the home for aged and disabled actors on Staten Island and Evergreen cemetery, which were founded two generations ago by the group of great actors mentioned above.

The wedding of Miss Dixie Davis, daughter of George C. Davis of 136 Wesley avenue, Oak Park, to Harold Davis, son of Mrs. Cora Davis of 7022 Constance avenue, took place on Feb. 28 at the First Congregational church of Oak Park.

The profession of acting is the most precarious of all callings. No actor can count on long and regular seasons. Sometimes he gets only a ten or twelve week engagement out of the fifty two weeks of the year in which a man and his family have to be clothed, fed, and sheltered. There are over 20,000 in the dramatic profession "whose only accomplishment," as their appeal states it, "is that of entertaining and amusing the public." Over $100,000 a year in relief work is spent by the board of directors managing the fund, which includes assisting disabled or out of work actors and actresses as well as running the home and caring for the cemetery. It is an enterprise that should make an appeal to all of us. Besides which, the show will be a good one and enable the audience to see at one time all of the stage stars in town at that time.

Of Value to the Public.

The city's organizations for the improvement of existing conditions are active and flourishing these days. The Merit Service dinner will draw many interested folk to the Hotel Sherman next Wednesday evening at 6:30. The speakers will be Mayor Dever, Dr. Leonard D. White of the University of Chicago, Mrs. Lottie Holman O'Neil, Republican member of the Fifty-fourth general assembly; Robert Catherwood, president of the Civil Service Reform league; Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, chairman of the women's national Democratic committee, and Col. William Gorham Rice, member of the New York state civil service commission.

Eighteen of the city's most influential associations for public interests are coöperating to make this dinner an important event. Mrs. Murry Nelson is one of those most energetic in getting it up.

The English-Speaking union is interested in a different line of work which will be of value to the public. It is the Chicago end of a big organization that stretches from the central office on Trafalgar square, in the center of London, out over this western continent. Its aim is to foster and strengthen the friendship and mutual understanding of all English-speaking peoples to the end that they may become even more of a factor in the direction of civilization than they are now. Next Friday the Chicago chapter of the E. S. U. is invited to a tea at 4 o'clock at the Chicago Woman's club, the guest of honor being that popular actor, Cyril Maude.

MRS. CHARLES HENRY LYTLE.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Freeman of 5636 Prairie avenue have announced the marriage of their daughter, Alice Evelyn, to Charles Henry Lytle of 7120 Ridgeland avenue.

American visitors in London find the English headquarters of this society of infinite value to them. It is run by some of the most prominent persons in the British capital. It is a source of excellent counsel and real help to those seeking places in which to live, or good motor service, or entrée to famous houses and gardens, or anything else that a tourist wants in the way of direction and inspiration.

Illinois D. A. R. to Hold Meet in Joliet This Month

By Kate Webber.

THE twenty-ninth annual state conference of the Illinois Daughters of the American Revolution will be held at Joliet on March 24, 25, and 26. Mrs. Charles E. Herrick, the state regent, will preside and the Louis Joliet chapter will be hostess. The active membership of the national society is over 140,000, and Illinois has about 8,500 members.

The D. A. R. is essentially a patriotic and historical society, its chief work being along educational lines. It marks famous historic spots, collects records and historical data, and relics of the revolutionary period. The Illinois Daughters, under the leadership of the state historian, Mrs. T. O. Perry, are collecting original documents and data about the history of Illinois. An annual report is sent to the Smithsonian institution at Washington.

As a patriotic society, the D. A. R. translates its patriotism into everyday usefulness, which finds its highest expression in the various phases of Americanization work. Realizing their responsibility as the descendants of the men and women who rendered service in the war for independence, the Daughters of the American Revolution, have undertaken the task of helping the foreign born in our midst. Mrs. William L. Pattison of 419 Belmont avenue, Chicago, is state chairman of patriotic education and Americanization, and with the assistance of Mrs. John Garfield Jordan, vice chairman for Chicago, she is directing important work for the foreign born here. In coöperation with other organizations doing citizenship work and with the help of friendly judges, the Daughters of the American Revolution hold ceremonies in the courts when the new citizens receive their naturalization papers. A short talk by the judge is followed by a brief address of inspiration and congratulation by an outside speaker. The Daughters present flags and "manuals of information" to the new citizens. The manuals are published in English, Italian, Spanish, Yiddish, Hungarian, Russian, Polish, French, and German; and are free for direct distribution to foreigners. These manuals are given also to immigrants on shipboard and at Ellis island. The Daughters are glad of the opportunity of coöperating with the Association of Commerce, which inaugurated these court ceremonies.

The Americanization committee sends speakers and visitors to some of the evening classes in the public schools, where the foreign born are learning English and citizenship, to let the newcomer know we are friendly and appreciate the best he can bring to us and make him realize the necessity of his participation in our government. Whenever a group desires it, it is taken to the Chicago Historical society and introduced to the treasures there. Parties are furnished for foreign mother groups, especially for the pension mothers who are studying to take out their citizenship papers. Last year citizenship classes in public evening schools were inaugurated. Celebrations will be held this month in several evening schools.

The Americanization workers of the five Chicago chapters and the Oak Park chapter hold a joint meeting the last Monday of every month at the Hotel La Salle, when problems of immigration, naturalization, and other phases of the work are discussed.

While the Daughters of the American Revolution are holding out friendly hands to the foreign born, the society is also aiding and establishing schools for our native born in our southern mountains. Shut off since the days of the revolutionary war by the barriers of the Appalachian range, these unfortunate people of the hills have nevertheless preserved many of the traditions, high ideals of loyalty, and courage of their colonial forbears. The Daughters fully maintain the educational plant at Tamassee, S. C. Last year the Illinois Daughters raised the money for the library building at Tamassee and this year they are furnishing it. At the last state conference they voted to give a perpetual scholarship to the Matthew T. Scott Jr. Academy and Industrial school of Phelps, Ky., in honor of Mrs. Matthew T. Scott, honorary president general from Illinois.

CLUB ETHICS

By Maude Swalm Evans.

"WE certainly had a hot time at our club election yesterday—and an enjoyable one, too," said Miss Saddler to her friend.

"You must have been on the winning side," guessed the friend.

"I was. You see, being business women, we think we haven't time to get out ballots, so we simplify things by having our president appoint the nominating committee at one meeting, and then we have the report of the committee and the election at the next meeting.

"The drawback to such a system is that a president can keep herself in office indefinitely by appointing her friends on the nominating committee. We have no tenure of office limit in our club. We've had the same president for the last nine years, and most of the members have felt for some time that a change would be a good thing, but they didn't know just how to go about getting it.

"This year, as per usual, the president named three of her friends, in the belief that they'd return her and would nominate the ones she wanted for the other offices, and then she put on two members from the opposing faction, for the sake of appearances."

"A real politician," I see.

"The chairman of the nominating committee, the president's special friend," Miss Saddler continued, "brought in her report according to expectations; it was, however, signed by the president's three friends only. The chairman moved its adoption. The motion was seconded.

"Then one of the opposing members got the floor and proceeded to give the minority report, with entirely different names for every office, and she moved that it be substituted for the majority report.

"The minority members had kept their intentions to themselves, and they had worked so quietly to get all the members out that the president's followers were dumfounded when things began to happen.

"The president tried to stall, but she had to put the substitute motion finally, and it went over with a bang." She's an "ex" now.

Two Wrong.

"So you and Dick are to be married? I thought it was a mere flirtation."

"So did he!" B. B.

Heard It Before.

Teacher—Order, please.

Absent Minded Student—Egg sandwich. M. E. F.

Almost an Alibi.

Mrs. Keyhammer.—Why don't you like my playing? You know, "music hath charms to soothe the savage breast."

Her Husband.—Mebby it hath. I s'pose I'm not savage enough. J. C. K.

Beautiful but Dumb.

Customer (to clerk)—I want to buy some lard.

Grocer—Pail?

Customer—I didn't know it came in two shades. W. J.

Off His Beat.

Spillville was a small town. The fire department consisted of one fireman, one horse, and a wagon with a garden hose on it.

Since this town seldom had a fire, the fireman took the horse around the block every morning for exercise. One morning when there really was a fire the horse, instead of going in that direction, went around the block and back into the barn, as was his daily custom. G. S.

The Very Idea.

Mrs. Smith—How did Helen get on with her history examination?

Mrs. Jones—She failed. What else can you expect? Why, they asked her qustions about things that happened before she was born! D. E. McJ.

Well Trained.

Sorry, dear. I didn't know it was my turn yet. E. V.

Mrs. Commuter—A two minute egg? I thought you insisted on three minutes?

Mr. Commuter—I know, but I've decided to sleep longer in the mornings. A. C. O.

Dave.—Yes, and did you notice me looking at him as if I had? J. B. P.

Employer—Young man, do you know the meaning of the word "work"?

Women the World Over

Though she weighs 462 pounds and is probably the biggest woman in England, Mrs. Elizabeth Walker of Beaconfield can run, walk, ride a bicycle, and otherwise enjoy life.

Already holding the distinction of owning the largest ranch in the United States, Mrs. Henrietta M. King of Kingsville, Tex., has just added 34,000 acres to her 1,200,000 acre ranch.

During the last year women students enrolled at the University of Heidelberg have taken greater interest in the study of architecture and engineering than in any other course.

Miss Mabel Strickland of Fort Worth, Tex., as a result of her success in competitions throughout the west, has gained recognition as the champion steer roper of the world.

In Germany and Scandinavian countries the engagement ring is worn on the third finger of the left hand during the engagement and on the right hand after marriage.

Miss Amy Wren has resigned as assistant attorney general in New York because, she said, the attorney general gave her the meanest and lowest paid job which it was in his power to give.

At the age of 97 years and so badly crippled that she is bedridden, Mrs. Martha Clemens of Elderville, Pa., is able to earn a comfortable living from the sale of handknit lace, the demand for which is greater than she can supply.

This Printed Cutting Line is the Key to McCall Accuracy

THIS is a very unusual event that affords an opportunity for every woman who is interested in a smart spring wardrobe to see together, and at one time, original Paris styles, the newest fabrics, and the patterns for making them.

Enchanting Spring frocks, designed by foremost Parisian couturiers, and reproduced in facsimile, will be displayed on living models.

Each day this week at 11 a. m. and 2:30 p. m. Miss Ina M. Ranson of the McCall Company, New York, will deliver a short lecture on the outstanding styles of the spring season, and will show how easily these Paris models can be made at home with McCall Printed Patterns. She will show, too, a charming group of children's dresses, and another group of reproductions of the Paris models in summer cotton fabrics. Miss Ranson will be glad to answer questions about the McCall Printed Pattern and to give advice about home sewing after each lecture.

All materials and trimmings shown on the Paris-designed dresses may be bought on our YARD GOODS FLOOR—the Second Floor.

The McCall Printed Pattern has the margin of accuracy, the printed cutting line and printed inside guide lines. These features are assurance of complete accuracy in reproducing with a pattern the style lines of the master designer. They cannot be copied because they are patented.

Good-By to Three Interesting Shows at Art Institute

Blue skies studded with white, scudding clouds
Bend over seas as blue, and bluer yet
In those dark, resonant caverns where the tide
Creeps in to weep and murmur and forget.

Like something lost, forever seeking entrance
To worlds forbidden it by stern decree,
The tide sways here and hence, the while its mistress,
The moon, drops golden chaplets on the sea.

White scudding clouds like Spain's old argosies
Sweep the blue skies by day and then, at night,
Reef their full sails and make an anchorage,
Hanging the stars aloft for harbor light.

By Eleanor Jewett.

"Orthodox Procession," by Walter Vlad Rousseff, is a painting of picturesque realism in the exhibition of works by Artists of Chicago and Vicinity, which will close on Tuesday in the east wing galleries of the Art institute. The exhibition is one of the most successful Chicago artists have yet given us.

THERE comes a time with every exhibition when the knowledge that this is the last time it may be seen draws a veil of almost regret over it. The past is so relentless. It lets nothing escape into a possible tomorrow. The present is kinder. The present gives and promises both. However, do not take advantage of its generosity by postponing too long an acceptance of its gifts. Before you realize it sometimes the past has swept upon and over both the present and the future, and that which was offered and that which was promised are no more.

The thirty-eighth annual Chicago architectural exhibition in Blackstone hall of the Art institute is an exhibition of the past. It closed on March 2, and now the tombs and sculpture that hold that great room in their silent and tenacious grip from year's end to year's end may resume their unchallenged sway. The splendid marine mosaic by Charles L. Morgan is gone from its wall. Those Spanish ships have folded their sails. The etchings and photographs are gone. The water colors and oils are gone. The miniature houses and gardens are gone. Keep your unbroken peace, you messages from the past—death is cold in your vaults—until another spring will bring another expression of the present to you.

In the east wing galleries of the Art institute the exhibition by artists of Chicago and vicinity will close on Tuesday of this week, March 10. When finis is written to that exhibit we shall be missing a vast amount of beautiful and worth while canvases. The exhibitions that will replace it will be interesting, but not as pertinent to us or as near our hearts. There is something personal about the annual Chicago show. It is definitely a part of us, a development of our growth as a civic center, and when we lose it to the past we lose it under protest.

There is still time to enjoy its tale of pictures and sculpture. The present offers us today and promises us yet two days more. And there is so much to see in that short time! Frank C. Peyraud, who had a one man show in the Art institute last summer, is represented by a beautiful landscape, clear and serene, as are all his paintings, a composition of mountains and snow and table land that dovetail harmoniously in an atmosphere as pure and pellucid as the wash of a mountain stream.

Pauline Palmer has several paintings. "The First Visit" is a portrait study of an adorable little boy. Of the others, "In the Garden" and "My Studio, Provincetown," are charming. A striking contrast is found in the dramatic black road of "Mexican Morning" by James Gilbert. And a further contrast, bringing in an air of foreign matters, is discovered in "Collioure, France, No. 3," by Jean Crawford Adams.

There are a number of unusual and really beautiful still lifes. One of these is the arrangement by Constance Harley of a statuette, a book, and a glass plate. This brings us again to the still life, "The Hornbill and the Turtle," by Adolph Heinze, which once commanded an appreciation in print and deserves another. Mr. Heinze has two more paintings to his credit—"At Old Wiscassett" and "Sunny Old Age."

Possibly the most ghastly painting in the exhibition, and without a doubt the one that the most swiftly imbues you with a sense of horror, is Miklos Gaspar's "Funeral on the Russian Front," a pastel. It is a wonderfully effective and dramatic composition. You feel as though Christ, bearing the burden of the cross, had just passed, jeered at and spat upon by the crowd, which was part of his bitter drink at Gethsemane.

A lovely portrait, quaint, gay, and wholesome, is found in "The Professional," by Indiana Gyberson. "Buckskin and Beads," by Marvin Francis Thompson, reminds one of the Leopold Survage paintings, an exhibit that closed last week at the Arts club. Good ripe color and stimulating—gives one an idea of the effect attained in "The Gulf Road," by George F. Buehr. Charles E. Hallberg has a "Summer Sky," a marine in one of his happiest moods.

"The Plaster Head" by Constantine Pougialis is another remarkable still life. Charles P. Killgore in "Flower Market, Mexico" gives us a surpassingly glowing canvas, rich in color and warm with romance. "Aspen and Snow" by Irving Manoir is a beautiful painting. Mr. Manoir is another of the group of younger Chicago artists who is finding strength and growth of his talent in New Mexico.

E. Martin Hennings is represented by three canvases, each picture based on some beauty of custom or country near Taos. His paintings are descriptively entitled: "Gathering for the Dance," "The Canyon Stream," and "Young Taos Indians."

Among the other artists in this exhibition whose work should not be overlooked are Gustave Baumann, Marie E. Blanke, Caroline Louise Burnham, Charles W. Dahlgreen, Cecil Clark Davis, Frank V. Dudley, Gerald A. Frank, Frederic M. Grant, Maurice Greenberg, Oliver Dennett Grover, Carl R. Krafft, Albert H. Krehbiel, Anna Lynch, John T. Nolf, William Owen Jr., Leopold Seyffert, John F. Stacey, Anna Lee Stacey, Carl N. Werntz, Rudolph F. Ingerle, and Edward B. Butler.

Another exhibition, whose going will leave a sad empty place behind in our hearts, is the Chicago Society of Etchers' exhibition in the print galleries of the Art institute. Mrs. Bertha E. Jaques is one of the prime movers in the society and in the exhibit. Her etchings are things of beauty as well as of living interest, for many of her prints are exquisite renderings of blossoms as truthfully and accurately, though far more gracefully, copied from nature than were they captured by a photographic plate.

Mrs. Jaques is a writer of verse as well as an artist, and her love for flowers is expressed as beautifully in her written word as in her drawn line. Just one tiny example:

A WEED.
Call not that roadside common
That wears with simple grace,
Upon its dusty shoulders,
White drifts of Queen Anne's lace.

There is beauty in that just as there is beauty in her etchings, and hers but serve here as illustrations for the rest. The exhibition of etchings as a whole, this year, was more successful, from the standpoint of contributors, than any former one I can remember. It upheld the standards its predecessors had set, and outdistanced them.

This exhibition will also close on Tuesday at the Art institute.

March 17 will see the opening of new exhibitions there. These include sculpture by Nancy Cox-McCormack; exhibition by Society of Mural Painters; paintings by Eugene E. Speicher; and, probably, something instead of the scheduled exhibit of sculpture by Alfonso Iannelli, as Mr. Iannelli had the misfortune to lose many of his pieces in a recent fire in his studio.

An extremely important item this week is the continuation on Tuesday and Thursday, March 10 and March 12, of the Scammon lectures, given in Fullerton hall of the Art institute at 4 o'clock, by Prof. Charles R. Richards. The Tuesday lecture will deal with industrial art in Germany. On Friday the Viennese school will be discussed.

A collection of American coverlets was a recent exhibit at the Art institute, arranged by an organization of women formed to preserve this particular kind of American art. Mrs. Frank W. Gunsaulus is president; Mrs. D. Harry Hammer, vice president, and Mrs. Fred T. Avery is treasurer. A comprehensive collection of these early colonial quilts, which are becoming rare and much sought after because of their color, design, and weaving, is a part of the Art institute collection, the gift of the late Frank W. Gunsaulus.

The Mardi Gras ball given by the students of the Art institute was a splendid success. Over $1,500 was cleared above all expenses, and the sum will be applied toward a scholarship in the school.

The widespread interest in European travel has led the Art institute to plan a series of travel talks for its members. The lectures are being given on Monday afternoons at 2:30 o'clock throughout March by members of the museum staff. Dudley Crafts Watson opened the series with a talk on "What to See in Venice." The subsequent lectures are: "Picturesque Italian Hill Towns," by Charles Fabens Kelley; "What to See in Greece," by Miss Helen Gardner; "What English Cathedrals to See," by Mr. Kelley, and "What to See in Spain," by Harding Scholle.

Miss Mary C. Scovel, head of the department of teacher training of the school of the Art institute, is chairman of the program committee for the annual meeting of the Western Arts association, to be held in Memphis in May.

Frank G. Logan, honorary vice president of the Art institute, has been making a visit of some weeks in Mexico.

DOMESTICATED

MISS VIOLET HEMING

She comes from the Isle of Wight; but she has been a long time here, and seems to belong. Miss Heming's acting in Chicago has included service with some of the well-known stars: George Arliss (in "Disraeli") and the late Albert Chevalier (in "Daddy Dufard"), among others; and she was here last season in "Spring Cleaning." . . . She is in this week's bill in the Palace, playing with A. E. Matthews in a sketch named "A Unique Opportunity."

Norma Is Welcomed Back to Hollywood

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 6.—Constance Talmadge and Buster Collier, who sticks to Constance like a permanent wave, made use of the sunny spring days this week by taking Buster Keaton Jr., Constance's nephew, to see the animals at the Selig zoo. The monkeys had their charm, and it was hard to tear young Buster away from the alligators when they yawned. But the lions! A large, shaggy fellow gave a deep roar, and young Mr. Keaton was observed doing a silent gliding sneak in his father's best comedy manner around the nearest corner.

Sister Norma Talmadge, snappy in the latest Paris bob with short cut hair all around and long banks in front, wearing a brown ensemble suit, piquant poke in brown felt, and cinnamon brown slippers and stockings, arrived in Los Angeles accompanied by her husband, Joseph Schenck, and brother-in-law, Nicholas Schenck. Among the notable to greet her at the train with flowers and enthusiasm were Constance Talmadge, Mrs. Meg Talmadge, Natalie Talmadge Keaton, Buster Collier, Buster Keaton, Louis B. Mayer, Frank Borzage, and Theda Bara.

Ena Gregory, via U. S. mail from somewhere in Oklahoma on her tour of personal appearances, writes: "When I got home from a dance last night I found that the horny handed cow punchers had filed the back out of my lavender georgette dress, and as for my satin shoes—they had holes in a new place—right through the tops of the toes, worn by the peripatetic cow men."

From Paris comes a parcel of moans from Antonio Moreno. "A he-man can't buy a plain tie in this town," says Moreno. "There are only 'distinctive cravats' which would make a wonderful display of what women like in neckties, but which are far too bizarre for my retiring tastes. This town is run on the basis of 'please the ladies.' As for me, I like the man regulated United States."

Antonio grieves that their ignorance of French in Paris is positively appalling. "You'd think," says he, "that a nation that has spoken French so long as the French have would be up on their language. But no—I have to help them understand my French to get what I want. Broken French is a new language to them."

Saturday lunch time found several luncheon parties of film folk at the Montmartre's festal board. Nita Naldi in a black flat crêpe dress with a shoulder cape lined in peach satin and long sleeves to the elbow, from which peach lined drapes fell about her pearl wrapped wrists, entertained Lillyan Tashman's sister.

Mrs. Owen Moore, in a purple straw hat with peach flowers on one side, and a peach wool knitted dress, sat with Mrs. Otis Harlan and Mrs. Ayres. Mrs. Harlan wore lemon yellow silk with filet lace and a yellow and white silk and wool knitted coat with a white fox fur and a small yellow taffeta hat. Mrs. Ayres, who is Lew Cody's most frequent partner at Hollywood parties, displayed a tan plaited crêpe dress with red ribbons run through slashings at the collar and cuffs. A small tan felt cloche and tan hosiery and shoes completed the ensemble.

Leatrice Joy in white silk dress and coat trimmed with bands of white fox at the collar and on the skirt, chatted with Mrs. Jack Ford, also in white. Mrs. Ford had chosen a corded silk coat with an ermine collar and a white crêpe roma dress, with which she wore a triple string of small pearls.

Zasu Pitts and Gertrude Olmstead were lunching a deux, while Evelyn Brent, in a dark blue tailored suit, was notable at an adjoining table for her vivid fuchsia batik scarf. Mildred Davis, in a blue flannel sport dress and small blue hat of straw and ribbon, looked pretty, as always, but needs to lose some twenty more pounds before she will be the former delectable Mildred of the Lloyd comedies.

ASSOLUTA

MISS ALBERTINA VITAK

KICK KORNER

Not a Bit.

Dear Miss Tinée: Quite recently we saw "A Sainted Devil" verdict. Terrible!

A challenge. Come on, all you Valentino fans, and deny that the picture was the personification of slow motion, with a self-sufficient star at his self-sufficientest. We found neither saint nor devil—just ordinary characters going through all the registered and card indexed grimaces.

When will we have another Julio, or even a Beaucaire? And please, Miss Tinée, tell the gentleman to reduce his—er—limbs, or we perish. They really are too conspicuous. We shudder when we recall that hideous spectacle.

For any exaggeration or indelicacy we beg your pardon, for we do like you. Would it be too ironical to sign ourselves LOS SIMPATICOS.

U. S. Reports Beyond Question

The last report of the Department of Commerce gave the total figures for Pearl importations for the twelve months of 1924.

The House of Pearls received over 16% of all shipments arriving in the U. S. and over 93% of all the Pearls coming to Chicago. Comparing this with the entire imports of the country puts LEBOLT'S in the lead.

Churches Announce Two Corner Stone Ceremonies Today

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

Two corner stone layings are announced today in church circles. At 2:30 the Jewish Congregation Beth El, the second oldest Jewish congregation in Chicago, will lay the corner stone for a $75,000 community house at Palmer street and Sawyer avenue, Logan square. The original location was on May street, and thirty years ago the congregation moved to Crystal street. The present grounds were purchased a year ago. In addition to the community house, a temple will be erected. It will be the only Reformed Jewish congregation on the northwest side in a population of 75,000 Jews. The Rev. Julian J. Gusfield is rabbi, and Michael Levy is the president of the congregation.

At 3 o'clock the corner stone of the First United Presbyterian church, Oak Park avenue and Jackson boulevard, Oak Park, will be laid. The Rev. Edward A. Daum, pastor, will be in general charge. Mrs. Mary Gault, through whose generosity the building has been made possible, will lay the corner stone. Others who will take part are the Rev. C. K. Osborn, Willis McFeeley, president of the village of Oak Park; the Rev. J. W. McClenahan, the Rev. J. T. Meloy, D. D., and the Rev. R. C. Gibson, D. D., who will make the chief address.

At 3 o'clock this afternoon the first unit of the new Granville Avenue Presbyterian church, consisting of the manse and community building, Granville and Greenview avenues, and costing $25,000, will be dedicated. The Rev. Francis J. Martin is pastor. The addresses will be made by the Rev. Asa J. Ferry, D. D., and the Rev. Henry Seymour Brown, D. D. The dedicatory celebration will continue for three evenings. Tomorrow, 8 p. m.: Home Coming and Community; Tuesday, Fellowship, Dr. Henry Hepburn; and Wednesday, dinner at 6:30, Dr. Albert H. Barr, at 8.

The annual meeting with election of officers of the Holy Name Archdiocesan union of the Catholic church will be held today at 3 o'clock at Visitation school hall, 843 Garfield boulevard. The speakers will include the Rt. Rev. E. F. Hoban, general spiritual director of the Archdiocesan union.

One of the interesting exhibits that will soon be taken to Rome will be a chart showing the growth of the church in the United States in the last 100 years. The society for the propagation of the faith with headquarters in Rome sent to the United States for the use of building up the church here a total of $7,020,974. The contributions to Rome from the United States have totaled $12,186,921. The amounts received from Rome have gradually diminished and the amounts sent to Rome correspondingly increased. Last year Rome sent to the United States for missionary purposes $101,592 and the United States sent to Rome, $1,885,681. The Catholic population in the United States in 1822 was 600,000 and in 1922, 17,616,676. The number of priests in 1822 was seventy-eight and in 1922 was 21,164.

THE REV. ARTHUR E. HOLT, PH. D.

Dr. Holt, who is occupying the pulpit of the New England Congregational church, Delaware place and North Dearborn street, is professor of social ethics in the Chicago Theological seminary, but previously had experience in important pastorates. He was first pastor of the Congregational church of Pueblo, Col., and later of the Congregational church at Manhattan, Kas., where the Kansas state university is located. He then became pastor of the First Presbyterian church, Fort Worth, Tex. His appointment, previous to his selection as professor in the Chicago seminary, was as national secretary of social education of the Congregational churches of the United States. He is the author of two books, "The Bible as a Community Book," and "Christian Ideals in Industry."

Dean Shailer Mathews will speak at 7 and Dr. Hugh Black, author and professor, will speak at 8 at the Sunday Evening club at Orchestra hall. A fuller statement is in the radio section of THE TRIBUNE.

The Rev. J. T. B. Smith, head of secular newspaper publicity of the world service commission of the Methodist Episcopal church, will speak this evening in Grace church, Locust and North La Salle streets, on the subject, "The Church and the Newspaper."

The health commission of the Y. M. C. A. is entering upon a serious effort to lower the death and ill health rate of young men by lectures on health subjects at the various centers. Among the subjects discussed are accidents and injuries, care of the eyes, ears, nose, throat, and teeth; how to determine the amount of sleep needed, care of colds, effect of smoking, what to do if the heart weakens. It is maintained that one-half of illness is preventable.

The Rt. Rev. G. G. Bennett, Episcopal bishop of Duluth, will speak at the noonday Lenten lectures at the Garrick theater this week. Bishop Bennett will also preach this morning at 11 o'clock at St. James church, Cass and Huron street, and this evening at the Church of the Epiphany, Adams street and Ashland boulevard. Tomorrow evening he will speak at St. John's.

THE OUTLINE OF SCIENCE

Edited by Prof. J. Arthur Thomson

HOW PLANTS AND ANIMALS AGREE.

If we trace an oak tree back to a sapling, and thence to a seedling, and thence to a seed and an ovule, we come at last to a fertilised egg cell, which is the beginning of the individual life. In this respect the oak tree agrees with the squirrel on its branches. Moreover, in both cases the fertilised egg cell divides and redivides, forming thousands of cells, a mode of development which allows of considerable division of labor. But we can go a step further and say that plants and animals agree not only in the individual beginning and in their cellular structure but in the essential processes of life. Both show nutrition and the distribution of the food through the body; both show digestive ferments and breathing. It is true that photosynthesis is peculiar to green plants, and that there is little in the vegetable kingdom corresponding to the kidney function in animals; yet there is much in common among all forms of life.

It may appear at first sight that this conclusion breaks down badly in regard to moving and feeling, which are the master activities in the animal and are anything but conspicuous in most plants. Yet when we begin to think of leaves rising and falling, of flowers opening and closing with the waxing and waning light of day, we see that there is much movement. And when we begin to think of the way stems bend to the light and roots make for moisture, or of the sundew answering back to the fly's touch, of the tendril responding to its contact with a slender twig, we see that there is much feeling in plants.

In the far east the sensitive plant often grows in great masses, and if a stone be sent crashing in among them one can see the leaves sinking down into the collapsed rest position, and the stimulus spreading in a circle like a splash in a pond. The Venus fly trap may be cheated by a little piece of moist paper and made to close on booty not worth having, but if it be cheated twice in rapid succession it will not usually answer back to a third duping. This is surely the beginning of memory—an enregistering of experience so that future activity is modified. We need not consider in detail the modes of movement among plants, but just as many a sedentary animal like a coral or a sea squirt shows something of the plant in its somnolent constitution, so we may say that the animal is lurking in many a plant. There is more than a trace of a dream smile in many an orchid.

It is always useful to recognize similarity in the midst of difference, but it is a mistake to exaggerate this so as to obscure significant divergence. It is of the very nature of plants to be sluggish. It is bound up with their independent mode of nutrition. They do not need to seek out their raw materials; they need only absorb the constantly renewed supplies of water and salts brought to the roots by the slow draining in the soil, and of carbon dioxide flowing over the leaves in the currents of the air. While the animal, essentially a hunter, has advanced to an ever increasing perfection of coordinated movement, the plant has sunk into torpor. There are exceptions among the lower groups; many primitive algae swim actively, the sponge and the sea anemone are sedentary; but the true contrast between the two kingdoms is seen in the squirrel romping through the boughs of the impassive beech. The distinction between active animal and sluggish plant is fundamental.

Tactics of Plants.

Plants live their lives much as animals live theirs; every plant is adapted to its particular station in life, and in its adaptations we see the outcome of the same struggle for existence and the same fundamental vital qualities [growing, multiplying, answering back, and so on] as we see in animals. There is the same competition, the same mutual aid where mutual aid pays. The plant, like the animal, shows the same self-preservative instincts; the same factors of environment and heredity determine the individual life. There are new departures—new novelties among pansies, as we see among pigeons. Plants multiply; on the whole they may be said to inherit the character of their parents; the same continuity of linkages as in animals binds one generation to another. In the plant world as in the animal world nature cares more for the race than for the individual. Thus we get in a general way the impression of plants as genuinely living creatures.

A BANYAN TREE (Ficus benghalensis).—One single banyan tree, 1,000 feet in circumference, at Calcutta. The branches send down roots, and these grow into massive stemlike pillars. What appears to be a grove is a single immense tree.

[Photo by Underwood & Underwood.]

FLOWERS OF BARBERRY.—The stamens of a number of flowers move in response to the touch of a visiting insect. In the barberry the stamens lie back in the boat shaped petals. A touch on the filament or stalk causes the stamen to move inwards sharply towards the ovary. Here they are holding a large pin with which they were touched. An insect doing this is dusted with pollen.

Plants, like animals, employ their own peculiar tactics in adapting themselves to environment; we may suppose that an act of the plant is just as full of practical import as that of an animal; in the latter case the act may suggest intelligent behavior, in the other it is only the result of an inherited tropism. The plant, like the animal, can camouflage and deceive. The pitcher plant and bladderwort are as guilty of false pretences as the spider; the sundew and the fly catcher are adepts in preparing a bait for confiding insects. The white ant will squirt an obnoxious juice in the face of an attacker; so do plants produce poisonous and evil smelling substances to keep off an enemy. Each species lives for itself; no species ever undertakes anything for the sake of any other, except in the expectation of a corresponding advantage. If the wild thyme lays by in its throat abundant honey for the bee, that is because the bee carries its pollen from blossom to blossom.

Part the Root Plays.

Typically the main root grows straight down, the main stem straight up. If a seed happens to be planted right way up the young root and stem grow on in the way they are pointing; but if the seed lies on its side or is inverted, the root and stem make active curvatures till they point in the proper directions. When we sow seed we do not require to arrange it also; we leave proper orientation to the powers of the growing plant. Indeed, in many seeds the embryo is originally curved and must in any case straighten out. Nor is this power confined to the seedling stage; a stem which has been bent over curves up, in the growing apical part, in the course of a day or so. The plant is capable of active curvature, and this movement is set agoing by some external directive influence.

"The movements of roots, as they grow in the earth, suggest that they are seeking for nutriment. Spots in the earth which are found to be unfavorable to progression are avoided with care. If the root sustains injury, a stimulus is immediately transmitted to the growing part, and the root bends away from the quarter where the wound was inflicted. When the exploring root tip comes near a spot where water occurs with food salts in solution, it at once turns in that direction, and when it reaches the place develops such absorptive cells as are adapted to the circumstances."

We have seen what part the roots play, in drawing nourishment from the soil for the plant. The part of the growing root most sensitive to stimuli is the tip, and the phenomena which are exhibited in consequence of its great sensitiveness are so astounding that Darwin compared the root tip to the brain of one of the lower animals. He wrote:

"It is hardly an exaggeration to say that the tip of the radicle thus endowed, and having the power of directing the movements of the adjoining parts, acts like the brain of one of the lower animals; the brain being seated within the anterior end of the body, receiving impressions from the sense organs, and directing the several movements."

But modern botanists describe the same facts in less picturesque language—in terms of engrained "tropisms."

The roots penetrate and explore and feel their way underground, touching here, recoiling there, and insinuating themselves in such a way that they search every part of the soil. The length of roots is sometimes very great. The root system of a large cucumber plant was estimated by S. Clark in all its ramifications at 25,000 yards—fourteen miles—but this is open to doubt.

"Clover roots are said to go down to depths of six or nine feet, but many weeds go deeper still. Coltsfoot, for instance, may be found, living at a depth of twenty spades. In Egypt and other places the roots of acacias go down to twenty feet, or even farther, so that they can tap the water supplies, which are at a great depth.

The root system of a tree only one year old may have a total length of twelve yards.

Darwin showed that a root from which about one-twentieth of an inch of the tip has been removed does not respond to gravity if laid on its side; it grows straight on. But if a root is first laid on its side for a few minutes and then decapitated it does, after a few hours, curve downwards. He drew the conclusion that, while the reaction takes place in the zone of most active growth, about one-fifth of an inch behind the tip, the effect of gravity is registered by the extreme tip only. Later ingenious experiments have confirmed this result.

REAL ESTATE—SUBURBAN—WEST.

Elmhurst.

ELMHURST

GEO. R. CHAPMAN & CO.,

We offer exceptional opportunities to people desiring WELL BUILT suburban homes. WHY? Because we ship our lumber and millwork direct from our own mill. Therefore we are able to build for you a better house at a saving of 25% or $1,000 to $3,000 and THIS IS A CONSERVATIVE ESTIMATE. There are no such things as the so-called "snaps." The real worth of a building is based on the ground value and the material that goes in it. We have the lots and produce the best material that money can buy. It goes direct from the woods to the consumer, leaving out the middleman's profit. This is no raw subdivision proposition. We can and will sell you a large modern home with paved streets and all improvements in. A nominal cash payment and small monthly installments [less than the rent you are now paying] is all we require. We realize that if we could not produce and show these to be facts our advertising would do us more harm than good, so read and believe.

DON'T COME TO SEE US FIRST; see others and get prices, BUT SEE US BEFORE YOU BUY. We will convince you that our plans and prices are the best.

Come out Sunday, we are open all day. We have two well equipped offices. One at 511 S. York-st., near C. A. & E. station, Phone 982; and another at 118 N. York-st., near C. & N. W. station. IF YOU CAN'T COME OUT AT ONCE WRITE OR PHONE FOR FULL PARTICULARS.

GEO. R. CHAPMAN & CO.,

ELMHURST

AT LAST we are able to offer you a home for a price so low that we KNOW you will buy. We don't ask you to see US FIRST. See our competitors and after you see what they can offer, before buying anything, come and see OUR house plans.

LISTEN TO THIS—We have arrangements to ship lumber from OUR OWN MILL in the South—and at such a saving in cost that we defy competition.

We are thus able to offer you a COMPLETE TWO STORY HOME cheaper than you could construct a BUNGALOW. These houses are perfect in EVERY detail, on paved streets, and well located.

Call and see our VARIOUS plans. We will build for you at a price which CANNOT be duplicated in Elmhurst.

The earlier you call and make a DEPOSIT on one of these homes, the surer you are to secure one.

GEO. R. CHAPMAN & CO.,
118 N. York-st., Elmhurst. 511 S. York-st.

PEERLESS

THAT MAKE EVERY DOLLAR COUNT!

We've slashed prices. These Series 66 Peerless cars have regularly sold for hundreds of dollars more and at prevailing low prices are undoubtedly the greatest automobile values ever known. You'll find here cars that could not have been duplicated 3 weeks ago for $800 to $1,000 more. They are worth just as much today, but they don't cost you as much.

You Won't Want to Let These Go By

These cars are new-appearing and in the pink of condition mechanically; the kind the neighbor would judge as a "new" car. They offer you mechanical excellence as well as splendid coach work and rich appointments, remarkable smoothness, and ample power in a flight of speed on the level or the long dogged pull up hill. Equipment, of course, in keeping with their elegant condition, and most complete. They can be put into immediate active service with a certainty and regularity of performance that will amaze you.

We have a very limited number of perfectly new Studebaker Light Six Phaetons and a few Special Six Sedans.

To close out this stock in the next two weeks we are pricing these cars at actual cost.

They are standard 1924 Light Sixes. Thousands of these models are now in service in Chicago and giving perfect satisfaction. In chassis design they are very similar to the new 1925 models.

Each car carries a NEW CAR GUARANTEE and NEW CAR SERVICE privileges.

At the price quoted on these cars it will pay you to buy a NEW CAR instead of a used car—the resale value of such a car based on the price you pay today makes the purchase an investment, and the savings in the lower upkeep of a NEW CAR compared with a used car will easily pay the interest on your investment.

VERY LOW DOWN-PAYMENTS. VERY LOW MONTHLY PAYMENTS.

Even balloon tires and natural wood wheels—at slight additional price.

There are only a very few of these cars left. Come in TODAY and pick out your car for next spring. If you haven't all the money a deposit will hold your car until you are ready for it.

The Devil of the Desert

by Konrad Bercovici

GARY SHEAHAN

El Nahab, the Bad Man, Understood; "You Will Forget, Suleim. You Will Forget;" but the Arab Horse Could Not Forget the Master He Loved

EL NAHAB was his name, but he was known from the gates of Damascus to El Medina, which is midway of the caravan road to Mecca, as the Devil of the Desert. Moslemi and Nesrany, Mohammedan and Christian, and even the dreaded Jahudis of the secret mountains of Kheyba, themselves valiant warriors, trembled when they heard his name mentioned. When it was whispered about that he was around a Khela, a fortified watering place, the doors and gates of the governmental residence, the Kasur, were immediately shut, and extra guards ordered around the water wells. The Aga himself, the captain commander of the place, would watch from the slit opening in the stone tower the length and breadth of the desert before him. Yet few people spoke of ever having seen El Nahab face to face. So feared was he that when an Arab knew the Devil of the Desert was in the neighborhood, he would take a few sheep with his brand on the collar, tie them out, and withdraw within his door, hoping that El Nahab would know whose gift they were, and thus be assured of free travel until the next third or fourth moon, according to the man's wealth. For El Nahab knew every man's brand mark and wealth.

The Aga of many a village, to avoid trouble, would tie out a camel or a horse. It was better to live in peace with him. He was reputed to be pitiless with those who had crossed his ways. There was no saying from where he might suddenly appear. He might emerge from behind a clump of tamaricks, or roll himself out from underneath the burning sand, or he might rise up from a couch at the "Khava," the public coffee house, and single out the man who had offended him or dared to cheat him of the tribute he exacted. They were certain he knew everything going on in every Khela, every hill, every valley. He knew when and where a caravan might pass; whether the large caravan, the Haj on the way to Mecca, or a small one of merchants buying camels, or selling brassware, frankincense and shirt cloth to the Bedouins. Even the Kasur, the castle, the government house, could keep no secrets from him. He knew everything. And yet no one could be found to say he had seen him face to face in the five years of his operations through the desert. The bones of those who had seen him were bleaching in the desert sands. It was as if they were paying tribute to a shadow, an embodied spirit of the devil, a "Sheytan," yet a "Sheytan" with a rifle. And because the Arabs had never seen him and feared him, they were kind to every lone traveler; kind and fearing.

Who was he? And from where?

A Jahud from Kheyba, a man of the race with feet so fleet they travel through the length and breadth of the desert on foot, outrunning the swiftest horse and the youngest he camel even on the homeward stretch, this Jahud, a fez merchant, told one morning at the Khava of Burma he had heard El Nahab was an Antar, belonging to the Istabal Antara, the fiercest and proudest of the Arabs. That there, five years since, he had killed a man—a sheik. He had run away to escape justice, and now he was gathering the blood money he was to pay, which was to be a considerable sum, as the murdered man had old parents and many brothers, and was himself an Antar. And an Antar's life was well nigh priceless. In that Antar village, in El Tanit, the custom is to be eight years abroad, and not seven as in the rest of Arabia, before one is entitled to pay blood money instead of being hung for murder. And they do hang their criminals in El Tanit. El Nahab, the Jahud told, was anxious to return to his village, where a woman, young and beautiful, was waiting for him.

NOT every one believed the story, as told by the Jahud. One cannot believe what one not a Moslemi tells. Yet three days later the Jahud was seen running backwards at top speed in the desert. In his hasty flight he had thrown away the bundle of merchandise he had carried on his head. Before him was a cloud of sand, behind which was a rider on horseback. When the Jahud had reached the entrance of the Kavha he invoked the protection of all present. They bolted the doors rapidly and, returning to their couches, they sat motionless, looking at one another. A while later the Jahud, having gotten back his breath, wrote on a piece of paper, in which he wrapped four gold pieces, the following words: "I have allowed my tongue to smother my brains. At Khor, a moon from today, there will be a she camel, a thelul, and four large sheep with my brand waiting for you."

Then he threw his paper through the window without looking out.

A few minutes later the piece of paper was shoved back underneath the door. On it was written: "Tell the men they had no ears when thy tongue wagged. They shall give no Surak (tribute) for two years. But thou shalt never again appear in this Kavha. Go to your village and stay there three years."

And so the people of Burma knew the truth of the Jahud's words. So frightened were they they were afraid to even think of El Nahab lest one part of the body betray the other one to him. For who had told him what the Jahud had spoken in the Khava? Yet he had known!

The Jahud was severely punished. El Nahab had actually sent him to prison, ruined him, for he could no longer sell fezzes in the villages and oases. A while later a gun was fired. It was El Nahab's signal that he was gone. The bolts of the doors of the Khava were loosened and the men looked upon the deserted road and the closed tent flaps, although the sun was high. With the sensitiveness of birds, the inhabitants had sensed danger and had withdrawn from the face of him who did not want to be seen. Men and women looked at one another without daring to speak—dumb. As if a thunderbolt had passed between their legs without touching them.

In vain did the Aga of Burma, in full uniform, with knife in his teeth and pistol in each hand, followed by his fifteen soldiers and the old brass cannon, dragged by a mule, parade in front of the Khava, to instill courage into the people. They would not come out to their doors. The Aga himself was so scared his teeth chattered and the knife fell out from between them, and his soldiers, stalwart Bedouins, big boned, sunburned, heavy bearded rascals, trembled so their knees knocked against each other. And when the Aga had ordered that the cannon be fired from the Messhi, the Mosque, even the Hogea, the priest, interfered.

"Wouldst thou bring him upon us by defying him?"

The following day was Friday, rest day. The whole village appeared at the Messhi. And then they forgot. The Arab forgets what has happened between Friday and Friday. Each week has its own dangers. Allah is good and Mohammed is his prophet.

A MONTH later the great Haj caravan passed Burma on the way to the grave of the prophet. There were thousands of pilgrims astride camels and donkeys and horses. Men and women from the depths of Asia, from Turkestan and Afghanistan, and from Morocco and Algeria and other lands of Moslem belief. Men as black as coal, and others as pale as amber. Clean shaven pilgrims, long bearded pilgrims, pygmies, giants, some with fezzes as red as fire, others with white turbans on bare heads shaved on the top. Some with rich furs hanging from the flanks of the camels, ready for the clammy cold of the desert, with litters for the women stretched on backs of two donkeys marching side by side, and with servants on foot, lugging even their luxurious harems after them. And there were others who traveled singly, like beggars, wrapped in rags, in their bare feet, sleeping in dugout holes in the cold sand, or cuddling up against the stomachs of the beasts of burden. Four hundred armed soldiers on horses and camels marched ahead with the Pasha, the captain in charge of the caravan, and four hundred soldiers closed the rear.

A good day's journey was twenty miles, and there are many hundreds of miles from Damascus to the grave. And at every stop a place designated and known by the Pasha and his men, men and beasts were looked over and those who were ill or weak, beast or man, were separated from the caravan to stay behind and be taken care of, in some Khela by the way, or perish of thirst in the desert, or freeze at night in the cold sand, clammy and penetrating like melting ice. The Haj had to go on. Day by day a designated place had to be reached. And if a sandstorm or a breakdown of the Pasha's own suite had retarded one lap of the journey the next halt was skipped; and the next and the next; sometimes marching twenty hours at one stretch, to make up for lost time. If a camel's feet got too sore it was left by the way. If a man was too ill or too weak to continue, so much the worse for him. There was no great evil, for who died on the Haj was most in favor with the prophet. It was like dying in a holy war. He should be at the prophet's right hand in heaven.

But that year the Pasha on reaching Burma had a different story to tell. He was so scared he marched in the center of a square of all his soldiers. Despair, fear, was written on every face. Even the donkeys and horses seemed anxious to get somewhere under cover. At every halt, where every caravan was wont to stop and pay the Surak, the yearly passage tribute to the Bedouins, the long barreled riders were absent. In their stead a message had been left to go into the Pasha's hand. And on it was written: "Leave the Surak here before you go." It was El Nahab who had ordered. Once the grasping Pasha had tried to cheat and had left only two thousand piastres instead of five, the tribute that had been paid in former years. At the next stop a message was waiting for him: "Thou art a thief. Leave here, in addition to the customary Surak of the place, three thousand piastres, and three more thousand as penalty."

And the trembling Pasha did as directed and trembled for his life. Two thousand men on horses and donkeys and camels, and eight hundred soldiers armed to the teeth trembled for their lives—more than for their lives, in fear of the unseen shadow that followed and preceded them all along the way.

And where were the Bedouins? They had all been scared away from their yearly prey, from the water holes and passages where they exacted Surak, brotherhood money, in tribute from the passing caravan. They were not even seen or heard of from the rear of the caravan upon which they had yearly swooped down like vultures to strip to the skin the ones that had lagged behind. At one watering place there had been no message from El Nahab and no Bedouins waiting. The Pasha did not know whether to go on or to stop. The whole day the caravan waited in the burning sun and hot, sand laden wind that blew over them. Towards the evening a message was pinned to the Pasha's tent. "Thou hast understood. Go."

The signal cannon was fired and the sorry caravan continued its way. They marched all through the cold night to make up for lost time and at the next and next stop the Pasha left the Surak, counting the pieces over again and again lest he be short of even one.

WHEN that Pasha returned to Damascus and told his story the governor decided to put an end to such effrontery. Within three months the captains of every Khela had been replaced by men of tried valor and courage, and an order was given that not one sheep, not one piastre be paid, given, or allowed to reach El Nahab, by whomsoever, under penalty of death. And a price of two thousand gold pieces was set on El Nahab's head dead or alive. Every stranger was now being scrutinized. Whence and to where? And watch was being set to see that no one should tie out a single sheep or camel for El Nahab.

Yet, in spite of reinforcements of soldiers, new soldiers, who had not heard of El Nahab's deeds, the population was even more affrighted than before. They were anxiously awaiting the opportunity to pay their tribute to the devil of the desert, lest greater misfortune come upon them. They looked upon the sheep they had intended to tie out, sheep fattened for the purpose, as upon animals prepared for sacrifice, for which an altar had been refused. Why should any one interfere with their peace? It was their tribute. What had Damascus to do with it? They spoke their grievances freely at the Khavas where men gathered to "drink," smoke, and talk. Each one hoped El Nahab would thus learn of his willingness to pay. But word had reached them that in certain villages behind the cavern of Beth-El men had been executed for paying Surak to El Nahab.

To Burma the governor of Damascus had sent an old and tried soldier, a Turk, who was more severe than any through the desert. Mokur Aga forbade even the mentioning of El Nahab's name. It was also forbidden to mention him by any other name, and forbidden to refer to him or his deeds in the past.

It was hoped to kill his existence by erasing him from the speech of men. But it did just the opposite. So full of him were the Arabs that they kept silent when they came to the Khavas or the Messhis. They had nothing else to speak about. They looked at one another with sad faces, men chained to silence. And caravan travel had ceased. No one dared venture anywhere, even under guard of soldiers, without being permitted to pay Surak to El Nahab.

Mokur Aga, a large, heavy, stern, black bearded Turk had brought with him his whole establishment from El Ghazir, where he had been stationed before, his housewife and children from a former wife, his harem of six, his servants, his rugs, his house goods of black mahogany inlaid with silver and ebony and the hundred and one copper pots of his kitchen. And with his household he had brought his stable of twenty horses; horses of the best blood in Arabia.

And of all the horses he had one, a stallion sired by a stallion that was owned by his father, who had inherited the blood from the stallions of his forefathers, a stallion of which Mokur Aga was proud and which he loved more than anything or anybody. That stallion, Suleim, followed his master's every step; like a faithful dog. So great was Mokur's love for that young black stallion, it was said that if he had to choose between the horse and Agaship he would choose the horse—that not even a sultanship could buy it from him. He proved what a great heart he had when he took Suleim, the stallion, with him to Burma. Such action in itself was a challenge to the Devil of the Desert.

The stall in which the horse was kept, the walls of which were carpeted the thickness of a fist, was built to lean on the Aga's own sleeping room. Four Arnauts, armed to the teeth, were keeping watch over it day and night. Their lives vouched for that of the horse.

ONE morning the Jahud of Kheyba brought the following message from El Nahab to Mokur Aga: "I shall take Suleim."

In vain did the Aga try to force the Jahud to tell him how he had come by the message. They flogged him. They burned his soles with hot irons. They would have killed him had there not been an agreement between the desert and Kheyba that none of their men were to be executed outside their village. A criminal of their people had to be brought there and punished there according to their own law. And they were a formidable people, one no Kassur or Khela dared trifle with.

Mokur Aga became so enraged he ordered the Jahud buried in the hot sand to the neck. The soldiers had hardly finished executing their orders when a heavy cloud of sand rose from nearby and blinded them. When they had recovered their senses the hole was empty and two men on a horse were, they swore by the prophet to that, flying in the air.

Not a man, woman, or child dared to venture out of doors that day. They were all bitter against the Aga. What was he bringing upon their heads!

On the morrow another message was pinned on the inside of the heavily bolted door of the Aga's castle: "I shall take thy horse." And even while Mokur Aga was reading it, a man on horseback, in a white turban and black flowing cape, leading Suleim by the halter flew past his window.

"To arms! To arms!" the Aga yelled.

In the stall the hands and feet of the Arnauts were tied with silk cords and their heads were covered with their own hoods.

"To arms! To arms!" the Aga yelled again as the garrison rushed out.

But their knees were shaking, their fingers trembled so they could not pull the triggers, and the distant golden sand cloud against the sky became smaller and smaller. Mokur Aga himself was speechless and faint. So grieved was he over the loss of his stallion he withdrew to his chambers where no one was allowed to disturb him. And so grieved was he that he forgot even to speak of punishment for the Arnauts. He wept. He wept and sobbed, and tore his beard and beat his heart. His love for his horse was deeper than his grief. His grief was deeper than his dignity. O! Why had he come to Burma? He wailed. Why had he not refused to go? What would it have mattered if they had reproached him for his cowardice? He would have kept his Suleim. He would have been near him. Now Suleim was in the hands of El Nahab. Where was he now? Instead of in a carpeted stall, where was he resting? All the cruelties of the Devil of the Desert of which he had heard recurred to his mind. El Nahab would beat Suleim. He would cripple him, blind him, and then send him back.

"Suleim! Suleim!" the Aga cried as he paced with unseeing eyes the flagstones of the halls of the Kassur.

If El Nahab wanted ransom, let him name his price. But how, how could he communicate with El Nahab? If he could only see that Jahud again. Where was he? The Aga wept and cried the whole day.

THAT night he called out aloud from the tower of the Kassur, "El Nahab, name thy price! El Nahab, name thy price!"

A cold wind was blowing from the east. A wild goat stretched its yellow neck in the pale light of the moon. A gazelle sprang out from behind a clump of tamarisks. Birds fluttered and shrieked, scared by the voice from the tower disturbing the peace of the night.

"Name thy price, El Nahab, name thy price!" called the voice again and again.

The wind carried it to dark slabs of basalt that rose in the distance and it was repeated from one rock to another until the whole desert from Burma to the ruins of Sowra and from Burma to the sand caves of Mubiat, echoed, the hills, answering, like one of those chants in which each singer begins with the following verse:

the Aga's chamber.

Like a rolling thunder the call rumbled.

The Aga trembled when he heard what his voice had unloosed. He had not realized what was to happen. He had opened a door not knowing the unending horde he had let loose upon the world. Now they all knew. From one end of the desert to the other. They would again pay tribute to the Sheytan. He would be recalled. Disgraced. His wealth would be taken away from him. But what cared he. If only Suleim should be returned to him. He waited. There came no answer. A little later a loud laughter came rolling from the top of the hills and spent itself on the soft, gray stone walls of the tower.

Mokur Aga returned to his chamber. He had been insulted and he had disgraced himself. He took the long pipe and spread a pinch of hashish on the burning coals of the narghile. Ordinarily it soothed his nerves. Then he called the women of the harem that they dance before him. Slowly, Kasmira, the Cherkezian dance girl, began to unfold her dance pattern before him. She knew what to dance. No gay dance could soothe her master's nerves. She danced her saddest dance, one in which the limbs kneel and pray, with drooping fingers and bowed head. A dance in which every fiber of the body wept quiet, unseen tears—dark tears, that died within; a dance in which the soul wept. There was no music for that dance. Not the slightest noise. A little sad figure of a woman moved slowly within a few draperies to the unbeaten rhythm of an unheard song.

Kasmira finished dancing and lay down at the old Aga's feet. He bent over and leaned his face against hers, like a child's against the mother's cheek. Then the other women left the room on tiptoe, not to disturb him, lest his sorrow awaken. They went to the other end of the Kassur.

They had not been gone long when they heard the Aga's voice again. He was raving and yelling, "I want my Suleim!"

Kasmira, forty years younger than he was, was trying to soothe him, as a mother soothes a child.

"Get thee from here! Get thee from here!" he yelled.

Then things began to crash against walls and doors, and Kasmira came running and fell into the arms of one of the women. They hid themselves behind bolted doors, all heaped together, like a flock of frightened barn fowl masquerading as wild pheasants. All the colors and hues of the earth and sky were in that heap of frightened flesh. When Mokur Aga was in such a mood he was a murderous maniac.

An hour later word came from Aga he regretted his rashness. He begged that they come to his chamber to distract him; and if they would not he would go out of his mind thinking of the lost Suleim.

The Aga's wife sent a triumphant glance to Kasmira. And because the Cherkezian girl understood, she whispered in her ear loud enough for everybody to hear: "Thou who thought thou wert more than Suleim to him, see now. If El Nahab were to ask him to give thee as ransom for the horse, thinkest thou he would hesitate?"

"I would gladly give even my life if Mokur Aga but asked," answered Kasmira.

Whereupon the other women looked pleased. They all liked the Aga. He was as good as he was valorous. And he was open handed with his women, and kind. He kept no eunuch to guard them and spy on them. But the Aga's wife, fat and evil tongued, thought less of him because he was good to them.

"It may be thou art of the same blood with the Devil of the Desert," she shot back before they reached the Aga's chamber.

Kasmira only half heard what the other woman said. Her mind was full of the Aga. He was much calmer than he had been, but he looked much older.

"Shall I dance?" Kasmira asked.

"Yes—let some one play. You, Metheza, my wife. Your playing is still beautiful. Silence only deepens the sadness of a man's heart."

Kasmira danced while the Aga's wife played the three stringed lute of the harem, and the other women six in number, were rasping with their fingers the camel hide stretched over the small drums they kept between their knees. A half hour later Mokur Aga asked the women to withdraw while he held Kasmira's hand to detain her.

Metheza spoke with apparent great warmth: "Mokur, thou dost not know what an angel Kasmira is. She said she would gladly give herself as ransom to El Nahab for Suleim. Broadcast it. Perhaps he will consent. She is young and beautiful."

Mokur Aga looked at Kasmira. Tears gathered in his eyes. Then he turned to his wife and said: "After El Nahab came thou, Metheza," and he let go of the girl's hand, dismissing her with the rest of the women.

ON the morrow Mokur Aga had recovered his soldier spirit. He sent out messengers doubling the price on El Nahab's head, dead or alive, with an additional hundred gold pieces for Suleim. After leaving a small garrison within the gates of the Kassur, he set out at the head of his twenty soldiers on swift horses to comb the desert. The whole day long they searched and questioned the wayfarers and strangers. Not a hillock was left unexplored, not a cavern unsearched. The soldiers spread out and rode in a wide line closing in into a circle, and spread out again. The sun was high and the sand was burning, yet they minded not, for the prize was to be split amongst them if they were to capture or kill El Nahab,

As they were resting at noon, grouped around the Aga, who was talking to them, one of the men pointed out to a rider in the distance standing between two horses.

"By Allah!" the Aga called out, "It's Suleim!" And his heart almost failed him when twenty guns burst loose.

"Fools!" he cried out.

The next instant the figure in the distance was covered behind a cloud of sand, and the Aga felt relieved.

"After them!" he yelled, and they spurred their horses. The desert stretched calm and quiet. When the sand had settled back to the ground the rider with the two horses had disappeared like a phantom. For hours they rode on, shouting, shooting, calling imprecations, yelling as they careened their rearing steeds. Toward sundown as they were returning to Burma the phantom appeared again standing between his horses, facing them, as if he came himself from the direction they were heading for. There was less promptness in the shooting of the soldiers, but the Aga's gun spoke. When they galloped past the spot where the phantom was last seen they found a gun with a priceless matchlock of brass on which glittered drops of blood.

El Nahab had been wounded and he had lost his gun. Yet where was he? He had dived in the sand as a porpoise dives in the sea. He had disappeared. Triumphantly, the Aga returned to Burma. Instead of spending the night in his chambers, he spent it with his soldiers, talking to them, telling them his plans, exciting them for the morrow's march.

Still, that night the voice from the tower rang out: "Name thy price, El Nahab. And there is ransom more worthy than all the gold thou has dreamt."

There was no answer. The voice went where the wind carried it—scaled one mountain, then another, westward towards El Tanit, rolled like a spent thunder in the caverns where beasts were hiding, the panther and the leopard, and exhausted itself on the flats of cold sand in the valley of Tasara. They searched the desert in vain the following day and the day after that. There was no trace of horses or man.

THE Aga talked to the people and the soldiers. "We have wounded him. Who knows how severely he is wounded!"

He had dropped his gun. It meant his right arm was wounded. He was defenseless. They were to comb the desert and remain encamped for several days. They were men, not old women. Should the whole desert be ruled by one unseen man? They were soldiers. Soldiers!

Early in the morning they swept out of the gates on horses, with camels loaded with provisions. An army in full swing. They rode on that day, and the next, and the next, without seeing El Nahab. Then their provisions gave out, water became scarce, and they had to return to Burma.

Though they had wounded the fugitive and taken his matchlock, they had been defeated. The inhabitants of Burma breathed easier. They would tie out their sheep and pay the Surak to El Nahab. Now that the Aga had experienced himself what sort of a man the other was, he would not dare interfere. Had he not himself called out from the tower, "Name thy price! Name thy price, El Nahab!" The whole desert had heard it. The Agas of other Khelas were informed. And if Mokur Aga had done so, they saw no reason why they should not pay the tribute. If the Aga did not want to know he needn't.

El Nahab had been able to take the horse from Mokur Aga's stall because of the fear of the men guarding Suleim. The soldiers stationed inside the gate had left the bolts open so as to not excite the ire of the Devil of the Desert. And the men supposed to guard the horse closed their eyes, feigning sleep, at the slightest noise. Indeed, they snored heavily when he tied their hands and feet.

Thin, tall, strong and quick, in the early thirties, a thin curly black beard on his long, pale face, eyes well set, a little larger and not as deep as the Arab eyes of that part of the desert, it would have taken no great science for any traveler to place his home town. An Antar from head to foot; a hillman with large bones and small feet, with a wide chest and long throat, a camel throat, strongly veined and loose skinned. And arms as strong as steel. A man raised on wheat and not on dates with curdled milk, the fare that stunts the bones and blotches the face.

The work of tying the sleeping soldiers was child's play. The gate was left open. Winding the rope of Suleim's halter on his left hand, so as to be able to shoot with his right over the left flank, he spurred his own horse, of blood as pure as the Aga's. Suleim responded to the pull. In a few minutes he became imbued with the racing instinct in all Arab stallions, and tried to outrun El Nahab's mount. It was very easy under such conditions to ride at top speed. Both horses raced, with Suleim, riderless, setting the pace. El Nahab watched Suleim's stride, strength and spirit.

But it was not El Nahab's intention to go very far that day. Less than ten miles from the Khela he had prepared a dugout. Over the top he had stretched a canvas on which he had strewn sand on a level with the rest of the flat. His horse, trained to raise a cloud of sand with his hind hoofs, did what he was bid, while they disappeared like phantoms, while Mokur Aga and his soldiers were looking on. The old captain never knew how near he was to Suleim, after El Nahab had dived into the dugout.

All through the length and breadth of the desert El Nahab had bored dugouts in the years of his dangerous life. A movement in the saddle was enough to get his horse to raise the dust and then glide into one of the caverns and security. There were dates and curdled camel milk and wheat, water and gunpowder and fodder in every one of these caves; enough to keep them for a few days. Some of the caverns had tunnels communicating with other caverns only a few feet away. El Nahab's horse knew these places as well as his master, for in the five years of life in the open desert El Nahab had never slept elsewhere than in one such place. He belonged to village people. Tents were odious and degrading to an Istabal Antar. In

HOW THE STORY STARTED

ISAAC FERNHAM, first Lord Honerton, entertains at dinner at his country house preliminary to a shooting party. His youngest son,

CECIL, is called from the dining room by a message from

HEGGS, head gamekeeper. Young Cecil had seduced the gamekeeper's daughter. The old man, in chastising Cecil, throws him to the stone floor, killing him. Through Lord Honerton's vast influence, Heggs is hanged. Heggs' daughter,

MARGARET, curses Lord Honerton and all the Fernhams. Lord Honerton dies and is succeeded by

JOSEPH FERNHAM, second Lord Honerton. Thirty years later Joseph entertains a party of friends in the same dining room; the occasion is the same, a dinner preceding a shooting meet. During the dinner Lord Honerton's youngest son,

ERNEST, is summoned to the gun room by the head gamekeeper. Recalling Cecil's fate, Lord Honerton, his wife, and Honerton's brother Samuel are deeply disturbed by the coincidence.

LORD HONERTON allowed his guests that evening far less time than usual for discussing his admirable port. He rose a little abruptly just as every one was settling down, and led the way towards the door.

"They are waiting for some of us to play bridge," he vouchsafed by way of explanation. "The coffee and cigars will be in the card room."

There was something almost like consternation among those who had just filled their glasses. The marquis declined to be hustled.

"We'll follow you in a minute, if we may, Honerton," he said. "Your port is too good to be treated in such a cavalier fashion."

Joseph mumbled something, and hurried on. He was not usually a nervous man, but a queer little demon of unrest was sitting in his heart. He crossed the hall at a speed which left Samuel far behind, and looked eagerly around the bridge room. Most of the women were collected there, some already at the bridge table, one or two around the great log fire. There was no sign of Ernest, however. Through the half closed portiere he could hear the sound of billiard balls in the room beyond. He looked in there and found Judith playing another youthful member of the house party a game of pool.

"Seen anything of Ernest?" he inquired.

Judith paused in the act of chalking her cue.

"He hasn't been in here, dad," she said. "I expect he's still with Middleton."

Joseph dropped the curtain, stepped back into the bridge room and made his way with somewhat greater deliberation towards the servants' quarters. He skirted these and, passing through a green baize door into a stone flagged passage which led to the rear of the house, pushed open the door of the gun room. A little blue cigaret smoke was still hanging about, but the room was empty. Robinson, one of the underkeepers, came out of an adjoining apartment with the gun which he had been cleaning in his hand.

"Have you seen Mr. Ernest?" Joseph asked quickly.

"Not for the last ten minutes, my lord," the man replied. "He was in the gun room with Middleton then."

"Where is Middleton?"

"Gone home about ten minutes since, my lord."

Joseph nodded and turned away with the intention of rejoining his guests, continually telling himself he was a fool, and continually wondering at the damp on his forehead, the queer sense of impending disaster in his heart. He did his best to struggle against it, however, and exchanged casual greetings with the little stream of men whom he met crossing the hall. Arriving in the dining room, he summoned Martin.

"Martin," he enjoined, "I wish you would find Mr Ernest for me. He has perhaps gone up to his room. If he isn't there, search until you find him. I want him for bridge."

"Very good, my lord," the man replied.

Joseph returned to the bridge room. He looked around eagerly with some faint hope that he might have missed Ernest on his way to the back quarters. He was not anywhere in sight, however, nor was he in the billiard room, nor in the great lounge hall where there was another billiard table and where one or two men were playing pool. Joseph returned once more to the bridge room, poured himself out a stiff glass of brandy and drank it.

"Who's for bridge?" he asked, strolling towards his guests. "We have enough for three tables, haven't we? Will you play with me, marchioness, and you, Lady Levater, and you, Pownall? Good! Then you four might play as you are" he added, with a wave of the hand, "and Ernest can make you others up when he comes."

"Where is Ernest?" Lady Honerton inquired, looking across at her husband. "I thought you went to find him."

"He seems to have gone up to his room, my dear," the latter replied. "I've sent Martin to fetch him. Will you come to this table, Lady Levater?"

THERE was a certain amount of hubbub for the next few minutes while every one settled down; then comparative silence, broken only by the soft fall of the cards, a subdued exclamation, and the occasional impact of the billiard balls in the next room. Rachel, Lady Honerton, who was not playing, sat in an easy chair, pretending to read an evening paper, but with her eyes fixed nearly all the time upon the door. Her husband, who had fortified himself with another liqueur brandy, had determined to conquer a fit of nervousness which his sane self told him was little less than idiocy. He puffed at a huge cigar and played his usual sound, if somewhat aggressive game. His skillful play of the hand evoked his partner's heartfelt admiration.

"If I could only play like you, Lord Honerton!" she murmured. "What I find so difficult is concentration. I find my mind wandering off to something else when I particularly want to watch the discards or count the number of trumps that are in."

"Concentration," Joseph pronounced, keeping his eyes sedulously turned away from the door, "is one of the disciplines of life."

The marchioness sighed.

"That sounds like a copy book maxim," she declared, "but they never did help one a bit in real life, did they?"

The door was opened and Martin, followed by two footmen who had come in to remove the coffee equipage, entered the room. He made his way at once to his master's chair and stood there for a moment while a hand was being played, in respectful silence. As soon as the last card had fallen he made his report.

"I am sorry, my lord, but I have not been able to find Mr. Ernest," he announced. "I have been up to his suite of rooms and I have tried the picture gallery, the ballroom, and the squash racket court."

"Have you been in the library?" Joseph inquired.

"I went there first, my lord. There is nowhere in the house I have not tried."

Samuel came hobbling across the room, a queer look of concern in his gaunt face.

"What's become of the lad, Joseph?" he demanded. "What does Martin say?"

"It appears he is not in the house anywhere," was the strained reply.

Maj. Pownall, who knew nothing of the family history, was impatient to get on with the game. He looked up from the cards which he had just sorted.

"Well, nothing can have happened to him here, can it?" he observed. "And, after all, it is not many minutes since he was with your keeper. He may have strolled out with him or gone to see what sort of a night it is."

"Anything in the nature of uneasiness is, of course, absurd," Joseph declared firmly, picking up his own cards. "It is simply irritating that he should have left three people waiting to play bridge."

"What is it, dad?" Judith asked, coming through the portiere. "Where's Ernest?"

"Hiding apparently, because he doesn't want to play bridge with us," Joyce Cloughton, one of the three who were left out, observed. "I don't wonder. I let him down shockingly last week at home."

"He wouldn't mind about that," Judith laughed, "but it's too bad of him to keep you waiting. Shall I make you up until he comes? All the same, I wonder where on earth he can be," she added, as she took her place at the table.

"Martin can't find him anywhere," her father observed. "He'll probably turn up, though, in a few minutes."

"Is there anything more I can do, my lord?" the butler inquired.

"Telephone over to the garage, and keep your eyes open," Joseph directed. "The lad has a new car he drove down from London in," he explained to the marchioness. "He may have gone over to have a look at it."

AGAIN the game proceeded; deal followed deal. Samuel sat in an easy chair on one side of the [illegible] wood fire, thoughtful and absorbed. Rachel Honerton no longer made a pretense of reading the evening paper. She sat with her eyes steadfastly fixed upon the door. Half an hour, three-quarters of an hour passed, and with it the effects of Joseph's second liqueur brandy. At the end of a rubber he laid down his cards.

"I must ask you to excuse me for a few minutes," he said. "This absurd escapade of Ernest's is getting on my nerves. I must make a few further inquiries."

"It does seem queer," Major Pownall acknowledged, glancing at the clock.

Joseph left his place and crossed the room towards his wife. The marchioness leaned forward, and in an undertone began to tell Major Pownall of the tragedy which had happened in the house thirty years ago. Joseph as he approached his wife, tried hard to smile. It was rather a ghastly attempt. Her eyes watched his expression anxiously.

"What is it, dad?" Judith asked. "Where's Ernest?"

"My dear," he said soothingly, "it is ridiculous to be anxious about Ernest. At the same time I am angry with him. He ought not to desert my guests in this fashion. I am going out to make a few more inquiries."

Rachel was only maintaining her self-control with an effort. Her long, thin fingers were crushing the newspaper she held.

"Let me know, let me know quickly," she begged. "It seems absurd, of course, but if only Ernest had not sat in the same place, if Martin had not come round to him in the same way, given almost the same message! It was like a tragedy thrown back from hell!"

"Rubbish, my dear!" Joseph scoffed. "Sheer rubbish! These sorts of things don't repeat themselves. It's just the setting. Damned unpleasant, but that's all! There'll be news of the lad directly."

Joseph bustled out of the room, found his way to his private study, and sent for Martin. The latter appeared almost at once, ushering in Middleton, the keeper, a lanky, weather beaten man, a little disturbed at this unexpected summons, which had reached him just as he had been on the point of going to bed. In his haste he had forgotten to replace either his collar or tie, a fact of which he was nervously conscious.

"I sent for Mr. Middleton in case your lordship would care to have a word with him," Martin explained.

Joseph nodded. He was making a brave attempt to treat the affair lightly.

"We seem to have lost Mr. Ernest, Middleton," he said. "Have you any idea what became of him after he had finished with you?"

"I can't say, I am sure, my lord," was the doubtful reply. "I left him in the gun room."

"Did he seem much as usual?"

"I couldn't see no difference, my lord."

"He didn't give you any hint which might account for his absence at the present moment?"

The keeper shook his head, obviously mystified.

"All that I can call to mind about the young gentleman was that he seemed in a rare hurry to get back again. He did say something about having to play in a game called 'bridge'—I think it was, your lordship."

"Sorry to have fetched you up, Middleton," Joseph concluded, with a dismissing wave of the hand. "See that they give you a glass of wine in the servants' hall. You have nothing more to say to me, Martin?"

"Nothing, my lord. Except that I should like to tell you that I have satisfied myself personally that Mr. Ernest is not in the house."

"And the cars were all in the garage?"

"Miles, the head chauffeur, has gone out himself to look them over, my lord. There were several visitors' cars the others weren't sure about."

Joseph looked at his watch.

"It is now five-and-twenty past eleven, Martin," he pointed out. "Just two hours since Mr. Ernest left the dining table to give a few simple orders to Middleton. What the devil can have become of him?"

"He can't be far away, your lordship," the man ventured.

His master brooded over the matter for a few moments, then turned towards the door. As he neared the threshold, Martin spoke.

"I beg your lordship's pardon for making the suggestion, but would you care for me to ring up the police station at Norwich?"

Joseph was conscious of a little shiver. More than ever this strange affair of Ernest's disappearance was becoming full of hateful reminiscence.

"I don't think we need treat the thing quite so seriously as that, Martin," he declared, with an attempt at lightness in his tone. "After all, it's only a matter of two hours."

"If your lordship will excuse my saying so," the man observed respectfully, "Mr. Ernest isn't one of those harum scarum young gentlemen. He's not likely to be in any trouble or anything of that sort."

"That's all right, Martin," his master acquiesced. "He's a good lad, as steady and level headed as I am myself. That's what makes the whole damned thing so extraordinary."

"Just so, your lordship," Martin agreed.

JOSEPH, Lord Honerton, returned unwillingly to his guests. Except so far as regarded himself, his wife, and Samuel, it was impossible for any one to fully appreciate the tragic note in this curious event. It was scarcely callousness, but the rank improbability of anything serious having happened to their host's son, which kept the rest of the party unconcerned. Half-a-dozen of them were playing "fives" on the billiard table, and another four at bridge had been arranged. Rachel was knitting with fingers which seemed to fly faster than ever, but her eyes called widely to her husband's across the space of the room. He shook his head with a cheerfulness which was half bravado.

"Anything been heard of the young man?" some one asked.

"Not yet," Joseph replied. "Miles is down looking over the cars. Thoughtless young idiot! I'll give him a talking to when he gets back!"

"Any poachers about, do you think? Could he have heard a gun?" another of the male guests suggested.

Joseph shook his head doubtfully.

"There are four keepers on duty tonight, and no report has been made. Poachers wouldn't get much quarter here. I give most of the game away and employ half the neighborhood. . . . Yes, my dear."

He crossed the room toward his wife. Her fingers were uncanny in their distortions, and streams of light flashed from her stabbing needles.

"You have heard no news, Joseph?" she asked.

"None."

"You have met with no fresh cause for fear?"

"Pshaw! Of course not" he answered with well simulated impatience. "You and I are making idiots of ourselves over this business, mother. Nothing can have happened to the boy. He was in no sort of trouble. He couldn't have had an enemy in the world, and he's as strong as a horse. We're making idiots of ourselves—positive idiots!"

Rachel made no remark. Her brain was a little weary, but the pall of apprehension remained. From the inner room Martin made a discreet reappearance.

"I thought you would like to know, my lord, that Miles has just got back from the garage," he announced. "None of the cars are missing, nor is there any sign of any one of them having been tampered with."

"So that's that," Joseph murmured, a little aimlessly.

"Some of the underservants," the man continued, "have made up a little search party of their own and taken in every room, back and front, including the cellars. It is absolutely certain that Mr. Ernest is not in the house. Two or three of the men have been through the outhouses and shrubberies, and they have handed in a similar report. George, Mr. Ernest's own valet, has been through his master's things and assured me that not even a pair of shoes is missing. Mr. Ernest was wearing thin slippers for dinner."

"Well, that settles one thing, anyway," Joseph declared. "He can't be far away. Let the servants retire at the usual time, Martin, and stop all gossip as much as you can."

"I shall discourage it as far as possible, my lord," was Martin's valedictory assurance.

From the billiard room came sounds of laughter and the shrieking of voices as the younger people played their unruly game, and from the bridge table in the corner, the monotonous patter of the cards, the methodical calling over of the score. Joseph and his wife were in a little corner of the room alone. Rachel's fingers were still busy with their nervous task, but there were lines of anguish in her face.

"Can't you feel it, Joseph?" she whispered. "Somewhere in the background—not so far away—it seems to me I can hear it all the time, and they laugh and deal! And in the billiard room—what a hubbub!"

"What do you mean?" he demanded. "What can you hear?"

The fingers slackened in their speed, the needles ceased to flash. There was all the throb and pain of actual tragedy in her mournful words.

"Ernest!" she whispered. "He's lost. He's gone into the darkness, and we don't know where to find him. We don't know!"

Joseph was half irritated, half apprehensive.

"What the devil are you talking about, Rachel?" he exclaimed. "Ernest's all right! He must be all right!"

His wife made no reply. She had recommenced her knitting.

JUDITH, who had been a little restless in her movements during a morning of singular and tense neutrality, pitched her shooting stick by Freddy Amberleys' side. He signalized the occasion by bringing down a creditable right and left of high flying cock pheasants. She decided to remain.

"I don't really enjoy watching shooting," she confessed, "but if I must, I prefer to see it well done. I suppose you are a good shot, Freddy?"

"One of the best in the county," he assured her, with cheerful vaingloriousness.

She sighed gently.

"This confidence," she murmured, "is one of the most pleasing characteristics of extreme youth. Ignore me, please, and mark over on your left."

Again her companion did his duty satisfactorily and Judith smiled approval upon him.

"Tell me," he inquired a few minutes later, "what is that heap of ruins just outside the covert? I noticed them the last time I was here."

A shade of rather somber concern darkened Judith's beautiful face.

"Those stones," she explained, "are the remains of a tragedy which occurred here thirty years ago—long before I was born, and when you, I should think, were in your cradle."

"I've never heard about it," he observed curiously. "What was it?"

"It happened," she continued, "on the eve of a shooting party, just like this one. My father's youngest brother, Cecil, who was rather by way of being the family favorite, was murdered by the head keeper."

"I remember now," he acknowledged. "I heard the whole story in the smoking room last night."

"There was a girl, of course," she proceeded, "and the usual sordid business. You probably heard as much about it as I know. The tragedy, however, consisted in the fact that, without a doubt, the keeper never meant to kill my uncle, but was disturbed and threw him backwards so that he hit his head upon the stone floor."

"What happened to the keeper?" Amberleys asked.

"He was hanged," was the quiet reply.

"The devil! It doesn't sound like anything more than manslaughter."

"The man was arraigned for murder and found guilty with a strong recommendation for mercy," Judith went on. "No one doubted that he would get off with twenty years' penal servitude, but my grandfather—Israel Fernham, who was an old gentleman of singularly unforgiving temperament—had great influence with the government at that time, and he moved heaven and earth to prevent any reduction of the sentence. In the end he succeeded, although there was a terrible scandal, and the home secretary soon afterwards resigned. Those ruins you were asking me about are the remains of the keeper's cottage. My grandfather had it razed to the ground on the day the man was hanged, and would never allow it to be rebuilt."

There was a brief silence, while Judith's companion added to his bag. Then the beaters appeared at the end of the wood and the two young people strolled off together to the next stand.

"That old grandfather of yours must have been quite a character," Amberleys remarked.

"I suppose I'm wrong," she confessed, "but I admire him immensely. He was a strict Jew, a follower of the Mosaic law. He never smoked or touched wine or indulged in any of the modern luxuries. There were no rules in his household. Every one did as they chose, but he himself lived the most austere and simple life. He never failed a friend, and he never forgave an enemy. Cecil's death, however, broke his heart. He only lived for a short time afterwards. It is curious," she continued, with a little tremor in her tone, "that you should have asked me about those ruins today. Do you know what my Uncle Samuel told me this morning? Cecil was fetched out from the dining table to see the keeper about the morrow's shooting exactly in the same way that Ernest was sent for last night. My mother and father and Uncle Samuel were there, of course. Can't you imagine how it must all have come back to them last night—the horror of it, the same message, the same hour, Ernest, again the youngest of the family—and now this disappearance of his?"

"Most amazing coincidence I ever heard of in my life," the young man admitted. "Quite enough to upset any one!"

"Of course," she went on, "there couldn't be any possible connection between the two things. Middleton, this present keeper, as it happens, is a bachelor, and Ernest I believe, is a remarkably moral young man. All the same there's something almost morbidly horrible——"

"I think it's unspeakable," Amberleys interrupted. "Your father must be an awfully good sport to have gone on with today. I wonder he didn't send us all home till things were cleared up, anyhow."

She shook her head. There was a dreamy look in her velvety eyes.

"I think we Jews are all fatalists," she said. "Father and mother and Uncle Samuel are, of course, unbalanced by memories and associations. I cannot think it possible that anything could have happened to Ernest."

They were standing at the end of a glade, and from some distance away came the sound of the tapping of trees, the shouts of the beaters, occasionally the keeper's whistle. They drew a few yards apart; Amberleys mechanically on the qui vive, Judith lost in a little sea of drifting impressions. It was a still day towards the end of October, fine and warm, but with the colors fading now from the clear sky. There was a queer smell of rotting undergrowth mingled with the odor of a recently kindled bonfire of weeds in the corner of an adjacent field. The air was becoming a little chilly, the trees beginning to take to themselves less definite shape. A promise of frost was in the air; the twigs broke crisply under the feet of the advancing beaters. The sound of firing all around was now much more frequent and, her companion's attention being fully engaged, Judith found herself suddenly studying with a curiously detached interest, the man whom she knew she was expected to marry. Against his personal appearance there was not a word to be said. He was tall, inclined to sturdiness, but after all it was a man's figure. His features, without being regular, were good enough, his slightly red hair had a tendency to curl in becoming fashion, his expression was frank and even amiable. He had sat in the house of commons for two years and had made one or two speeches with moderate success. His politics were stereotyped but sincere. His outlook upon the wider subjects of life, considering his upbringing and characteristics, not intolerant.

JUDITH permitted her thoughts to dwell deliberately upon the prospect of her becoming Lady Frederick Amberleys, and afterwards Marchioness of Holt. There was a town house and a country estate, of course. Her own great fortune might provide also a flat in Paris, a palace at Venice, or a villa on the Riviera. She might count upon retaining a certain measure of the more intellectual life to which she was already becoming accustomed, but a measure which would have its limitations. Nothing, for instance, could interfere with the shooting. The hunting would follow. A grudging month in town for the season, perhaps. A month for a flying visit abroad. Then the cubbing. . . . Supposing she decided to strike out a line of her own? She was the wrong woman to do that, she thought, with a faint smile. Life and heredity had given her an amazing temperament; the fervid, almost passionate imagination of the gifted of her race. She was an unfaltering judge of herself and her weaknesses. Venice with its traditions, Florence with its art, Paris with its nameless sense of excitement, were no places for her to visit as a wanderer alone. Realizing this, was it wise for her to marry at all a man of Amberleys' type?

She found herself watching the rabbits and an occasional hare as they rushed through the undergrowth, pausing for a moment at the sight of her, and either dashing back again, or taking their chance of safety—a poor one, as it happened, for both Amberleys and the gun on either side were shooting well. One hare in particular almost sat up and looked at her, ran this way and that, dumb terror in its eyes, and finally scurried by her, only to be sent head over heels in a lifeless heap when it had reached the line of safety. She gave a little shiver. After all, it was death. She found herself thinking of Ernest—an absurd connection, she told herself, and yet there it was. The sense of foreboding, which she had carried with her all day, was suddenly redoubled. As they walked homeward across the park her feet scarcely seemed to touch the turf with its little crackling hardness of frost. Amberleys, struggling to keep up with her, handed his gun at last to his loader who was following behind.

"You say you are no athlete," he remarked good humoredly. "I shouldn't like to take you on at a walking match."

"I want to know if there is any news," she confided. "Somehow or other, I have managed so far to keep all anxieties at the back of my mind, but the day has been rather a nightmare, hasn't it? I hoped we should have heard something by this time."

Her companion nodded sympathetically.

"It's one of those things which must be cleared up before long," he observed. "A young fellow like Ernest can't vanish into thin air, and he can't go far in a dress suit and dancing pumps. There are no secret wells or chambers at Honerton, are there?"

"None that I ever heard of," she replied.

"Then don't you worry," he begged. "Time enough, if you've got to, when you hear something definite. And—er—Lady Judith, you've got enough to think about and worry about just now, but I don't like to go away without telling you that there was something I had it in my mind to say—that I wanted to say up in town—but one gets so little chance to see you alone there."

"As you aren't going to say it," she rejoined, with a faint note of warning in her tone, "let us leave it alone altogether, for the present, shall we? I feel that I have more than enough to think about just now—that I couldn't consider anything rationally until we understand something about Ernest."

"That's all right," Amberleys assented with resignation. "I only thought I'd give you an idea that had been in my mind, so that you knew what to expect, eh?" he added a little nervously. "I see the family omnibus is there waiting, with all the luggage, so I expect that means we're booked to take our departure."

A sharp turn and a few minutes' climb had brought them into sudden view of the house. To Judith's intense sensibility there was something almost sinister in its great unlit front with the smoke ascending straight from many chimneys and a faint mist rising in the park on either side. Several cars were standing in the sweep before the hall door. The shiver of a new anxiety chilled Judith.

"Evidently there is no news, then!" she exclaimed.

THEY hurried on, only to find that her surmise had been correct. Incredible though it seemed to all of them, not the slightest trace of Ernest had been found, nor had any word come from him; a condition of affairs which could no longer be regarded as anything but gravely portentous. Most of the local guests had slipped quietly away. Judith inquired for her father.

"His lordship is in the library with the gentleman from Scotland Yard," Martin told her. "Her ladyship is there, too."

Judith bade a few more adieux and hastened to join her parents. Two visitors of unmistakably professional appearance were seated at the table, her father was standing on the hearth rug, Rachel was seated in an easy chair, bolt upright, with her hands upon her lap.

"My daughter, Lady Judith," Joseph muttered in a drab tone.

Both men rose at once to their feet.

"Is there really no news?" Judith asked almost incredulously. "Haven't you discovered anything at all?"

"We have had no success up to the present, Lady Judith," the detective who seemed to be in charge of the affair confessed. "Your brother appears to have left the house last night immediately after his visitor, Middleton, the keeper. He walked down the back avenues, sometimes on the avenue itself and sometimes on the turf, as far as a gate which leads on to a rough road, which Lord Honerton tells me is seldom used except for carting timber. From there we have lost all traces of him, but there are some indications of a car having been down the road. My men are searching it thoroughly now."

"And this is all you have discovered?" Judith exclaimed. "We still haven't the faintest idea where Ernest is?"

"Not the faintest," was the somewhat curt reply. "Disappearances, as a rule," the detective went on, "are easily classified. They arise from loss of memory, fear of apprehension for some crime or misdeed, or an affair in which a woman is concerned. Loss of memory in this case seems scarcely feasible, as this would certainly not drive the young man out of the house. Your father insist upon it that the regularity of your brother's life renders the other two impossible. We seem, therefore, to be up against an entirely novel problem."

"This gentleman is Inspector Rodes," Joseph intervened, addressing Judith. "Mr. Rodes has had charge of most of the famous disappearance cases for the last ten years. There is not one of them, he tells me, which he has failed in the end to clear up."

"One may meet one's Waterloo at any time, of course," Rodes observed, "but I must admit I do not look upon absolute disappearances as possible in these days. We have scarcely one record upon our books where we have failed to locate the missing person in time. And I am bound to say," he went on, with a slightly apologetic smile, "that we have invariably found the information given us by relatives entirely misleading. That is why I shall be forced, if I continue the conduct of this case, to make my own inquiries into your son's life and habits. Motiveless disappearances do not afford us a practical problem."

"You can do as you choose," Joseph declared brusquely. "All that I want is my boy."

The telephone bell commenced to ring. The instrument stood upon the table by the side of which Judith was seated. She picked up the receiver, and listened indifferently. Suddenly her whole expression changed. Her eyes flashed. She threw out her arm.

"Ernest, Ernest!" she cried. "Go on, dear. Where are you? It is I, Judith!"

There was a moment's pause. Every one in the room was breathless with excitement. Rodes stole closer to the instrument.

"Ernest!" Judith pleaded. "Go on, go on! Tell me where you are."

Again she paused, and this time there was something like terror in her face. She handed the receiver to the detective.

"I heard his voice," she faltered. "He asked if this was Honerton Chase. Then he never spoke again. It seems all dead."

Rodes held the receiver to his ear.

"Hullo!" he shouted. "Hullo!"

There was no response. He rang up violently and held the receiver once more to his ear. The slightly cynical expression had left his face. He was genuinely interested. He turned to the little company.

"The line is dead," he announced. "Either the wire has been cut or there has been some accident!"

ME. TOO! by Owen Oliver

Uncle John wrote: "A man's a fool to think he can live his life properly alone." His warning awakened Godfrey to the chill of his own loneliness.

UNCLE JOHN'S legacy seemed only to depress Godfrey Barnes, though the estate was valued for probate at £33,749/13/5, and it all came to him. He had made nearly as much during his sixteen years in Australia, and he had no particular desire to be richer. At the moment, he felt no great desire for anything. He had been overworking for a long while, and the doctor was insisting he must take a rest.

"It's sheer brain fag," he pronounced. "You are wearing yourself out; growing much too old for a man of—shall I say forty?"

"Thirty-five," Godfrey told him. "I suppose that covers your point. Yes, I'm pretty sick of work, but I don't know what to put in its place. If I must take a holiday, I'll go to England and settle my uncle's affairs."

"Leave them to the lawyer," the doctor advised, "and have a merry Christmas with your friends and relations."

"Haven't any left," Godfrey said. "He was the last. That's why he left it to me: because he had no one else. He said so in his last letter. I was feeling run down before, and his letter put the lid on it. I can't get it out of my mind."

This was the letter:

Dear Godfrey: I am going, and, naturally, I am leaving everything to you, because neither of us has any one else. I write as one lonely man to another.

You were, and from your letters I judge still are, the very spit of me. I feel as if you are myself living over again. I judge from your letters your life so far has been a duplicate of mine. I want you to consider a change in the rest of it. That is why I am sitting propped up in bed, shortening my last hours by scrawling this letter. You've got to consider it carefully; but it isn't a condition, only counsel.

Godfrey, I am a lonely old man, dying with no one about me but hired servants; a hermit whose only consolation was his money. There isn't much consolation in it now. A man's a fool to think he can live his life properly alone. I've been one. Don't you be. Find a nice woman and marry her. You oughtn't to have any difficulty in finding a wife. You were a good looking boy, and, going by your photo some time ago, you remain a good looking man. Make a family home of this place, or of some other place. Don't let what is good in you die. Pass it on.

Nurse says I'm exciting myself too much and mustn't write any more. So that's that. Don't be the fool I've been. Good luck.

Your affectionate uncle,
JOHN BARNES.

TWO months later, when Godfrey was going over his uncle's papers, he came upon an old card which told him his memory had played him false. He had asked a girl to marry him, and she had said yes. The old card brought it all out of some pigeonhole of his memory.

He was fifteen and she was thirteen. She was sitting on his mother's dining room table—a cousin several times removed who had come for a Christmas visit; a dim, fairylike creature with blue eyes; rather a wise little fairy, and old for her age. She was swinging her legs in time to a gay tune which some one was playing on the drawing room piano, and sometimes swinging her flaxen plait, too. She held a baby. It belonged to a friend of mother's who was staying there, the person playing the piano. The girl was making the baby beat time with its chubby hands. It was a jolly, fat baby, just beginning to talk, and it kept trying to wink at him. It couldn't manage to close one eye without the other closing, too. That made him laugh.

She had taken the baby from him, just before, as she always took away Carlo or the cat if he petted them too much. She was a jealous fairy, and she liked him. She also took herself away if he petted her. Only, she always came back! He used to be indignant when people called them sweethearts, because she was "only a girl"; but he had fought Willie Rice for claiming her as his. As he watched her jigging and laughing it came suddenly upon him that she was a wonderfully pretty thing.

The bonny girl held out her hand impulsively. "Me, too!" she cried.

"I say, Evie," he blurted out, "you look like a fairy in a book."

"Don't be silly," she advised, with a fairylike pout. "I wouldn't let you make love to me. Godfrey, go and steal a berry off the mistletoe. I want to kiss baby under it."

He stole the berry. She kissed the baby. He kissed the baby. The baby kissed them both—him until Evie pulled her away.

"You're a forward little thing," she reproved her. "Ladies don't let gentlemen kiss them—not unless they are exactly under the mistletoe."

"It's over you," he told her, trying to speak as if he merely stated an ordinary fact.

"Not exactly," she demurred. She leaned back to inspect it.

"It is now!" he claimed. "There! This time I'll have it more exact. I say, Evie, when you grow up, will you marry me?"

"Yes," she consented. She laughed and showed little, regular, pearly teeth.

"Me, too!" the baby cried. "Me, too!"

She probably thought they were referring to sweets, but he answered her, promised her the reversion of the place if he didn't get Evie.

"But you really will?" he asked the fairy.

"If you don't forget to ask me when you're old enough," she told him. "Boys are rotten. They always forget."

"I shan't forget," he vowed. "Not ever!"

BUT he had forgotten—for many, many years—until he came upon the funny Christmas card in a bundle of documents tied round by a piece of string, together with two theater programs, a piece of a fan, two faded portraits of a lady, and three little notes on violet paper beginning "Dear Jack" and signed "Yours, Fanny."

"I haven't even as much," Godfrey thought.

The Christmas card was a quaint, childish thing which he and Evie had sent to Uncle John just after the "proposal." Uncle John hated bought cards. He always said if any one couldn't trouble to write him a line of their own, he didn't value their good wishes. So they determined to send him a card of their own composition and manufacture. He was in the habit of giving them Christmas presents, and, in spite of his gruffness, they rather liked him; regarded the gruffness rather as part of a game—and perhaps it was!

Godfrey found a drawing card, about the size of a cabinet photograph, in a drawer of the bookcase, and divided it fairly by ruler and measure into two parts—one for Evie to fill, and one for himself. The baby said, "Me, too!" but was told that her share was to sit on the table and watch them do it. She watched them with great interest; also she watched the inkpot.

The top half of the card bore an ill drawn man with a long gun shooting out a Christmas card nearly as big as the man. On this was printed "A Merry Christmas from Godfrey."

The lower half of the card bore a number of tiny, ill-shaped circles connected by crooked lines. The drawing was, presumably, intended for a bunch of berries or mistletoe. Underneath was printed "Merry Christmas from Evie, Neoe by curtsy."

There was a third part of the card which was not part of their intention. It was a black smudge between the two designs, and against it was printed "Baby May." Its presence was further explained on the back of the card: "May got her finger in the inkpot and said me too and did it. So it is from her and she doesn't know any better. She is good for a baby."

That was the history of the card, and what it recalled to him. It must have recalled something to Uncle John. He had kept it for twenty years, beside the casual notes from "Fanny," twenty years its senior. Such queer little trifles to keep, but the heart is a child, you never know what it will take for its plaything!

"He sent me a sportsman's knife," Godfrey reflected. "Lor'! Wasn't mother horrified! And Evie a silver backed mirror, and the kid a doll. It was a grand knife, that. I did some damage with it! The old chap had a heart. I suppose I have, though I've hidden it away for a time—like the poor old pater did the knife. I wasn't any unaffectionate boy. I was fond of that baby, though, like a boy, I wouldn't own it; and, if ever I was really fond of any one in my life, it was Evie. Sixteen when I saw her last. If I'd stayed at home, I expect—not 'expect' exactly, but I believe she was the girl that I ought to have married. I never heard that she married; but, after mother died, I suppose I shouldn't have. Uncle never mentioned her. I wonder what she's like now. I might find her in the address book. The old man was methodical. What the deuce was her surname—Nelson? No. Newman? No. It began with N—Norton—Norrington—Noble—I've got it! Newton; Eva Newton. I'll try under N, anyway."

HE FOUND her under Newton with three changes of address. He took a fancy to go to the last at Surbiton, but learned she had moved.

"Gone somewhere where she would be nearer her work," the new occupant said. "Doing drawings of things for dress catalogues, I made out it was. I remember her all right. I lodged next door then, and we spoke; but it's near seven years ago. No, I can't tell you her present address or anything about her. She was one that kept to herself, especially with gentlemen. There were several here as were disposed to be friendly, but she wasn't taking any. I will say she was nice looking."

"As a child," Barnes remarked, "she was the prettiest creature I ever saw. Her people and mine were friendly. They used to call us sweethearts."

"Did they now?" the woman said. "Pity for her you didn't keep it up, for she seemed as if she had a struggle; but I expect you know more about her affairs than I do."

"No," Barnes denied. "I went abroad when I was nineteen, and lost trace of her."

"Just like you men!" the woman charged him. "Out of sight, out of mind. That's the way with you!"

"I've no doubt she forgot just as easily," Barnes thought. "It was only a child's affair," he said.

"Don't make no mistake," the woman advised him, "a woman may live to a hundred, and have twenty sweethearts, and never forgets the first. She'll remember you, all right."

"I don't believe it," he laughed.

He didn't altogether believe it, but somehow he hoped it was true. His feeling of loneliness had grown during the fortnight which he had spent in his uncle's big house, empty except for a caretaker. His nerves had not yet quite recovered from their overwork, and he was in a mood to take impressions. So the old Christmas card impressed him. At the back of his mind he took the idea that the remedy for his loneliness was Evie, but put it to himself that she was the only female chum he had ever had, and, as she was (very) distantly related to Uncle John, there was no reason why he shouldn't hand over a portion of the legacy to her, as evidently she wasn't well off.

With that excuse, he made inquiries about her, but without success. Then, the day before Christmas eve, a card came for Uncle John. "With Evie's best wishes and kind memories." She evidently had not heard of the old man's death. She gave no address, but the postmark was Hundleby.

SO he went.

He found Hundleby was no longer the little place he remembered. There were smoky factories, and a dozen big hotels, and there were three Newtons in the telephone directory. There were fourteen in the local guide. He spent Christmas eve calling upon the lot, but Evie wasn't any of them. They told him of various other girls named Newton who were not in the directory—factory hands, servants, etc. But none of these answered in the least to his description, he was assured.

At one of the shop postoffices, where the Hundleby Mercury was published, they advised him to advertise in that paper, but he was too late for that week's issue, they said.

He arranged for an advertisement the next week; wandered about in the crowded High street most of the evening, fancying that he might meet Evie; played billiards with the marker at the Railway hotel, and pool with some strangers for the rest of the time; went to bed earlyish, and woke up the next morning to face a lonely Christmas. Since Uncle John's letter had told him he was lonely—he hadn't thought about it before—he had feared loneliness more and more.

"I shall have the jumps if I don't do something," he said to himself. "I'll go for a walk; have a look at their precious park. She might be out walking. It's strange how an idea obsesses you. She's nothing but that to me. After all, Christmas is sacred to old friends; and she's the only one I seem to have left, unless I reckon Me Too! That's absurd. You can't be friends with a baby who couldn't remember you!"

He had walked twice round the park—it was almost empty—and was well upon his third round, when, just by the drinking fountain, he met two ladies; a tall, palish, quiet looking, slim lady, in the thirties, and a bonny big laughing girl something over twenty. He didn't notice the girl particularly, only the elder lady. There was something in her walk which aroused a recollection. She did not seem to step so much as to flit—like a fairy!

"It looks like Evie," he told himself, directly he saw her in the distance. "It really might be Evie—what she might grow up to be. Pretty woman, anyhow. It is Evie." He stepped up to her, and took off his hat. "I beg your pardon, madam, but I believe we are old acquaintances. Don't you know me, Evie? I was your first sweetheart!"

The lady laughed with evident pleasure. When she laughed she was Evie unmistakably. "Why!" she cried. "Godfrey Barnes! How nice!" She held out her hand and he shook it vigorously.

"Your first!" he repeated.

"First!" She laughed. "How you men flatter yourselves! My first was about ten years before you, when I was three! But I believe you were the first who actually proposed."

"You accepted me, you know," he observed.

"And you jilted me! Aren't they funny, children's affairs? How has the world used you, Godfrey?"

"Better than I deserve. I have made money, but I am alone in the world."

"But—Uncle John?"

"Gone."

"O! Poor old fellow. Poor old fellow.

"He left everything to me. I don't see why he should have, and I don't need it. You were related to him, too."

"Great second niece or something," she said. "I had no claim. I can't think of taking anything from you, Godfrey, if that is the kind purpose of your visit."

"Why not?" he asked. "Pride?"

"Not exactly," she denied. She took a keen look at him. He felt that she was telling herself that the idea of their childish friendship had taken too strong a hold of his lonely mind. "No, not pride exactly, Godfrey. If I were in real need, I dare say I would accept your assistance. Anyhow, it will be one of the bright memories in my life that you have offered it. But I am not in need; and why should you?"

"Because," he told her, "you are absolutely the only old friend whom I have left in the world."

His voice shook. The bonny girl held out her hand impulsively. "Me, too!" she cried. "You don't remember me. I don't remember you, either, but Mrs. Meadows has often told me about you. Do you recollect the naughty baby who smudged your Christmas card?"

"Smudge!" he cried, and took her hand. "You! Who is Mrs. Meadows?"

The girl laughed; extended her hands toward her companion.

"My husband," Evie said, "is Dr. Meadows. We live in Hill Crescent. You're coming round to dinner with us, of course."

"And with me, too," the bonny girl stated. "I'm staying there."

GODFREY was going to make an excuse, but it suddenly occurred to him that he was still holding the girl's hand. He let it go, and then he felt somehow that he had let go all the support which remained to him; a friend who had offered herself, "me, too!" He felt as if he didn't want to leave all the friend that was left. Besides, Evie was still a friend. Anyhow, he reflected, he needn't make a fool of himself. He must pass off his confusion and disappointment by taking things lightly.

"It sounds attractive," he told the girl, "but a bit dangerous. Don't you remember that, failing Evie, I was to marry you!"

"You'd have to brighten up a good deal," the girl told him saucily. "I'll keep an option till I see how you go on! I say, Mr. Barnes—I always say impudent things—don't you smile even at Christmas time?"

She looked at him with twinkling eyes, and he smiled, at first stiffly, and then genuinely. Somehow he liked the saucy girl, just as he had liked the chubby baby.

"Come along," Evie said. "You may as well walk round with us now. Jack ought to be through with his patients by this time. He'll be so pleased to see such an old friend of mine. I shall tell him that you proposed to me!"

"And me, too!" cried the girl.

She clapped her hands.

"She hasn't altered, has she?" Evie asked.

"People don't alter so much," he observed. "I used to think you were a fairy, Evie. I'll have to get used to calling you Mrs. Meadows, or the doctor may poison me! I still think you are a kind of fairy to a lonely man. And—" he looked at the bonny girl—"and you, too!"

"Step it out, you lazybones!" Evie cried. "Jack will wonder what has become of us! As a matter of fact, Godfrey, it was Mab—that's her proper name—who proposed to you. However, I'll guarantee she won't do it again!"

"Will you guarantee me?" he inquired.

"No! You always were in love with the naughty fat baby! I used to be frightfully jealous of her, I remember. The forward little minx, with her 'me, too!'"

Anyhow, when Godfrey announced a fortnight later that he was going back to Australia, he said, "and Mab with me."

He is convinced nowadays that she was his first sweetheart, as well as his last; but their fat little baby disputes it whenever he says that Mummy is daddy's girl.

"Me, too!" she cries. "Me, too!"

caverns one could be near and far. One such cavern led to underneath the timber floor of the Khava of Burma.

BUT after the first stop Suleim grew restless and began to pull at the rope which held him fast to El Nahab's horse. The rider offered him food and water. He would take none and sniffed the air. A real Arab horse, thought El Nahab! He won't break bread until he knows his host! Well, my dear fellow, you will eat later when you will be hungrier than you are now! And he stretched out to rest, after making an additional knot in Suleim's rope.

El Nahab had not rested very long when he was awakened by Suleim's frantic efforts to free himself and the other horse's attempt to hold him. Through the opening in the cavern was heard Mokur's cry, "Name thy price, El Nahab!" and Suleim had recognised his master's voice.

It raised El Nahab's admiration for the horse. A beautiful animal. Not more beautiful than his own, in line of slimness of legs, but the coat was so much glossier. Suleim was much younger than the other horse. He liked the sensitiveness of the animal and wondered whether his own Kuri would act in the same manner if he were taken by a stranger. When Mokur's voice had died away, and after El Nahab had sent his laughter, turning his voice eastward of the basalt rock, he spoke to Suleim.

"Eat something. There is a long journey ahead of us."

But the horse reared and hoofed, and raised his head high, refusing to touch anything. He wanted his master.

El Nahab understood. "You will forget, Suleim. You will forget."

The following day Suleim's pace was much slower than that of the other horse. Also the gloss of his coat had dimmed. Still he refused food or drink, and turned his head continually in the homeward direction. So weak was he now that El Nahab had to slow up his mount and pull at the rope's end. And at every stop the horse, with head turned homewards, sniffed the air and neighed, and called, whinnied, begged.

"Mokur must be a better man than I thought he was," mused the Devil of the Desert, seeing the great love of the stallion for his master. "Such a man cannot be a coward." Then love for the horse and not cowardice had made him dishonor himself by crying the offer from the tower. What great courage in a man to let himself appear a coward because of his love for a horse!

It was because Suleim was getting slow that the Aga's bullet had been able to reach El Nahab's arm and shatter it at the wrist. When they had finally glided under cover the Devil of the Desert was numb with pain, and grieved over the loss of his best matchlock. For two days and two nights they remained in that cavern. El Nahab was racked with fever and pain. During that time Suleim had hardly touched any food except water and a few dates. The young stallion now looked older than his companion. His coal black, glossy coat had changed to a dirty brown. He was no longer vigorously clamoring for his master. He only lay down, sad and dispirited, without any interest in his new surroundings. Only when the voice of the Aga rolled into the cave did Suleim raise his head to look pleadingly at the man nearby.

"How he loves the stallion!" thought El Nahab, envying Mokur because he loved so intensely he was ready to sacrifice everything to regain his horse. "And how Suleim loves his master!" he thought further. His broken arm, twisted in a tourniquet, hurt and ached as if a thousand sharp needles were pushed into the flesh from within. He had never seen such devotion, such love between master and horse. He admired the quality in the man and the animal. If Mokur were not an Aga they could be the best friends, thought El Nahab.

The wound in his arm was slow in healing. El Nahab did what he knew, yet the arm swelled more and more, and became heavy and useless. He was now compelled to travel only at night, for it was slow moving from one cavern to the next to reach food. Suleim had to be dragged by the other horse. He was even weaker than his wounded captor—wounded as he was himself—and they were getting farther and farther into the desert and away from the Kasnur of Mokur Aga.

Seeing Suleim suffer so pained El Nahab. He had never been moved so much as by the suffering of that stallion. Suleim was dying of a broken heart. And so El Nahab began to think as they lay near one another, the horse and man, both wounded. . . .

One evening, when Suleim had again refused food, El Nahab looked at him. The horse opened his eyes and the Devil of the Desert saw in them a mute prayer.

THREE evenings later, just as Mokur Aga had again called out, "Name thy price, El Nahab! Name thy price!" he heard a faint voice from below.

"Come down, Mokur Aga."

A pale, sickly man leaned against the gate while a horse rubbed his nose against him.

"Suleim," yelled the Aga. The soldiers rushed out. Fifteen guns were pointed at El Nahab's breast. "To your chamber," thundered Mokur. Then he turned his face toward the pale man who was sinking to the ground. Mokur lifted him in his arms and brought him to his room after ordering that Suleim be stabled.

When El Nahab had again opened his eyes the old man stood over him like a father over his son.

"Thou art ill of the wound I have inflicted, El Nahab?"

"It is not as deep as the wound I have inflicted on thee. I realised that when thy horse refused either to eat or drink—and I could not see him die because he loved his master so."

"And thy price, El Nahab, thy price? What is it?"

"Thou art insulting a guest, Mokur Aga," the Devil answered with flashing eyes.

While El Nahab was resting, Mokur sent for Kasmira.

"She is thine. She has offered herself as ransom. I know no braver man to whom I would more willingly lose her."

El Nahab looked at Kasmira, who stood before him with lowered eyes.

"She loves thee as much as Suleim, Mokur Aga, and I am going far into the desert."

Mokur Aga looked at Kasmira, then he withdrew for a little while. When he had returned he said, "If thou art ready, my brother, a horse is saddled for thee. And one for thee also, Kasmira. I shall take thee back to thy home. El Nahab and I will be brothers of the desert."

MEDILL McCORMICK: MAY 16, 1877—FEBRUARY 25, 1925. A grandson of Joseph Medill, he began his career in newspaper work and later became editor of The Chicago Tribune. He married Ruth Hanna, daughter of Mark A. Hanna, in 1903. Long a student of foreign affairs, Medill McCormick was elected to the United States senate from Illinois in 1918. His death came near the conclusion of his term, during which he had a considerable share in keeping the United States out of the league of nations. He left a widow and three children. No longer bathed by the Mouth Glands—your teeth decay

To keep them safe you must restore the normal, protective action of the glands - - -

The usual gritty polishing that makes your teeth so white (and it is often harsh enough to endanger the enamel and your gums), can remove the acids of decay only while you brush.

Five minutes after you stop brushing, the acids collect again on your teeth.

Your white teeth—keep them safe with Pebeco

YOUR mouth, like most people's today, probably has become unsafe for your teeth. Made so by modern food.

This soft cooked food requires so little chewing that, from sheer lack of exercise, your mouth glands slow down. Their alkaline fluids gradually cease bathing your teeth.

And in your dry mouth your teeth are easily eaten by the acids that cause decay.

Ordinary cleaning merely polishes. It cannot hope to save your teeth, dentists now know. The only remedy is to remove the underlying cause of the decay. You must make your mouth normally moist and safe again.

Today it is recognized that there is one successful way to restore the normal action of the mouth glands. You can now protect your teeth naturally and permanently with a tooth paste that gently stimulates the glands.

Pebeco gently stimulates the mouth glands

Pebeco acts directly on the salivary glands. As soon as it enters your mouth it starts a full, normal flow of alkaline saliva.

With constant daily use Pebeco completely restores the natural, protective action of your glands. Their alkaline fluids again bathe your teeth day and night. The acids of decay are neutralized as fast as they form. Pebeco leaves your whole mouth normal and healthy. And in this healthy mouth, your teeth are kept not only white and shining, but safe.

How Famous Movie Stars Keep their Hair Beautiful

Try this quick and simple method which thousands, WHO MAKE BEAUTY A STUDY, now use. See the difference it makes in the appearance of YOUR HAIR.

Note how it gives new life and lustre; how it brings out all the wave and color.

THE attractiveness of even the most beautiful women depends upon the loveliness of their hair.

The hair is a frame or setting upon which the most beautiful, as well as the plainest woman, must depend.

Fortunately, beautiful hair is no longer a matter of luck.

You, too, can have beautiful hair if you shampoo it properly.

Proper shampooing is what makes it soft and silky. It brings out all the real life and lustre, all the natural wave and color and leaves it fresh-looking, glossy and bright.

When your hair is dry, dull and heavy, lifeless, stiff and gummy, and the strands cling together, and it feels harsh and disagreeable to the touch, it is because your hair has not been shampooed properly.

While your hair must have frequent and regular washing to keep it beautiful, it cannot stand the harsh effect of ordinary soaps. The free alkali in ordinary soaps soon dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it.

That is why leading motion picture stars and thousands of discriminating women, everywhere, now use Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo. This clear, pure and entirely greaseless product brings out all the real beauty of the hair and cannot possibly injure. It does not dry the scalp or make the hair brittle, no matter how often you use it.

If you want to see how really beautiful you can make your hair look, just follow this simple method.

A Simple, Easy Method

FIRST, wet the hair and scalp in clear, warm water. Then apply a little Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo.

Two or three teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather. This should be rubbed in thoroughly and briskly with the finger tips, so as to loosen the dandruff and small particles of dust and dirt that stick to the scalp.

After rubbing in the rich, creamy Mulsified lather give the hair a good rinsing. Then use another application of Mulsified, again working up a lather and rubbing it in briskly as before. After the final washing, rinse the hair and scalp in at least two changes of clear, fresh, warm water. This is very important.

Just Notice the Difference

YOU will notice the difference in your hair even before it is dry, for it will be delightfully soft and silky.

After a Mulsified shampoo you will find your hair will dry quickly and evenly and have the appearance of being much thicker and heavier than it really is.

If you want to always be remembered for your beautiful, well-kept hair, make it a rule to set a certain day each week for a Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo. This regular weekly shampooing will keep the scalp soft and the hair fine and silky, bright, fresh-looking and fluffy, wavy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any drug store or toilet goods counter, anywhere in the world. A 4-ounce bottle should last for months.

Splendid for children—fine for men.

Let Me Tell You How I Got Rid of Superfluous Hair

Here's the Method

I am going to tell you about a simple method used at home, with which I removed a heavy, beard-like growth which had resisted every depilatory I had ever tried, and which returned worse than ever even after the use of electricity and a razor.

When you use this simple method yourself you will realize how you can remove even the most persistent growth of superfluous hair and you do it in the privacy of your own room. No expense for beauty treatments. It is harmless and painless.

This method of mine is different from anything you have ever used. It is not a powder, paste, wax or liquid, not a razor, not electricity. It causes no burning or itching and leaves no scars. It removes superfluous hair and makes the skin more attractive.

Thousands of other women who also had despaired of ever being free from superfluous hair have found relief through this method. Letter after letter like the following come to me:

"Your method is the best I have ever used for superfluous hair."

She hated to acknowledge the Corn

So goes the old saying. And few indeed, like to confess a corn. It seems such an undainty thing—an admission of physical untidiness. One may conceal the presence of a corn, but not its ill-effect. It shows itself in the face—and the humor.

That twinge in the toe means a frown on the forehead—and a thorn in the disposition. But how foolish to carry a secret sorrow in your shoe! You can end the pain in ten seconds—and the corn in two days—with a pleasant Blue-jay plaster.

Blue-jay is the efficient way to rout a corn. It leaves nothing to your guesswork. You do not have to decide how much or how little to put on. Each plaster is a complete treatment, with just the right amount of the magic medication to end the corn. Simply put on the plaster—it does the rest.

"AFTER A SEVERE ILLNESS last winter due to over-work and faulty elimination, I began taking Fleischmann's Yeast cakes twice daily. In two weeks' time marked improvement was noticed. Daily evacuations were established, and life took on a rosier hue. Steady improvement continued and I feel that I owe much of my splendid physical condition now to Fleischmann's Yeast. I have outlined a course in Yeast for several of my students, and in every instance the desired result—overcoming constipation—has been obtained." (Miss Celia E. Brian, R. N., Brattleboro, Vt.)

"COMING FROM THE SCHOOLROOM in June, a tired-out teacher, I was given an opportunity to do some very interesting work for several months. I felt unable physically to meet the situation, but wanting the experience very much, I plunged in.

"I began taking a cake of Fleischmann's Yeast daily, then three cakes.

"In two weeks' time I felt less tired; and now at the end of four months' hard work—work that involved contact with many people daily—my tired-out feeling has vanished, my complexion looks as it did when I was sixteen, and my constipation, that arch enemy of indoor people, is a thing of the past."

(Miss Caroline Barr, Chicago, Ill.

Do You Envy the Health of Others?

Read these remarkable statements of what one simple food can do

NOT a "cure-all," not a medicine in any sense—Fleischmann's Yeast is simply a remarkable fresh food.

The millions of tiny active yeast plants in every cake invigorate the whole system. They aid digestion—clear the skin—banish the poisons of constipation. Where cathartics give only temporary relief, yeast strengthens the intestinal muscles and makes them healthy and active. And day by day it releases new stores of energy.

Eat two or three cakes a day before meals: on crackers—in fruit juices or milk—or just plain. For constipation, especially, dissolve one cake in hot water (not scalding) night and morning. Buy several cakes at a time—they will keep fresh in a cool dry place for two or three days. All grocers have Fleischmann's Yeast. Start eating it today!

And let us send you a free copy of our latest booklet on Yeast for Health: Health Research Dept. 684, The Fleischmann Company, 701 Washington Street, New York.

"AFTER SIX MONTHS ON BROADWAY in 'Kid Boots' I was tired out; couldn't sleep well; every part of me just ached. I began to fear for my health. A friend suggested Fleischmann's Yeast. My doctor said 'Try it.' I did . . . Improvement was steady. Best of all, sleep was restored. Fleischmann's Yeast is part of my daily diet now—like milk."

(Eddie Cantor, New York City)

(LEFT)

"I AM AN EX-BRITISH NAVAL MAN and have lived in Canada eighteen years. Soon after my arrival I commenced to suffer from indigestion and as I travelled for a fur company attributed my complaint to the inferior food at the small hotels on the branch lines in the West. For days I drank water only or soup and became so irritable was a source of annoyance to all whom I came in contact with. Having tried almost every drug advertised for indigestion commenced taking your now famous yeast cakes three daily. Result: No indigestion—three square meals a day, splendid appetite, and feeling as fit as a fiddle strung to concert pitch."

(Reginald J. Seymour, Edmonton, Alberta)

"AS OWNER AND MANAGER OF A BEAUTY SALON, I come in daily contact with all manner of skin disorders. I unhesitatingly recommend Fleischmann's Yeast. About five years ago I was generally run down and unable to work. I was suffering from chronic constipation, indigestion, loss of vitality, and skin eruptions. I began taking Fleischmann's Yeast, three cakes a day. At the end of two months all skin eruptions had disappeared, and as if by magic I found all other troubles disappearing also. At the end of three months I was well and back at work."

(Miss Katherine Fitzgibbon, Denver, Colo.)

THE LEADING LADY

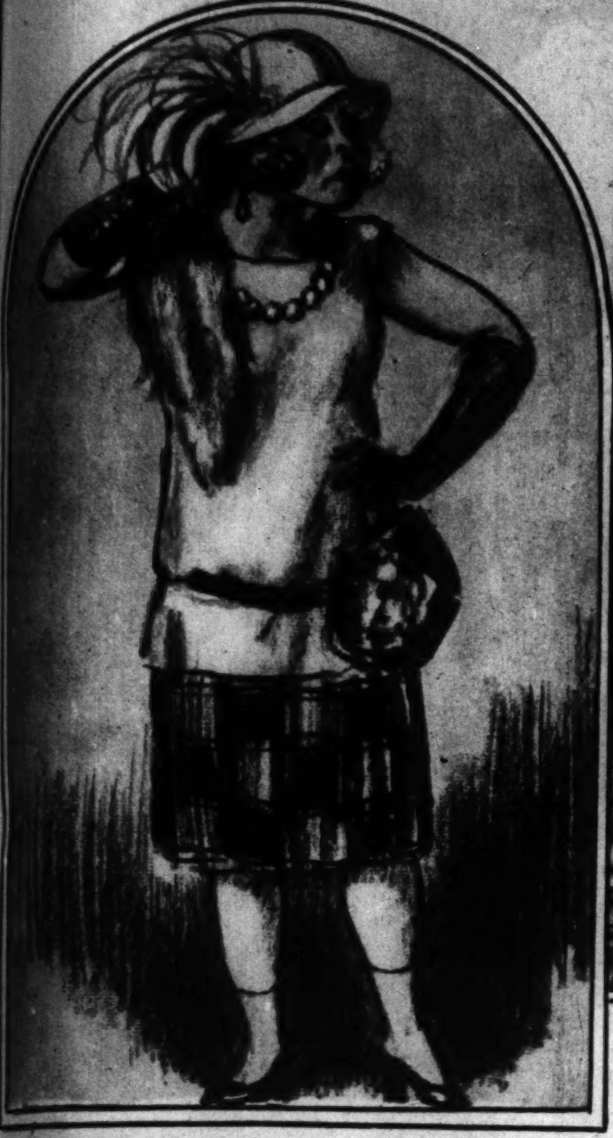
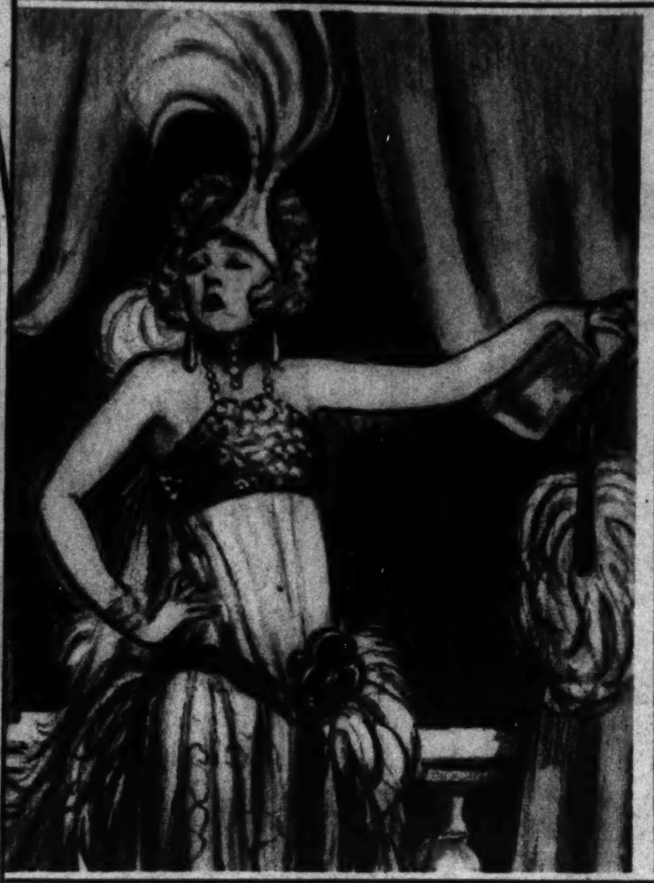
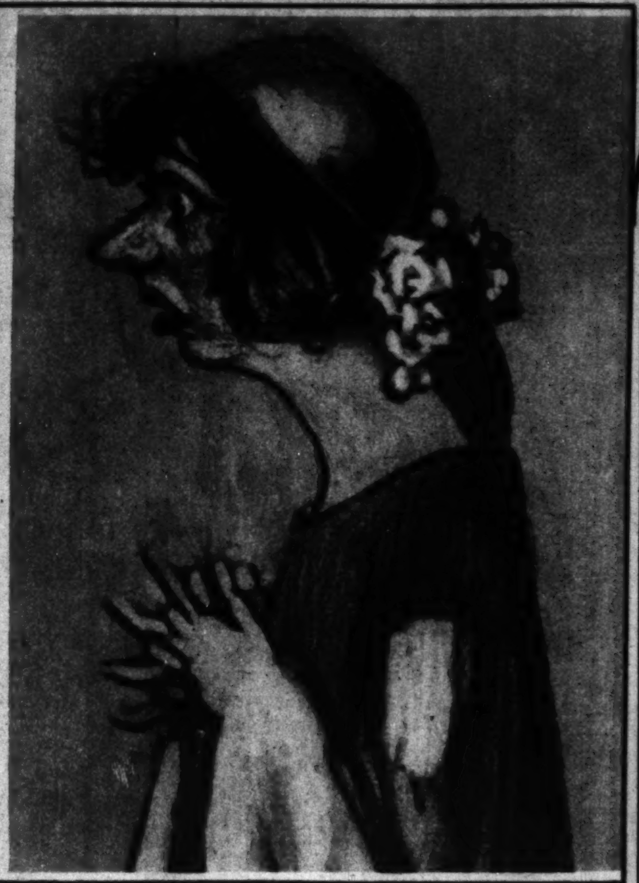
By W. E. HILL



This is known as a fat part, and leading ladies will lie, cheat, steal and commit murder to get it. One of those strong plays, it is, about a girl who went to the bad and showed up all the rottenness of the good people in the play. (Lots of red light district, and cussing, but she gets married in the end, so it's all right).

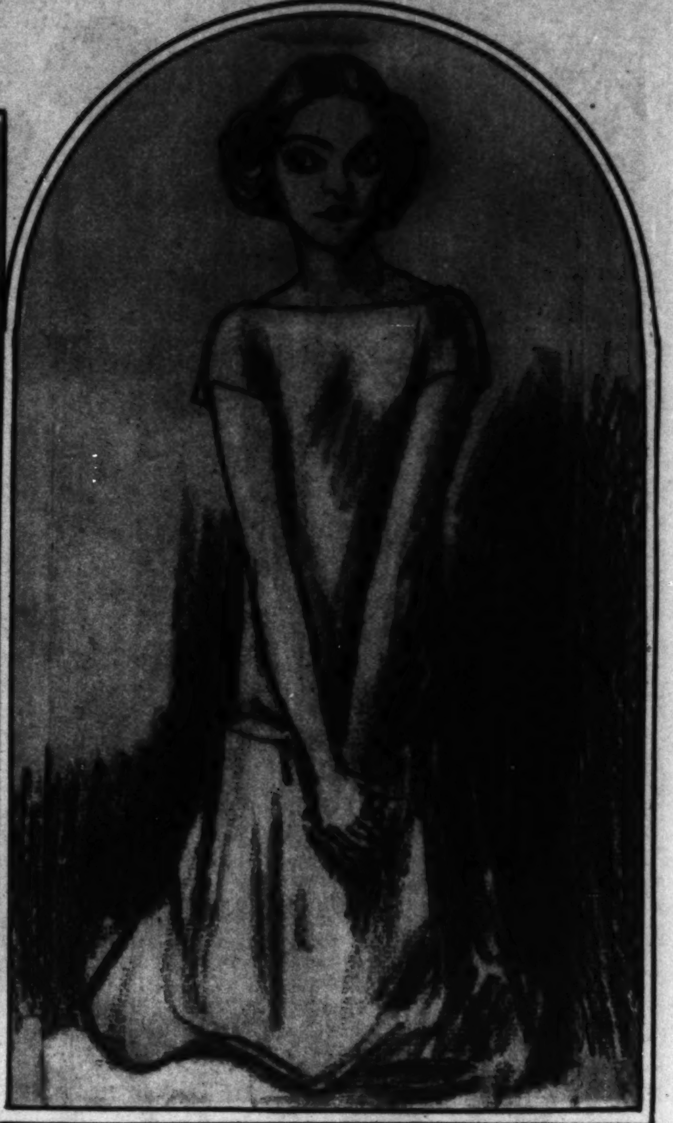


And here we have none other than Gladys Goudy, a leading lady of the "fillums," all fixed up for the role of Lady Dedlock in Mr. Dicken's "Bleak House." Or is it Little Dorrit? Maybe Gladys can tell us.

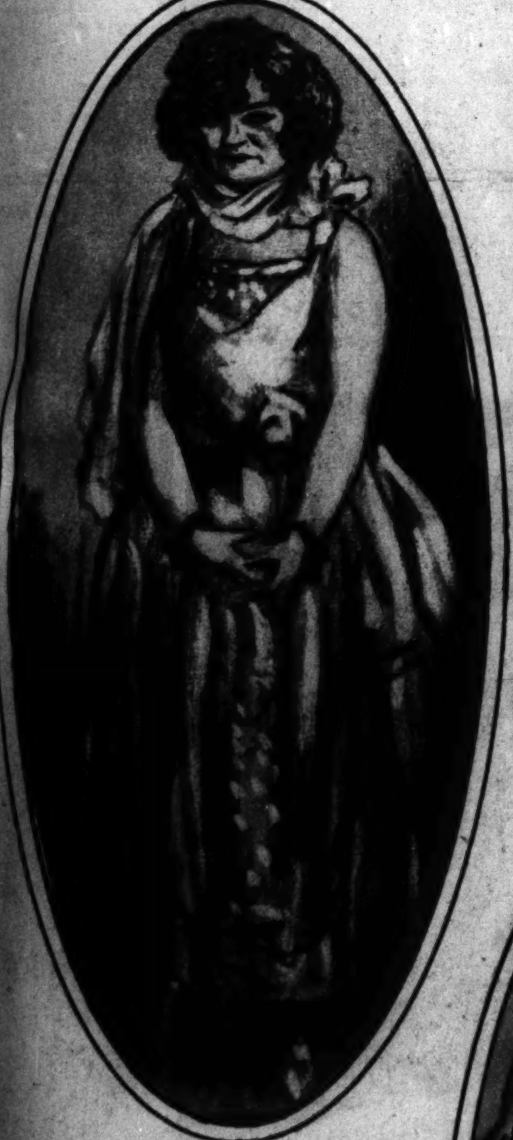


"O, Romeo, wherefore art thou, Romeo?" says the leading lady of the Little Art theater group, in their production of Mr. Shakespeare's play.

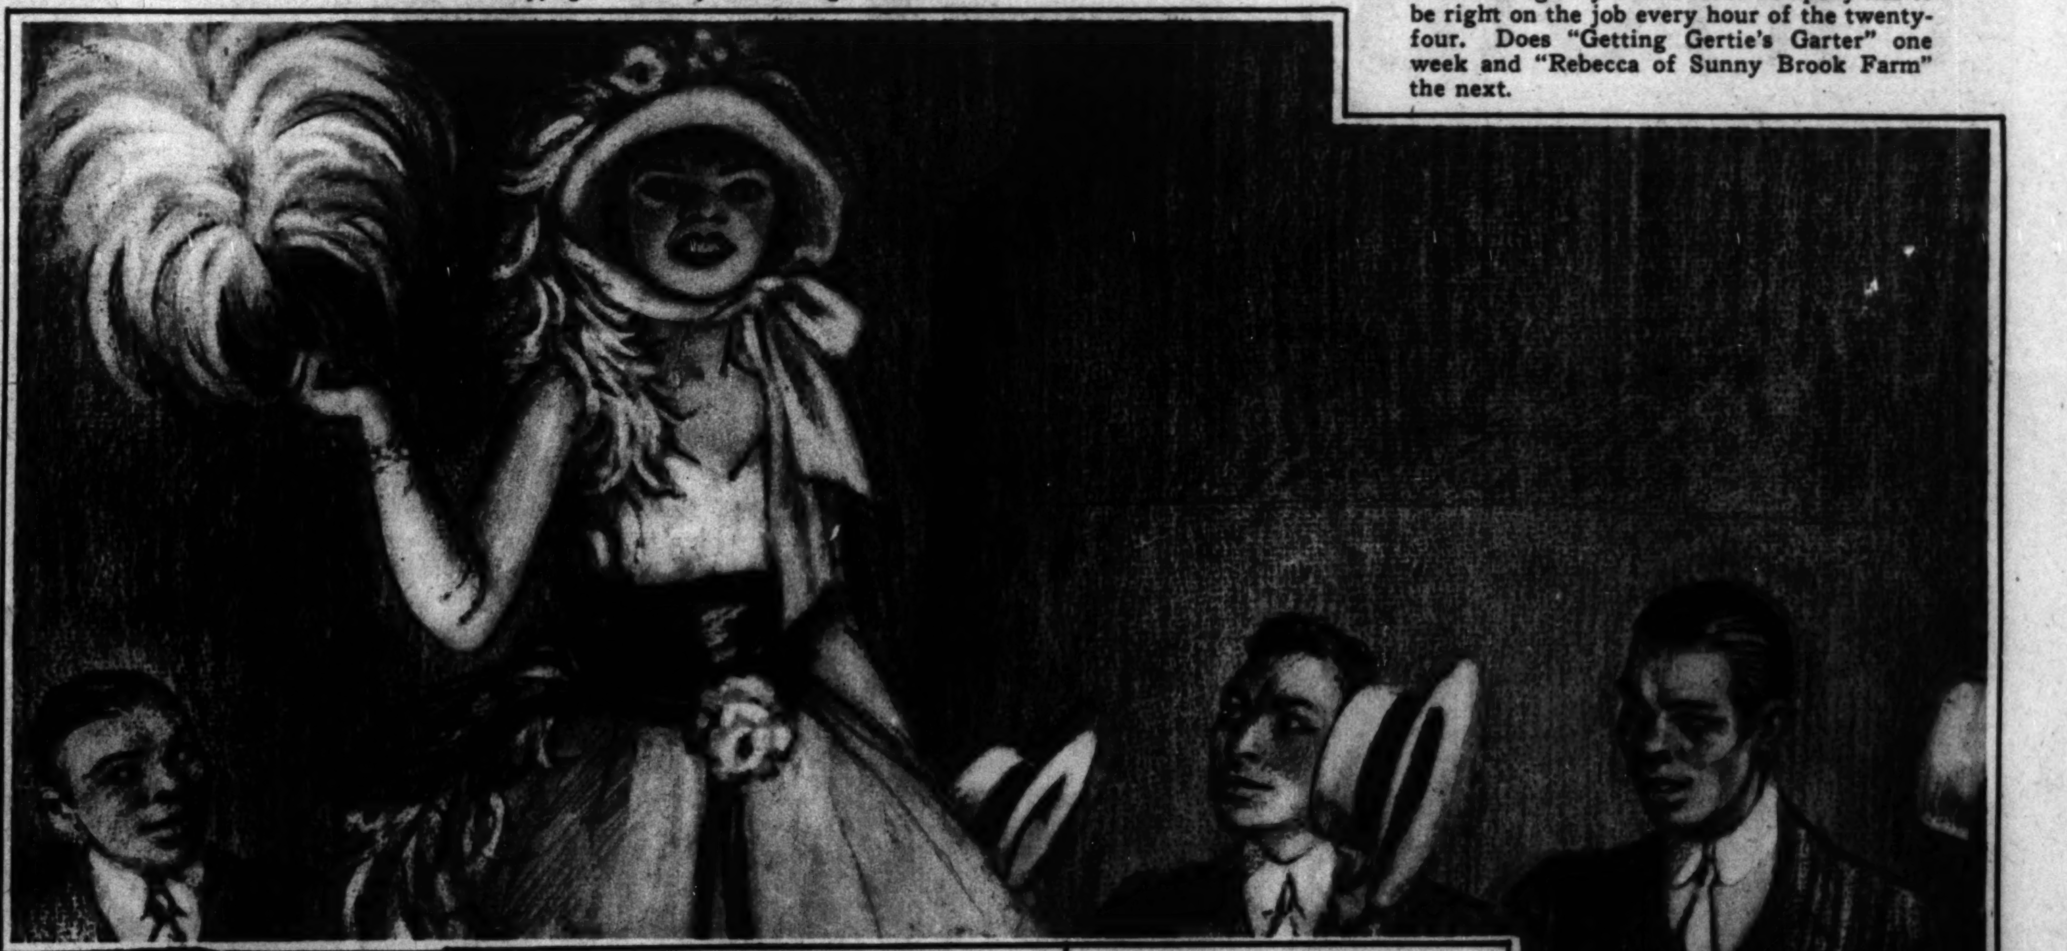
Copyright: 1925: by The Chicago Tribune



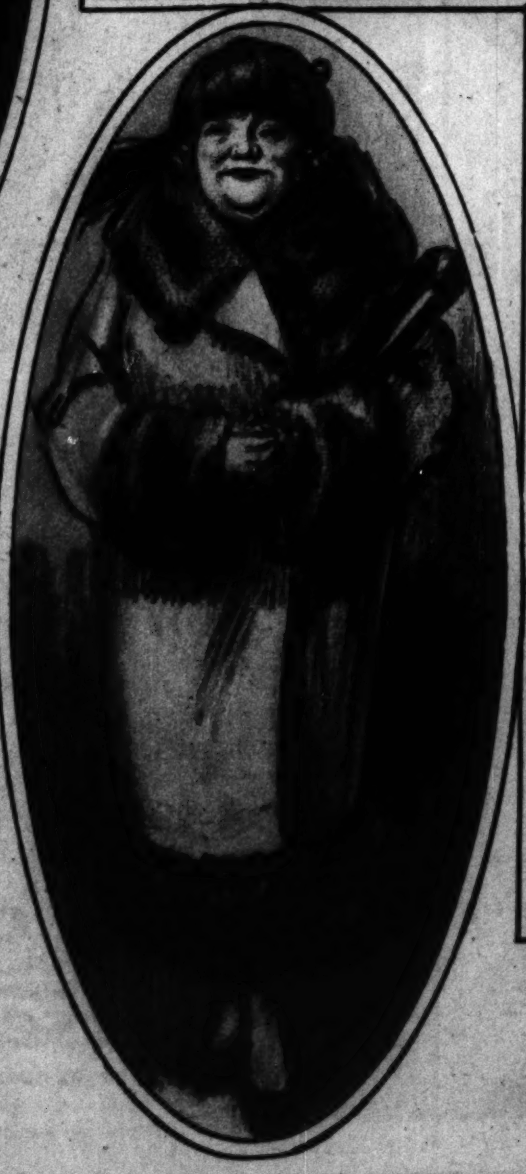
The leading lady of the stock company has to be right on the job every hour of the twenty-four. Does "Getting Gertie's Garter" one week and "Rebecca of Sunny Brook Farm" the next.



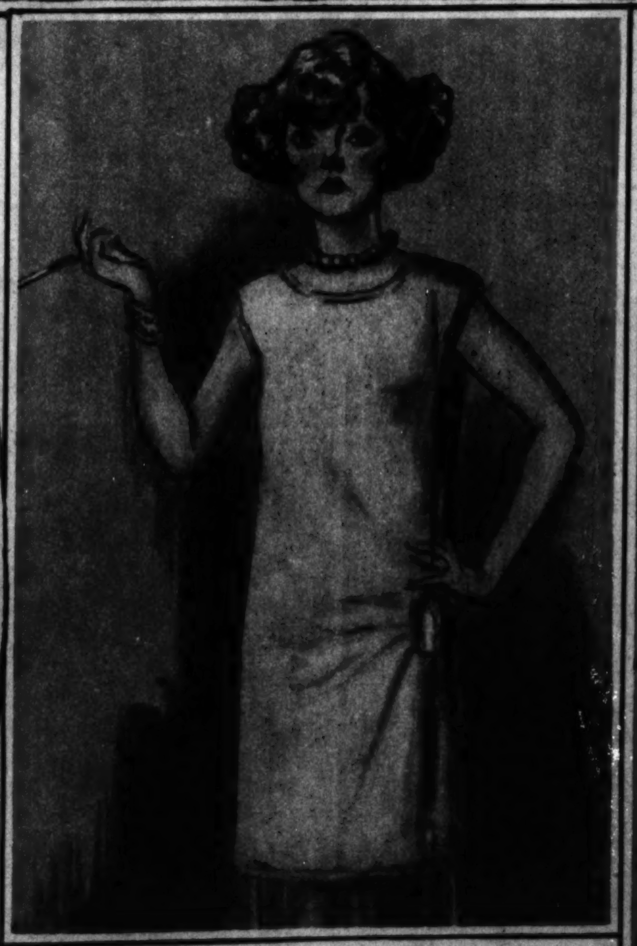
The not so young leading lady is hanging on bravely. She is partial to those plays wherein is depicted a conflict between the younger and the older generation. She plays the mother, and in the third act she fixes up young, smokes and swears and drinks absinthe cocktails like the young ones—but just to show them how silly it all is. After she has stayed out all night with three of her daughter's suitors, the younger generation promises to reform. Curtain.



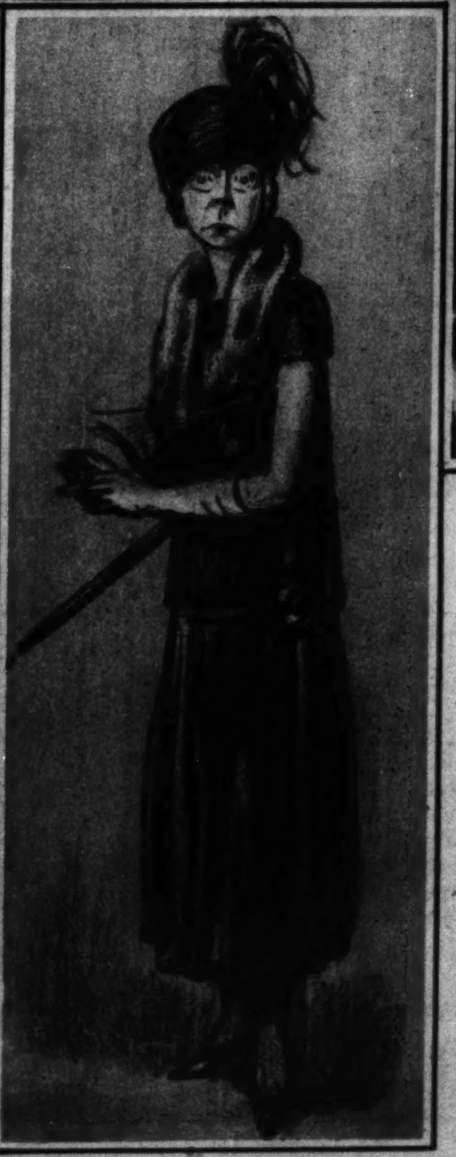
The leading lady of the colored revue is very dressy. "Boy, you can't get ahead of them high yella's!"



The operatic leading lady on her way to rehearsal is cheery this morning, and well she may be. She has thought of a splendid way to put the rival soprano off key in "Walkure."



She plays what is known in the profession as the ingenue lead, you know, those modern flappers of the Westchester social set, who are always saying, "Top hole, old thing," and being awfully, awfully society. The younger set ingenue makes one wish the younger set would hurry and grow up.



Meet the unsuccessful lady playwright, who is always suing the leading lady or her management because they stole her plot.

Answers to Puzzles Will Be Published Next Sunday.

Here are three of the prize puzzles for which $25 has been awarded. If you have an original puzzle, send it in to Cross Word Puzzles, Chicago Tribune. THE TRIBUNE will pay $25 for each one accepted.

Make your designs neat and attractive, your definitions accurate, and keep out foreign and tricky words. Do not fill in your design, but on a separate sheet of paper have your words and definitions in parallel columns. No puzzles will be returned. If you value your puzzle, save a copy.

A MAN-MADE CATARACT poured into Boston harbor recently when Boston's fire fighters tested their high pressure system. Twelve huge hose shot forth twelve tremendous mountains of water which rose in splendid arches and fell with the roar of a young Niagara, whipping the harbor into a seething, boiling whirlpool.

GRANDDAD AND BABY OF CONGRESS say good-by as the Nestor of the House quits Washington for private life. Gen. Isaac R. Sherwood went to congress from Toledo, Ohio, in 1873, served one term, then went back in 1907 and stayed there until last Wednesday. Representative Clarence J. McLeod of Detroit, only 29 years old now, was elected first in 1921, probably the youngest man ever sent to the national house. He is a Republican, and a veteran of the world war.

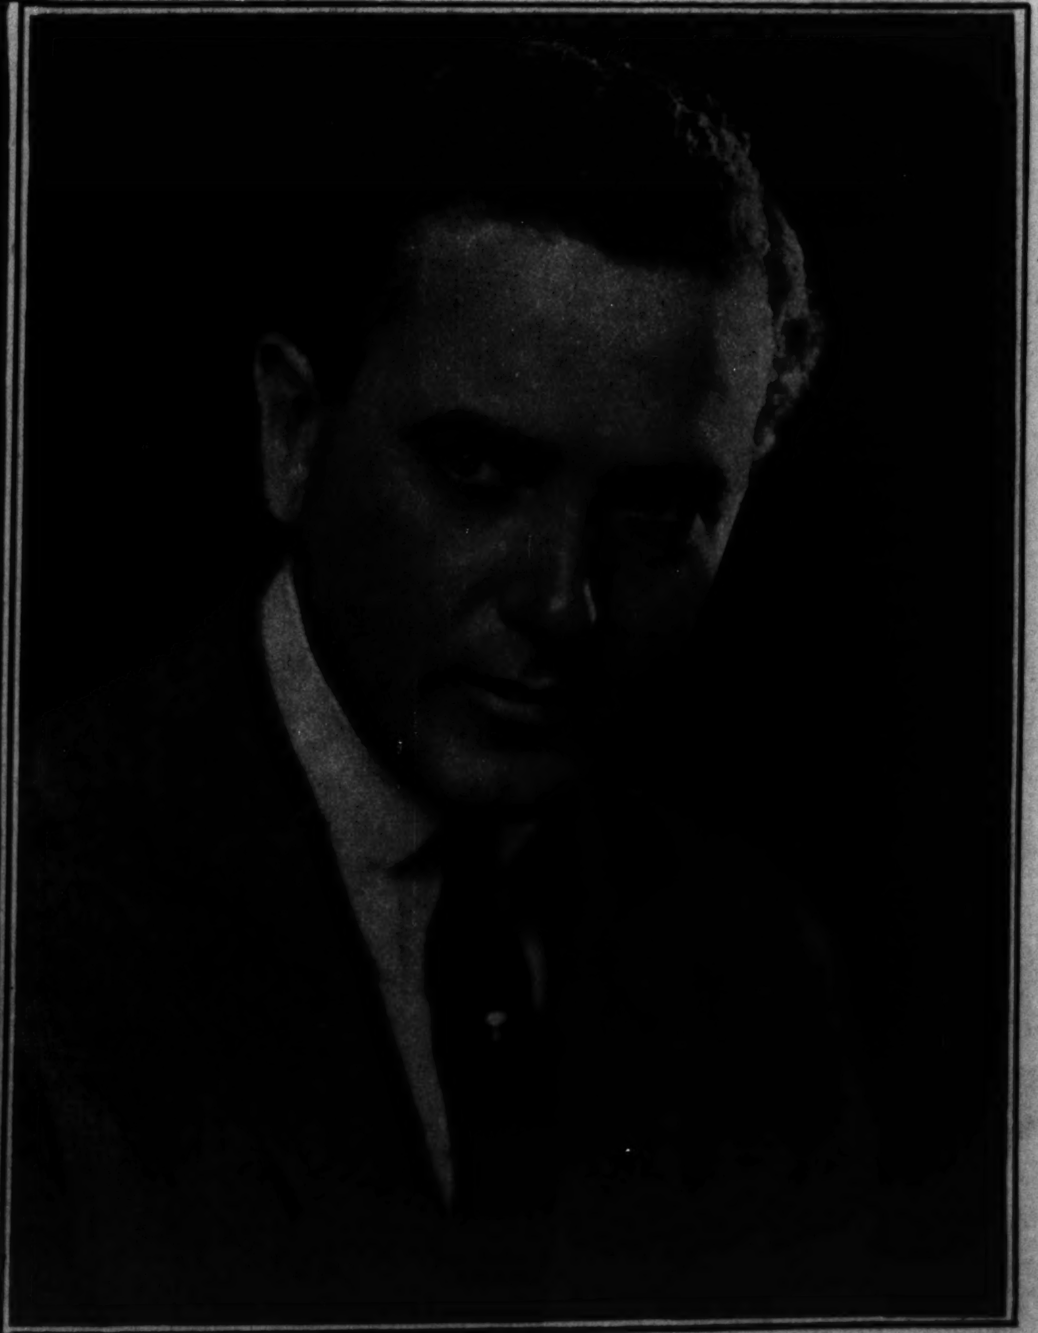
BEN HUR IN QUEST OF FOOD! In other words, Mr. Ramon Novarro, who's been overseas making "Ben Hur," snapped in front of the Cafe de Paris at Monte Carlo. This picture was taken while Mr. Novarro was enjoying a vacation after seven months' strenuous work on the aforementioned production.

HERE'S THE ANSWER to the question people have been asking, "Wonder what's become of Alice Lake?" She spent some time resting but is now free-lancing and is to be seen in two new productions—Whitman Bennett's "The Lost Chord" and Howard Estabrook's "The Fast Pace." Welcome back!

"FRECKLES"—Wesley Barry has been making a picture in Chicago called "My Home Town." He's a busy boy all the time. When he's not acting he's making speeches, meeting mayors, etc. A secret—he's outgrowing his freckles! Wouldn't we shriek if he grows up a sheik!

LOUISE FAZENDA

FELIX, THE CAT, is Louise Fazenda's favorite funny. The other day when Puss' creator, Pat Sullivan, dropped in to call with Mrs. Pat, Miss Fazenda humbly requested that a portrait of Felix be painted by the cartoonist on her portable dressing table. "Shure," said Pat, "I'll paint the cat—!" And that is that.



THAT DISAPPEARING QUANTITY, Herbert Rawlinson, is due to reappear in a Universal picture called "The Man in Blue." Looks pretty spiffy here, doesn't he?

What the most beautiful Queen in Europe says about the care of the skin

No woman is so highly placed that she can afford to neglect her beauty. Personal appearance is vital to her success—she cannot allow the usual marks of fatigue or exposure to show in her face. I believe that her beauty can be thoroughly guarded by a daily use of Pond's Two Creams."

Marie
Queen of Roumania

POINT to another woman in the world today whose beauty, power and vibrant personality are equal to those of Marie, Queen of Roumania! "A tall, majestic figure, hair of red-gold, a round white throat, flashing violet eyes and long lashes sweeping demurely the rose-leaf of her lovely cheeks." One who knows her well describes her thus.

Granddaughter of Queen Victoria, cousin to the King of England, to the Queen of Spain and to the late Czar Nicholas of Russia, she has lived from birth in the midst of the great affairs of Europe.

At sixteen she became the bride of the fortunate heir to the Roumanian throne and entered upon the vivid, flashing life of the Balkans.

Today no queen in Europe has such influence in state and international affairs.

Queen Marie matches the prestige of her position with the magnetism of her personality to achieve victories in state-craft for Roumania that astonish nations many times its size.

For herself, she adores excitement, adventure and romance, is an accomplished horsewoman and drives her own car. But she endears herself to the poor of her country by forever giving to their needs.

The Secrets of Her Success

EVEN after her twenty-nine thrilling years in Roumania, Queen Marie is still extraordinarily beautiful.

When she wears the national dress and mingles with the simple peasant folk she is just as lovely as when she wears her gorgeous robes of state and her magnificent crown jewels. She is known as the queenliest queen in Europe just as her daughters were called the prettiest princesses—before they married kings.

A womanly woman as well as a queen—and one to whom many things have come because of her own beauty—Queen Marie feels that "No woman is so highly placed that she can afford to neglect her beauty. Personal appearance is vital to her success—she cannot allow the usual marks of fatigue or exposure to show in her face."

More and more, women are realizing that the woman who is careless of her personal appearance is practically never a success. Yet a few thoughtfully chosen toilet preparations and regular care every day are all one needs to keep the skin fresh, clear and youthful.

"No Woman can Afford to Neglect her Beauty"

YEARS ago one manufacturer devoted his laboratories to perfecting the two creams that answer the vital needs of the skin. Today the Pond's method of cleansing and protecting the skin is used everywhere by women who, because of their high position or social prominence, tax their skins the most and yet must keep them loveliest.

Every day—

and especially after any exposure, the thorough cleansing that keeps the skin clear and fresh. For this use Pond's Cold Cream.

With the tips of your fingers or a piece of moistened cotton, smooth a generous quantity on your face and neck. The pure cream works deeply into the pores, cleansing them of all impurities. Wipe the cream off with a soft cloth. It will bring with it the excess oil, the powder, the dust and dirt your skin has been collecting all day. Repeat the process.

Now notice how fresh and clear your skin feels—and looks—how smooth and relaxed. And, above all, how youthful. Finish by dashing your face with cold water or rubbing it with a piece of ice.

If your skin is very dry, use Pond's Cold Cream at night, too, patting it in around the corners of your eyes and mouth, where—unless you are wary—wrinkles will begin to form. Let it stay on until morning—you will find the little lines have vanished.

And then—

to protect your skin and as a foundation for powder, use Pond's Vanishing Cream, light, greaseless, and deliciously refreshing.

Smooth in just a light film, enough for your skin to absorb. Now notice the limpid freshness of your skin; how soft and smooth it is to the touch, how captivatingly lovely to the eye. The delicate Vanishing Cream protects your skin, keeping it fresh and untired. No amount of wind or sun will roughen it.

After you have smoothed in the Vanishing Cream, you are ready to rouge and powder. And you will be delighted with the smoothness with which they go on and blend—and stay—for hours!

Give your own Skin this Famous Care

MOST skins need a Pond's cleansing only once a day, but after exposure of any kind, such as a dusty train trip or a long motor ride, you will find there is nothing more refreshing or relaxing to your skin than a cleansing with Pond's Cold Cream.

Finish up, as always, with Pond's Vanishing Cream. It gives you just that last touch of brilliancy and smoothness that—to be absolutely perfect—your complexion requires before you powder!

Take care of your lovely skin. Begin today to follow the method the beautiful Queen of Roumania so heartily commends. Your beauty like hers, can be, as she says, "thoroughly guarded by a daily use of Pond's Two Creams." Buy your own Pond's Creams in jars or tubes and use them faithfully every day. You will be enchanted to see how quickly your skin looks fresher, more youthful—with a freshness and youthfulness you can keep. The Pond's Extract Company.

HER MAJESTY, MARIE, QUEEN OF ROUMANIA

A recent portrait by Philip A. de Laszlo, eminent European artist. Queen Marie, a writer of distinction, has done much to foster the Roumanian national arts. She is called "the mother-in-law of the Balkans," having married her two eldest daughters to the Kings of Greece and Jugoslavia. To the right, as she looks when she wears the picturesque Roumanian peasant costume.
